

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

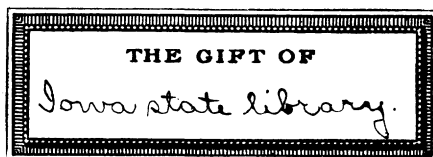

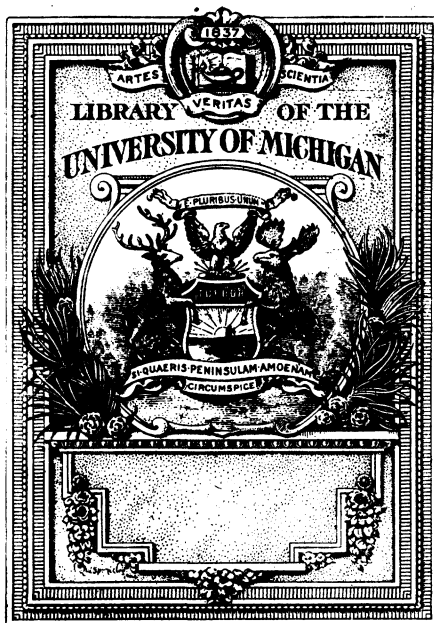

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

INTRODUCTION

This work has been compiled in accordance with the provisions of the following act of the Thirty-second General Assembly:

CHAPTER 223.

ROSTER OF IOWA SOLDIERS, SAILORS AND MARINES.

H. F. 79.

AN ACT providing for the compilation of a roster of Iowa soldiers, sailors and marines in the war with Mexico and the War of the Rebellion, the Spanish-American and Philippine wars, including military service in the Spirit Lake expedition, and other service against the Indians; providing the manner of its publication, distribution and sale and making an appropriation therefor.

Be it Enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Iowa:

Section 1. That the Governor, Attorney General, Adjutant General, Curator of the Historical Department of Iowa, and one soldier of the Civil War whose selection shall be made and certified to the Governor by the Commander of the Department of Iowa, Grand Army of the Republic, who shall thereupon be commissioned by the Governor, which member so selected shall receive the same compensation as that now paid to the trustees of educational institutions for the time actually and necessarily employed, shall constitute a board authorized to prepare in form for publication a complete roster of all Iowa soldiers, sailors and marines of the war with Mexico, the War of the Rebellion, and the Spanish-American and Philippine wars, including the military service of soldiers engaged in the Spirit Lake Expedition and other service against the Indians, and State troops rendering active service during the War of the Rebellion.

Section 2. Said compilation shall contain the main item of record of each officer and soldier, and of each organization, so far as the same is obtainable from the records in the Adjutant General's office, in the War Department in Washington, in the official records of the Union Armies, and from other official and reliable sources. It shall include brief historical sketches of the organization, service and engagements of all Iowa regiments, and other Iowa organizations, with summaries of casualties, list of soldiers confined in Confederate prisons, and those buried in National Cemeteries.

Section 3. Said compilation shall be under the direction of the Adjutant General, and the sum of seven thousand five hundred dollars ($7,500) or so much thereof as may be necessary is hereby appropriated from any moneys, not otherwise appropriated, in the treasury of the State, for the employment of extra help and other necessary expense in making said compilation. The compilation shall be divided into volumes of proper size and shall be printed by the State printer, shall be bound by the State binder in half sheep, and paid for as other public documents. The edition shall be ten thousand of each volume and shall be disposed of as follows: Twelve sets to the State library, twelve sets to the historical library, six sets to the State Historical Society, one set to each public library in the State and one set to each Grand Army Post in the State and one set to each Camp of Spanish war veterans. The foregoing sets shall be distributed free; all other sets and volumes shall be sold by the Adjutant General at actual cost, to be determined by the Executive Council, and the proceeds paid into the State treasury. An itemized account shall be kept and vouchers filed to be audited by the Executive Council and warrants drawn by the State Auditor to pay expenses provided for in this act.

Section 4. This act being deemed of immediate importance shall take effect and be in force from and after its publication in the Register and Leader and the Des Moines Capital, daily newspapers published in the City of Des Moines, Polk County, Iowa.

Approved April 10, A. D. 1907.

In compliance with the requirement contained in section 1 of the act, Col. Geo. W. Crosley was selected as the Civil War soldier member of the board, which was then constituted as follows: Albert B. Cummins, Governor; H. W. Byers, Attorney General; W. H. Thrift, Adjutant General; Charles Aldrich, Curator of the Historical Department, and Col. Geo. W. Crosley.

On the 25th day of May, 1907, the board met in the office of the Governor, and organized by electing Governor Albert B. Cummins, chairman, and Col. Geo. W. Crosley, secretary. The secretary was instructed to supervise the work of compilation—under the direction of the Adjutant General—and these two members were requested to formulate plans for the work and, when such plans were completed, to submit same for the consideration of the board. It was declared to be the earnest purpose of the board to have the work prosecuted with energy, and, with this purpose in view, the preliminary work of investigation was promptly begun.

On June 5th, the general plan of the work was submitted, and adopted by the board. With some modifications and changes, the plan has been carried out as shown in these volumes.

It has been a difficult task to condense the history of the different organizations into what could be fairly considered "a brief historical sketch," as prescribed in the act. History has never dealt, and perhaps never will be able to deal, in the most satisfactory manner, with all those whose achievements go to make up history, even where there are no limitations as to time and space. In the preparation of these sketches, the compiler has confined himself exclusively to the facts as shown by the military records, and to his own personal knowledge of the conditions that pertained to the common experience of the volunteer soldiers of the War of the Rebellion, a knowledge gained by experience as a soldier in active service from the commencement to the close of that war. He could at best point out only the most conspicuous figures and events as contained in the official reports. Only a few of the names of the gallant officers and men whose acts of bravery entitled them to special mention are contained in these reports. In the long period of service which the greater number of these Iowa organizations rendered, they were engaged in so many important expeditions, campaigns and battles, that but few could be described in detail, and none with that particularity of detail which would do them full justice. The brief paragraph opposite the name of each soldier, which follows the history of the organization to which he belonged, is also compiled from the official records. It shows only the leading features of his service. It does not and can not be made to show in detail the service he performed, or what he endured and suffered, and, notwithstanding the careful research of the official records, there will no doubt be some few cases in which even this brief paragraph will be found, either in part or as a whole, incorrect. In all such cases, the injustice to the soldier is due to the official records, and not to carelessness or neglect on the part of those who prepared these revised rosters. General N. B. Baker, who was the Adjutant General of Iowa during, and for a number of years after, the War of the Rebellion, and who was a man of great ability, had the wisdom and foresight to require of the Iowa officers copies of their official reports and returns for preservation in his office, in order that the military record of each organization might be preserved for all time. For this purpose blanks were prepared and sent to the commanding officers of Iowa regiments in the field, upon which to make copies of all their reports and returns. To add emphasis to this requirement, and as an evidence of appreciation of the importance of compliance with it, the Tenth General Assembly of the State of Iowa adopted the following concurrent resolution:

Resolved, by the House of Representatives, the Senate concurring, that the Colonels of Iowa regiments engaged in the service of their country, be respectfully requested to furnish the Adjutant General of the State, at their earliest convenience, with a brief history of their respective regiments, showing what they have accomplished and endured, not only on the battlefield, but upon the march and in camp, with a view that the information thus obtained may hereafter be embodied into a permanent history and monument of the patriotism, the heroism, and achievements of the soldiers of Iowa.

Resolved, that the Adjutant General be requested to communicate the above resolution to the Colonels of all Iowa regiments.

JACOB BUTLER,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

ENOCH W. EASTMAN,
President of the Senate.

Approved February 23, 1864.

WILLIAM M. STONE,
Governor.

There seems to have been a general disposition to comply with these requests, but, in the exigencies of war, some of these reports and returns were lost in transmission, some were captured by the enemy, and, at the close of the war, the records of the office of the Adjutant General were still, in many respects, in a very incomplete and unsatisfactory condition. General Baker made every effort to remedy these defects by appealing to the officers, who had returned to their homes, to supply the information that would enable him to complete the records. The information thus obtained was not complete, because of the fact that it was mostly given from memory. A part of these incomplete records have been corrected by information obtained from the War Department in Washington and from surviving Iowa soldiers. It is greatly to be regretted that this work of revision was not undertaken at an earlier date, when a larger number of the surviving soldiers of the war were still living. After the lapse of nearly half a century, it is difficult for most men to remember with accuracy events that did not make the most lasting impression upon their minds. They can remember the most important events distinctly, but, when it comes to recalling the personal record of comrades in their company or regiment, it is only of those with whom their relations were most intimate that they can give positive information. There was now and then a soldier who kept a daily diary in which he recorded the principal events that occurred during his term of service. The compiler has personal knowledge of only one such private record that covered a period of three years' continuous service in the field. Could all the records of this kind which have been preserved have been collected, they would no doubt have been of great value in compiling a work of this character.

The errors and omissions which may occur in these revised rosters must therefore be accounted for by the causes before mentioned. In many instances the only record obtainable is the name, age, date of enlistment, residence, date of muster into the service of the United States, and the date of discharge or muster out of the soldier. In such cases, particularly where the soldier served for the full term of his regiment and was mustered out with it, the inference is that his history is identical with that of his regiment. He may have participated in every battle in which his regiment was engaged, but, as only the names of those who were killed, wounded, captured, or missing in action, or those who were favored by special mention, appear in the official reports, his name would not appear as a participant. The men who had the good fortune to go through their entire term of service without sustaining any serious injury, and who were also so fortunate as to have escaped being the victim of some form of sickness, have no record—as a rule—except that of continuous service; but such a record is remarkable, and certainly most commendable.

Col. George H. Turner, who compiled the record of service of Michigan Volunteers in the War of the Rebellion, in his introductory refers to the class of soldiers above alluded to, and also to those reported as missing in action, in the following forceful and truthful statement:

It scarcely occurred to the officers who made their official returns to the different departments that forty years after the conflict an individual history of each soldier who participated would be written. * * * The hardships of a campaign, the duties exacted night and day, the constant attention to matters of vital importance, are not conducive to literary efforts of biography or general history. It is pathetic to know that thousands upon thousands of Union soldiers who participated in many of the most desperate battles of the Civil War have no records of such battles to their credit in the official reports. A limited number were fortunate enough to have their names recorded by their officers as participating in such engagements.

It was sometimes impossible in the stirring times of war for commanding officers to give authentic and final history of men who disappeared in a great battle, as in many cases the bodies of the dead could not be found, and if possession of the field was yielded to the enemy, the fate of those who were made prisoners of war could only, if ever, be learned through unreliable Confederate sources.

For such heroes who died for their country and who sleep in nameless graves, their epitaph is inscribed in this history as "missing in action." A more honorable or heroic epitaph could not be penned.

It will thus be seen that the same difficulties encountered in the compilation of this work existed elsewhere. In fact, the same conditions prevailed in all the states, and it may be safely assumed that the record of personal service of Iowa soldiers recorded in these volumes is as nearly correct and complete as that published by any other state. The total enrollment, together with the Summary of Casualties which follows the Historical Sketch of each regiment, has been carefully compiled from the records, and demonstrates more clearly than language could describe the tremendous sacrifice of life, and the untold suffering endured by these brave sons of Iowa. The State has honored itself in thus endeavoring to do justice to their memory.

Volumes I. and II. of this work, containing the historical sketches and revised rosters of the First to the Sixteenth Regiments of Infantry, inclusive, had been published prior to the commencement of the session of the Thirty-third General Assembly, which made provision for the continuation and completion of the compilation, by the adoption of the following Act:

CHAPTER 248.

ROSTER OF IOWA SOLDIERS, SAILORS AND MARINES.

H. F. 171.

AN ACT providing for the completion and distribution of the roster of Iowa soldiers, sailors and marines as provided by chapter two hundred twenty-three (223), laws of the Thirty-second General Assembly, fixing number of volumes, and making an additional appropriation therefor.

Be it Enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Iowa:

Section 1. Appropriation—how drawn. That the sum of ten thousand ($10,000.00) dollars or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated from any moneys, not otherwise appropriated, in the treasury of the State, for the employment of the extra help and other necessary expense to complete the compilation of the roster and record of Iowa soldiers, sailors and marines provided by chapter two hundred twenty-three (223), laws of the Thirty-second General Assembly, and the same shall be drawn and expended as provided for in section three (3) of said chapter.

Section 2. Number printed and bound—distribution. The edition of each volume hereafter printed shall be three thousand, instead of ten thousand, as provided by said chapter. Two thousand of each edition shall be bound in half sheep and the remainder shall be stitched and stored for future use and so bound whenever required for sale or distribution. One hundred sets of said rosters and record shall be placed in the hands of the Adjutant General and one hundred sets in the State library, for exchange with libraries of other states, the War Department Library, and the Librarian of Congress and such other institutions of other states as have extended or may hereafter extend courtesies of like character to this State; one set shall be issued to each Camp of the Union Veteran's Legion, located in the State of Iowa; the remainder of the edition shall be disposed of as provided in section three of the aforesaid chapter, except as said section is modified by the provisions of this act.

Section 3. In effect. This act being deemed of immediate importance shall be in force from and after its publication in the Register and Leader and Des Moines Capital, newspapers published at Des Moines, Iowa.

Approved March 12, A. D. 1909.

The work of compilation had been discontinued on December 1, 1908, on account of exhaustion of the appropriation, and was resumed on March 17, 1909, when the new appropriation became available.

The following Legislative Act of the Thirty-fourth General Assembly of the State of Iowa explains itself:

CHAPTER 202.

ROSTER OF IOWA SOLDIERS, SAILORS AND MARINES.

S. F. 45.

AN ACT providing for the completion and distribution of the roster of Iowa soldiers, sailors and marines as provided for by chapter two hundred twenty-three (223) acts of the thirty-second general assembly, and by chapter two hundred forty-eight (248) acts of the thirty-third general assembly, and making an additional appropriation therefor.

Be it Enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Iowa:

SECTION 1. Appropriation—purpose. That the sum of one thousand ($1,000.00) dollars or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated from any moneys, not otherwise appropriated, in the treasury of the state, for the employment of the extra help and other necessary expense to complete the compilation of the roster and record of Iowa soldiers, sailors and marines provided by chapter two hundred twenty-three (223) acts of the thirty-second general assembly and the same shall be drawn and expended as provided for in section three (3) of said chapter.

SEC. 2. Distribution. Forty copies of the first and second volumes and five copies of each of the other volumes of said publication will be apportioned to each member of the thirty-fourth general assembly, two copies of each volume to each state officer, one copy of each volume to each member of the roster board and the remainder which are not required for distribution as provided for by chapter two hundred twenty-three (223) acts of the thirty-second general assembly or chapter two hundred forty-eight (248) acts of the thirty-third general assembly shall be distributed by the adjutant general to soldiers who served in an Iowa organization or to the families of such soldiers.

SEC. 3. In effect. This act being deemed of immediate importance shall be in force from and after its publication in the Register and Leader and the Des Moines Capital, newspapers published at Des Moines, Iowa.

Approved April 3, A. D. 1911.

Explanatory Introduction

TO

VOL. VI

And General Summary of the Work

EXPLANATORY INTRODUCTION

TO MISCELLANEOUS VOLUME AND GENERAL SUMMARY OF THE WORK

The greatest obstacle which was encountered at the inception of this work was an arbitrary order of Secretary of War Daniel S. Lamont, dated at Washington, D. C., February 23, 1897. That portion of the order which directly affected the successful compilation of this work reads as follows: "Compilations or statements relative to individual officers, enlisted men or organizations will not be furnished from the records on file in the Record and Pension Office, for historical, memorial or statistical purposes, or for publication, or to complete the record of States, societies or associations."

The records in the office of the Adjutant General of the State of Iowa were, in many cases, known to be incomplete, showing only a portion of the record of both officers and enlisted men. It therefore became evident that every possible effort should be made to secure such modification of the order referred to as would enable the State of Iowa to obtain the desired information. The following communication was therefore addressed to the Secretary of War:

OFFICE OF THE ADJUTANT GENERAL, STATE OF IOWA.
DES MOINES, July 25, 1907.

THE HONORABLE THE SECRETARY OF WAR,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: Referring to orders of the Secretary of War dated February 23, 1897, and particularly to the concluding portion of Rule No. 8, relating to the completion of records of the States, I would respectfully call your attention to the enclosed copy of Chapter 223 of the laws of the Thirty-second General Assembly of Iowa.

The Board created by this act, having entered upon the discharge of its duties, find that, in a number of cases, the records of this office do not furnish the requisite information to fully complete the individual record of Iowa soldiers, and, that in a few instances, the complete record of Iowa military organizations cannot be correctly compiled without information which can only be obtained from the records of the War Department.

Appreciating the fact that as complete a military history of the State of Iowa as it is possible to obtain from official sources is required under the provisions of the act above referred to, and the further fact that the compilation is to be made under my direction, I respectfully request that the orders of the War Department be modified to such an extent as will enable this office to obtain the information above referred to.

I would respectfully suggest that the careful compilation of such official history should be, and is, a matter of interest to the General Government, and should receive such aid, encouragement and assistance as it is in the power of your Department to render.

Very respectfully,

W. H. THRIFT,
Adjutant General.

Lieut. Col. G. W. C.

The following reply was received:

WAR DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, August 1, 1907.

ADJUTANT GENERAL, STATE OF IOWA, DES MOINES, IOWA.

SIR: If an exception to the rule of the Department referred to were to be made in behalf of the State of Iowa, similar exceptions would have to be made in behalf of all other States that are engaged in compiling rosters or military histories of troops furnished by them to the Union or the Confederate armies of the Civil War period, or to the armies in service before and after that war. But this is entirely impracticable, and the present Secretary of War has repeatedly refused to make any exception to the rule in favor of any State or of any person, although frequently importuned to do so by Governors, Senators, Representatives in Congress, and other distinguished persons.

The Department is now engaged, under a recently enacted law, in compiling a complete roster of the Union and Confederate armies. When this compilation is completed and published, all the information that it contains will be readily available for the use of the various States and for all persons who are interested in it. In view of the fact, and because the Department stands ready at any time to furnish to any individual, or to the proper official in his behalf, such information as the records afford and as may be required for any useful or necessary purpose in his case, there is no real necessity for the Department furnishing information to enable the States to duplicate records or information on file in the Department.

By order of the Acting Secretary of War,

F. C. AINSWORTH,
The Adjutant General.

Feeling that the refusal of the War Department to make any concession whatever was unjust, not only to the State of Iowa, but to all the States that were making a similar patriotic endeavor to preserve the records of their soldiers, Governor A. B. Cummins addressed a letter to the President of the United States, of which the following is a copy:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, DES MOINES, IOWA,

August 8, 1907.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: Our General Assembly, at its last session, passed an act providing for the publication of a roster of Iowa soldiers in the Civil War (and other wars as well). I beg to enclose you a copy of the act.

The Board provided for in the law is now engaged in preparing the roster, and necessary histories of our military organizations. It is discovered that in some instances our records are incomplete, and the information we have must be supplemented by the records of the War Department of the general government. Under date of July 25th, the Adjutant General of the State of Iowa wrote to the Secretary of War a letter of which I enclose you a copy. Under date of August 1st, the Adjutant General of the Army of the United States made reply, and of this reply I also enclose a copy.

The rule of the Department to which reference is made was, as I understand it, promulgated many years ago, under President Cleveland. I agree with the Adjutant General in his conclusion that there is no reason for making an exception of the State of Iowa or any other State, but I do most earnestly ask consideration respecting the propriety of modifying the rule. It is, beyond dispute, an eminently appropriate and patriotic thing for the State to undertake to publish a roster of the men who were willing to hazard their lives in the defense of their country. There has been for years in this State a general demand for such a publication, and ever since I became governor I have been pressing the subject upon the attention of the General Assembly. We cannot perform the duty which has been imposed upon us by the legislature, as it should be performed without an opportunity to secure such information from the records of the War Department at Washington. It seems to me that the request of a State to be given a chance to verify or supplement its own records in such a manner should be granted. I did not know of the rule that had been promulgated by President Cleveland, and it was hard for me to believe that the general government looked upon the States as so far alien that they must be excluded from the archives of the Department. I can well understand that the process of securing the information should be protected by such regulations as would, first, insure the safety of the records of the War Department, and second, interfere as little as possible with the work of those who have them in charge; but it is certainly easy to accomplish both objects without entirely denying the State the opportunity to prepare its roster.

I do not ask that the State be furnished certified copies, as that might unduly increase the work at Washington. What I ask is that the rule be so changed that a competent and accredited agent of the State may be given access, under the supervision of the officers of the Department, to such records as will complete the history in our own department. The suggestion made by the Adjutant General that the War Department is now making a roster of the Union and Confederate armies does not help us, first, because we cannot delay our publication until after the general roster is prepared and published, and second, because Iowa soldiers want an Iowa Roster.

I beg that you consider the matter, and after a conference with the Secretary of War so modify the rule that we can avail ourselves in some manner of the records of the government. So important is the subject to us that if you desire it I will be glad to submit my request in person.

With high regard, I am,

Yours very truly,

(Signed) ALBERT B. CUMMINS.

HON. THEODORE ROOSEVELT,
President of the United States,
Washington, D. C.

Incredible as it may seem, the President referred the foregoing letter of Governor Cummins to the War Department for reply, without, apparently, having given the subject any personal investigation whatever. The reply was dictated by Adjutant General Ainsworth, was arrogant, undignified and insulting, and the compiler does not deem it worthy of publication as a reply to the courteous and dignified letter of Governor Cummins to the President. Suffice it to say that the former unjust and indefensible attitude of the War Department was fully maintained, and it seemed that any further effort to secure the needed information must result in failure. It was subsequently learned, however, that duplicate records were on file in the office of the Auditor of the War Department, and that it was possible to obtain corrected records from that office. Adjutant General Thrift then made a trip to Washington and succeeded in making an arrangement with Madison Whipple, Chief of the Records Division in the Auditor's office, by which the State of Iowa was finally enabled to secure such completion of records as could be obtained there. The information could only be obtained, however, by the payment of a stipulated amount—five hundred dollars—to Mr. Whipple and other clerks in that office, who performed the work of searching the records after office hours. In addition to this stipulated sum, a considerable amount was paid these same clerks for transcripts of Mexican War Rosters of Iowa soldiers. While this information was of a semi-official character, it is believed to be reliable, as Mr. Whipple and his co-workers were highly recommended as men of honor and integrity, and thoroughly familiar with the records. They had furnished similar information for New York and other States, and such corrections of records as they were able to supply may, therefore, be regarded as being as nearly officially reliable as it was possible to obtain. The continued refusal of the War Department, to allow the States which furnished the troops to save the Republic access to their own records for historical purposes, can only be regarded as arbitrary and unjust. It will be seen, however, that every effort was exhausted to overcome the difficulty, and it is a reasonable presumption that the records of Iowa soldiers, shown in the pages of this work, are as nearly correct as those of any State that has published a similar work, all the information having been derived from the same source.

In addition to the names of the officers and enlisted men who belonged to the organizations, whose revised rosters appear in the preceding volumes of this work, there were a large number of men, who were citizens of Iowa, who enlisted in various organizations of other States. The State of Iowa was entitled to credit upon her quota of troops for those men who, for various reasons, preferred to go into other States to enlist, or—as was the case with a considerable number of them—to enlist in the Regular Army. In order to obtain such credit from the General Government, Adjutant General Baker made special efforts to obtain as complete a list of the names of the men thus enlisting as possible. His efforts were rewarded with a considerable measure of success, as shown by the list of names published in his report for the year 1865.¹ This list includes the States of Illinois, Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas and Wisconsin. Other lists, showing enlistments in the Thirteenth Regiment of the United States Infantry, the Mississippi Marine Brigade, and various other organizations, have been found in other volumes of his report, and the names have been transcribed and are republished in the subjoined roster, which also contains a considerable number of names not found in the reports of the Adjutant General of Iowa, but obtained from other sources deemed absolutely reliable by the compiler of this work. While every possible effort has been made to include in this miscellaneous roster the name of every soldier from Iowa who served in an organization of another State, or in the Regular Army or Navy, the fact that General Baker—notwithstanding his persistent efforts—failed to discover and list so many names, since discovered, leads to the conclusion that there are more names which have never been reported, and that the roster is not, therefore, absolutely complete. It is, however, as nearly complete as it is possible to make it, after the lapse of fifty years since the commencement of the war. It will be seen that in some instances—notably in the list of Iowa names in the First Nebraska and Sixth Kansas Cavalry Regiments—General Baker succeeded in obtaining not only the names but the personal records of a good many of the men. The record opposite the great majority of the names, however, shows only the age, place of residence, and date of enlistment and muster.

The general design and purpose of this work has been to preserve the military history of the State of Iowa, and of the men who were the makers of that history. To have conducted an exhaustive search of the military archives of other States or of the General Government, in order to find the additional information about these Iowa men whose records of service are contained in the rosters of the various organizations to which they belonged, would have been a prodigious task. Within the limitation of time allowed, and the resources provided for the preparation of this work, it was not possible to make such extended research. The genealogist who consults these pages for information will, therefore, be compelled to extend his researches to the sources referred to, in order to complete the record of any one of those men who belonged to Iowa, but who voluntarily relinquished his privilege to be included in its history, except in a general and incidental way.²

¹Report of Adjutant General of Iowa, Vol. 1, 1865, pages 779 to 833 inclusive. List of names of Iowa men known to have enlisted in military organizations of other States.

²Works of similar character to this have been published by other States, and contain the records of the men who enlisted in their respective military organizations.

The list of names and the records of Iowa Sailors and Marines are no doubt very incomplete, either as shown in the subjoined Miscellaneous Roster or in that of the Mississippi Marine Brigade. The members of the latter organization consisted largely of men detailed from other arms of the service. The rosters of a number of Iowa regiments show the names of men who were thus detailed. Men living upon or near the sea coast and sailors engaged in the Merchant Marine service, constituted by far the largest number of volunteers for service in the United States Navy. But for the fact that the lower Mississippi was navigable for a considerable distance above its mouth by some of the larger vessels of the Navy, a still smaller proportion of western men would have volunteered for that service. In addition to the fleet of naval vessels, operating on the Mississippi River, commanded by Rear Admiral David D. Porter, that unique organization known as the "Mississippi Marine Brigade" was, for a considerable length of time, an important adjunct of the Navy, and many Iowa men either enlisted in, or were—as has been stated—detailed for, that service,³ and constituted the largest number shown upon the records of the Adjutant General's office, as having been enrolled in that branch of the service.

It would require a volume larger than this to contain the names of the men and women of Iowa whose associated efforts contributed so much to the alleviation of the suffering of the sick and wounded soldiers, and who, in various ways, exerted themselves to sustain the cause of the Union. More than two years before the close of the war, that beneficent institution, "The Iowa Soldiers' Orphans' Home," was founded by the combined efforts of the Soldiers' Aid Societies, led by Mrs. Annie Wittenmeyer, Governor Samuel J. Kirkwood, and many of the most noted men and women of the State. The Iowa soldiers in the field gave practical evidence of their appreciation of the founding of such an institution, by contributing a large sum of money out of their meager pay toward its maintenance and support.

A list of names of a few of those persons living in the State of Iowa who were exempt from military duty, but who—in a spirit of pure patriotism—procured representative recruits, will be found in the Appendix to the subjoined roster. These names have been included for the reason—so clearly apparent—that the action thus taken was prompted by patriotic and unselfish motives.

The necessity for condensation has prohibited the insertion of a larger portion of miscellaneous history, which might have been appropriately included in the concluding volume of this work.⁴ When the manuscript embracing the early military history of the State—prepared by the late Harvey Reid—was submitted to Adjutant General Logan, it was found to be so voluminous, and so much in the nature of a narrative that, to publish it in its entirety, would very materially have changed the general plan of this work and largely increased its cost to the State. General Logan, therefore, considered it his duty to exercise his prerogative, in directing the condensation of the early history, in order to make it conform as nearly as possible to the general plan and character of this work. In undertaking the task of condensation, the compiler has endeavored to preserve the most important features of Mr. Reid's work, eliminating only those particularities of detailed description, and those extended biographical sketches, which constitute a considerable portion of the original manuscript.²

The compiler renders grateful acknowledgment to Colonel Charles A. Clark, Commander of the Iowa Department of the Grand Army of the Republic, upon whose recommendation he was appointed a member of the Iowa Soldiers' Roster Board. At the time he began the work of compilation he had nearly reached the age of three score and ten years, and was laboring under a physical disability, contracted in the line of his duty as an Iowa soldier, during the War of the Rebellion. He had, however, long cherished the hope that the work would be undertaken, and, when the assignment came to him, entered upon it with the determination to use the utmost limit of his strength and ability in his efforts to do justice to his Iowa comrades and to the various organizations in which they served. In this labor of love he has had the cordial support of his brother members of the Board, and has been provided with the necessary facilities for the prosecution of the work. Whatever measure of success has attended his efforts must, therefore, be accorded to their co-operation and assistance. To Governors Cummins, Garst and Carroll, to Attorney General Byers, to Adjutant Generals Thrift and Logan, and to Curators Aldrich, Shambaugh and Harlan, the compiler of this work is under lasting obligations. While the general direction of the work has been under the supervision of the Adjutant General, the exacting duties of his office would not permit him to give his close personal attention to details, and, in addition to the preparation of the historical matter, the supervision of the work of the clerical force has largely devolved upon the compiler. Several changes have taken place in this force since the work began. Full credit is due to those who have been longest engaged in transcribing the records, and who have rendered the most faithful service in that capacity.

Mr. William D. Christy—a veteran soldier of Company D, Second Regiment Iowa Infantry Volunteers—has been constantly engaged on the clerical part of the work since its commencement. His work has been intelligently, faithfully and conscientiously performed. He has always shown a deep personal interest in making the individual records as nearly correct as it was possible to make them, and his service in this regard has been marked by the same faithful devotion to duty which distinguished his record as an Iowa soldier.

Lieutenant Thomas L. Stephens, another Iowa soldier, the capable and efficient Record Clerk in the office of the Adjutant General of Iowa, has constantly rendered valuable assistance to both the compiler and the clerical force, in verifying the records, by careful investigation of the muster rolls and other official papers on file in his office. This service has been rendered in addition to the discharge of his regular duties as Record Clerk.

Miss Edna M. Vorhees, first stenographer and clerk, remained a long time and performed her duties faithfully and well. Upon tendering her resignation—a short time previous to her marriage—she was succeeded by Miss Mabel W. Conlon, an efficient stenographer, who resigned December 1, 1910, to accept a position in the office of the Secretary of State, and was succeeded by the present very capable stenographer and clerk, Miss Elsie L. Wickware.

Mrs. Clara A. Neidig, proof reader and clerk, joined the force after the first manuscript had been sent to the State Printer. She has ever since been most indefatigable in the discharge of her important duties. Mrs. Neidig is not only an expert proof reader, but a woman gifted with a high order of intelligence and literary ability. The State has been fortunate in securing her services in connection with this work. The compiler feels personally indebted to her for many valuable suggestions. Too much cannot be said in commendation of the earnest, faithful and thoroughly conscientious manner in which her work has been performed.

²Mr. Reid's manuscript has been carefully preserved, with the purpose of securing its publication in a separate volume, by the Curator of the State Historical Department, or by the Superintendent of the State Historical Society. It contains a large amount of valuable historical matter not intimately connected with the early military history of the State and therefore is not included in this volume.

The old soldiers of Iowa are especially indebted to Honorable John McAllister, Member of the House of Representatives of the Thirty-second General Assembly, for his able, persistent and successful efforts in securing the passage of the law providing for the compilation of this work. Senator James E. Bruce was the leading advocate of the measure in the Senate, while Senators John D. Brown and J. A. Fitchpatrick, and Representative William Anderson of the Thirty-third General Assembly were active and consistent supporters of the amended act, making provision for the continuation and completion of the work. The Journals of the House and Senate give the full record of the legislation connected with this subject. To include all the names of the friends and supporters of the measure would require a list of nearly all the members of the Thirty-second and Thirty-third General Assemblies. It will be generally conceded, however, that the men whose names have been mentioned were the most active and earnest in their efforts in its behalf.

At the time these lines are written (January 10, 1911,) the work is approaching completion. It is confidently believed that it will be found as complete and comprehensive as any similar work which has been published. To the student of military history it will commend itself as a compendium of events and statistics, derived from official and, therefore, reliable sources. To the general reader, who wishes to obtain as complete a knowledge of the military history of the State of Iowa as is obtainable, these volumes will be found to contain the only comprehensive summary of such history. To the genealogist, these records will supply a most important link in the chain of many family histories, and the men and women of future generations, whose lineage can be traced to the names of the Iowa soldiers recorded in these volumes, may justly cherish such an ancestral record as a priceless legacy.

Mississippi Marine Brigade

HISTORICAL SKETCH

MISSISSIPPI MARINE BRIGADE

(Iowa men in the United States Navy, either directly enlisted or detailed from the Iowa regiments to which they belonged, for service in "The Mississippi Marine Brigade.")

The archives of the office of the Adjutant General of Iowa contain but scant material from which to compile the record of her sons who were—either directly or indirectly—connected with the naval branch of the service, during the great War of the Rebellion. The compiler has, therefore, had recourse to such sources of information as were obtainable, to show the part taken by Iowa men in the brilliant achievements of the United States Navy.

The following brief extracts are made from a carefully prepared paper, read before the "Crocker's Iowa Brigade Association" at Waterloo, Iowa, September 14, 1904:¹

It is for the purpose of reminding you of the eminent service performed, in part, by Iowa boys as sailors in the War of the Rebellion, that I appear before you. . . . The 131,954 United States Sailors and Marines, by their bravery, endurance, and genius, locked up more than three thousand miles of shore line, wrested from a wary and active foe one thousand five hundred miles of internal water line, excited the wonder of all nations by its dramatic achievements, and, by its original methods, compelled a revolution of naval warfare throughout the civilized world. Iowa sailors helped to make up this naval force, and are entitled to share in the glories and honors of all that it accomplished. Iowa had sons in every Squadron save one, and in the Mississippi Squadron she had commissioned officers on twenty-seven vessels, and men before the mast on nearly every one of the hundred vessels comprising that Squadron.

Iowa had nine commissioned officers in the Regular Navy, during the war, ranging in rank from Ensign to Lieutenant-commander, and four commissioned officers in the Marine Corps. In the Volunteer Navy she had thirty-six officers, namely: three Lieutenants, three Masters, seven Ensigns, seven Masters' Mates, one Chief Engineer, five First Assistant Engineers, six Second Assistant Engineers, three Third Assistant Engineers, and one Surgeon. The Fleet Paymaster of this Squadron was also an Iowan. The most painstaking research has led me to the conclusion that the number of enlisted men furnished by Iowa for the Navy is above eight hundred. Most of these served in the Mississippi Squadron. Thus the young State of Iowa, far removed from the scenes that lure to sailor life, furnished to the Navy a body of men whose numbers—in the aggregate—almost equaled a full regiment of infantry.

¹Ensign William H. Michael (the author of the paper referred to) had first entered the service—as a youth of eighteen years—in Company B, Eleventh Iowa Infantry, on Oct. 1, 1861. The records show that he was discharged for disability Sept. 29, 1862, and, that before the expiration of that year, he had enlisted in the U. S. Navy, in which he served to the close of the war. He was promoted to Masters Mate on May 11, 1863, and was again promoted to Ensign (in 1864), for gallantry in the engagement off Clarendon, on White River, Ark.

Ensign Michael gives in detail the history of the achievements of vessels of the Squadron, the names of which are identified with all the early battles of the war which were fought in the near vicinity of navigable rivers, where they were enabled to co-operate with, and render valuable service to, the army. Some of the most notable of these were Belmont, where General Grant's little army of three thousand men was saved from being captured by the enemy by the timely arrival of the gunboats Conestoga and Lexington. Fort Henry was captured by the naval vessels alone, the land forces not arriving until after the fort had surrendered. The iron-clads Tyler, Lexington and Carondelet, were important factors in winning the victory at Fort Donelson. At Shiloh—near the close of the first day of the battle—the Tyler and Lexington again rendered most important service. General Grant says: "At a late hour in the afternoon a desperate attempt was made to turn our left and get possession of the landing, transports, etc. This point was guarded by the gunboats Tyler and Lexington, and much credit is due these vessels for the effectual aid they rendered in repulsing the enemy." General Hurlburt says: "From my own observation and the statement of prisoners, the fire of the gunboats was most effectual in stopping the advance of the enemy on Sunday afternoon and night." The heroic feat of running the rebel batteries at Island Number Ten, on the Mississippi River, was accomplished on April 6 and 7, 1862, by the iron-clads Carondelet and Pittsburg, of Commodore Foot's Squadron. Then followed the engagement between the vessels of the Union and Confederate fleets in front of Memphis, resulting in the capture of that city, the destruction of most of the vessels of the enemy, and the clearing of the river for navigation as far south as Vicksburg. The events which followed, including the running of the rebel batteries at Vicksburg, the capture of Arkansas Post, and the series of important operations of the Mississippi Squadron, reflected great honor upon the Navy. In all these operations the "Baron DeKalb," commanded by Lieutenant Commander John G. Walker, of Iowa, rendered most notable and conspicuous service.²

At an early period of the war, that unique volunteer organization, known as "Ellet's Mississippi Marine Brigade," was attached to Admiral Porter's Squadron, and at once became an important adjunct of the Navy. General Alfred of its infantry contingent. It was indeed a novel organization, composed of of its infantry contingent. It was indeed a novel organization, composed of armored transports which had been converted into gunboats, bearing companies of infantry, artillery and cavalry, and several of its boats were rigged for ramming. The subjoined roster shows only the names of those who had been reported to Adjutant General Baker as having enlisted from Iowa in the Marine Brigade. The roster constitutes, however, but a small portion of the names of Iowa men who served with the brigade. Nearly every one of the Iowa regiments, whose field of operations extended along the lower Mississippi River and its navigable tributaries, had contributed to its forces, as shown by their respective rosters contained in this work. The larger number of these men were detailed for such service, but some of them were transferred. The little fleet became the scouts of the Mississippi River, and often preceded the transports, heavily loaded with troops and army supplies, guarding them against attacks of the enemy. Owing to its novel equipment it could move rapidly from point to point along the river, land, and engage the enemy, and, if too hard pressed, retreat under cover of the fire of its gunboats, and re-embark. While rendering such important service, the commander of the Marine Brigade seems to have found it somewhat difficult to fully comply with the strict requirements of naval and army discipline, at least such inference is drawn from the following official communication from Admiral Porter to the Secretary of War:

UNITED STATES MISSISSIPPI SQUADRON,
Flag-Ship Black Hawk, off Vicksburg,

July 13, 1863.

HON. GIDEON WELLES,
Secretary of the Navy,
Washington, D. C.

SIR:—The want of steam transportation in the army is very much felt. The Marine Brigade consists of a large number of vessels, capable of transporting ten thousand men. I would recommend that the brigade and vessels should be turned over to the Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the Tennessee, Major General U. S. Grant, who should properly direct all military movements here. I find the Marine Brigade and Army do not get along very well together when co-operating. I would, therefore, recommend that General Grant should take charge of the whole concern, excepting the ram fleet, which should be turned over to the Navy for transports. They are mostly worn out and are run at great expense. The brigade, as it is now, is so small that it is not available against the bodies of guerrillas which infest the Mississippi. If it is placed under General Grant's orders altogether, he can use the vessels to throw into any place a body of ten thousand men. I have offered to order the brigade to report to him for what duty he may wish to assign it, but he would prefer to have it placed entirely under his control, that he may make permanent arrangements with regard to a proper organization. At present there are a good many complaints about the Ellet Marine Brigade, which, whether true or not, seem to require that a better organization should exist. I recommend most urgently that I may be ordered to transfer the brigade and vessels permanently to the Army, and that an order may be received from the War Department to deliver up to the Navy the rams, to be used as transports, or else to have them turned over to the Quartermaster's department of the Army, where they are much needed. General Banks has just called for twenty steamers, and General Grant has to curtail his transportation to comply with the request. The brigade is at present employed at a distance, and the whole effective force is about five hundred men. If the Army had the steamers, it could make better use of them.

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

DAVID D. PORTER.

The Secretary of the Navy referred the foregoing communication to the Secretary of War, by whom it was referred to the General-in-Chief, as shown by the following reply:

NAVY DEPARTMENT, July 31, 1863.

HONORABLE E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War,

SIR:—I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of a communication, dated the 13th instant, received from Rear-Admiral Porter, and to recommend his suggestions touching the disposition of the Marine Brigade to your favorable consideration.

Very respectfully, etc.,

GIDEON WELLES.

(Indorsement.)

Referred to the General-in-Chief.

EDWIN M. STANTON.

The only further reference to this matter, which the compiler has been able to find, is embraced in the following communication:

WAR DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON.

August 5, 1863.

HONORABLE GIDEON WELLES,

Secretary of the Navy.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 31st ultimo, transmitting a copy of a communication from Rear-Admiral Porter, suggesting that the Marine Brigade be turned over to the Commanding General of the Army of the Tennessee, and that the ram fleet be transferred to the Navy, I have the honor to inform you that, upon reference of the same to the General-in-Chief, that officer has made a report in the following words, to-wit: "This matter having been fully discussed in Cabinet, and decided, I see no good reasons for changing the decision there made.

H. W. HALLECK.

August 4, 1863."

In which opinion this Department concurs.

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

E. M. STANTON.³

While the records do not show what decision was reached in the Cabinet discussion of the matter, the inference is that the Brigade retained its former status, subject to the orders of both Army and Navy commanders. That it continued to render effective and important service along the Mississippi and its tributaries is a well established fact. It has not been the purpose of the compiler to attempt a detailed history of its operations, but simply to show the connection of Iowa men with the organization. From the beginning of hostilities to the close of the war, history clearly shows that Iowa was well and ably represented in the naval branch of the service.

Northern Border Brigade

(State Militia)

HISTORICAL SKETCH

NORTHERN BORDER BRIGADE

(State Militia)

Prior to the commencement of the great War of the Rebellion, troops belonging to the Regular Army of the United States had been located at the various military posts on the northern and western frontiers, for the purpose of restraining the Indians from committing depredations upon the pioneer settlers, whose homes were located upon those frontiers. The sudden emergency—with which the General Government found itself confronted—rendered the withdrawal of the Federal troops from those military posts a matter of necessity. The Regular Army establishment—which then existed—constituted only a nucleus for the great army of volunteers which was being hastily organized, and every trained officer and soldier was needed at the front in the South to resist the hosts of armed traitors who had taken the field, and were threatening to dissolve the Union.

The savage Indian tribes were quick to take advantage of the situation, and a series of depredations and massacres of whole families of the settlers ensued. For a time it seemed that there was no safety for any of those hardy pioneers, and that they must all be either driven from their homes or share the fate of those who had already met death at the hands of the Indians. A few of the settlers who lived nearest each other had the hardihood to remain in their homes and, by banding themselves together, and converting the largest cabin in their neighborhood into a temporary blockhouse, where they could meet for common defense when the danger signal was given, indulged the hope that they might be able to keep the Indians at bay until the troops—which they had been told were on the way—could come to their rescue. Nearly all of those who thus remained were killed or taken captives by the Indians. By far the greater number, however, adopted the wiser course of abandoning their homes, and seeking safety in the interior of the State until such time as the presence of troops would make it reasonably safe for them to return. Most of the men—after placing their families in safety—enlisted and remained in the service of the State until peace was restored.

It will thus be seen that the war, inaugurated by the Southern States, imposed an unusually heavy burden upon those Northern States which, in addition to furnishing their full quota of troops for the regiments which were being sent to the South, were compelled to protect their own frontiers from the incursions of hostile Indians. The Governors of Iowa and Minnesota earnestly co-operated in their efforts to give adequate protection to the helpless settlers on the borders of their respective States. In response to their calls, militia companies were promptly raised and, as rapidly as they could be armed and equipped, were dispatched to the frontier. There were no railroads, and the navigation of the Missouri River—which was depended upon for forwarding supplies to Sioux City and points north of that place—was rendered exceedingly dangerous by the bands of lurking savages along its banks. Relief was therefore necessarily slow in reaching the imperiled settlers.

The official records show that, prior to the organization of the Northern Border Brigade, the only regularly organized companies of Iowa troops which had been engaged in active service on the northern frontier were Captain Andrew J. Millard's Sioux City Cavalry Company, and Companies A, B and C, of the Fourteenth Regiment of Iowa Volunteer Infantry. The Sioux City Cavalry Company, having been raised nearest the scene of the Indian troubles, was the first to take the field. It was composed of men inured to the hardships of frontier life, and generally acquainted with the Indian methods of warfare. The officers and men of this company rendered long, arduous and heroic service on the northern border and in the Indian Territory, first as an independent company, and subsequently as a part of the Seventh Iowa Cavalry, to which regiment it was transferred.¹

Companies A, B and C, of the Fourteenth Iowa Infantry, were detached from the regiment very soon after it was mustered into the service of the United States, and were ordered to proceed to Fort Randall, Dacotah Territory, for the purpose of relieving the battalion of United States troops, which composed the garrison at that fort. These three infantry companies marched from their camp near Iowa City, by way of Des Moines, Council Bluffs and Sioux City, Iowa, to Fort Randall—a distance of five hundred fifty miles—in thirty-five days. They were subsequently permanently detached from the Fourteenth Iowa and became the Forty-first Iowa Infantry Battalion, and were assigned to service on the frontier. Upon the organization of the Seventh Iowa Cavalry, these companies were transferred to that regiment, which constituted a part of the command of General Sully, and remained in the northwest, engaged in active service against the Indians, until the close of the war.²

The foregoing statement, as to the conditions which existed on the northern border and the part taken by Iowa troops in the early part of the war with the Indians, has been made as an introduction to the history which follows. It became evident that the Indians could not be completely subdued, by the forces then operating against them, and that adequate protection could not be furnished to the settlers, without the establishment of a regularly organized body of State troops and the erection of a chain of defenses along the Iowa frontier. In his official report (Vol. 2, 1863, pages 861 to 870 inclusive), Adjutant General Baker—after making a preliminary statement of the conditions then existing—quotes the reports made to the Governor, and his orders and instructions with reference to the formation of the Northern Border Brigade. The statement, copies of some of the reports in full, and of others in part, are here given as follows:

The Indian outbreak in Minnesota in the latter part of August and in September, 1862, as well as the threatening attitude of the Indians on our own frontier, having alarmed our citizens on the border, and numerous appeals for aid and protection being made by them to the Governor; His Excellency, on the the 13th of September, 1862, appointed S. R. Ingham, Esq., of Des Moines, as his agent to proceed to the exposed frontier of the State, to give the matter his personal and immediate attention. His reports show his prompt, energetic and able performance of this duty.—A. G.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY, S. J. KIRKWOOD, Governor of Iowa,

SIR: Under your instructions, placed in my hands August 29, 1862, of which the following is a copy:

"August 29, 1862.

S. R. INGHAM, ESQ.,

SIR: I am informed there is probable danger of an attack by hostile Indians, on the inhabitants of the Northwestern portion of our State. Arms and powder will be sent to you at Fort Dodge, lead and caps will be sent with you. I hand you an order on the Auditor of State for one thousand dollars. You will please proceed at once to Fort Dodge, and from there to such other points as you may deem proper. Use the arms, ammunition and money placed at your disposal, in such manner as your judgment may dictate as best to promote the object in view, to-wit: the protection of the inhabitants of the frontier. It would be well to communicate with Captain Millard, commanding the company of mounted men raised for United States service at Sioux City.

Place any men you may deem it advisable to raise under his command. Use your discretion in all things, and exercise any power I could exercise if I were present, according to your best discretion. Please report to me in writing.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

SAMUEL J. KIRKWOOD."

I have the honor to report that, in compliance therewith, I at once proceeded to the northern border of our State, to ascertain the extent of the supposed difficulties, and to do the needful for the protection of our frontier settlements, should circumstances warrant or demand. I visited Dickinson, Emmet, Palo Alto, Kossuth, Humboldt and Webster Counties; found many of the inhabitants in a high state of excitement, and laboring under a constant fear of an attack by Indians. Quite a number of families were leaving their homes and moving into the more thickly settled portions of the State. This feeling, however, seemed to be more intense and to run higher in the more inland and remote counties from the border than in the border counties themselves. In Emmet and Kossuth, both border counties, I had the settlers called together in order that I might learn from them their views and wishes as to what ought to be done for their safety, or rather what was necessary to satisfy and quiet their fears and apprehensions. They expressed themselves freely and were very temperate in their demands. They said all they wanted or deemed necessary for the protection of the northern border was a small force of mounted men, stationed on the east and west forks of the Des Moines River, to act in concert with the United States troops, then stationed at Spirit Lake; but that this force must be made up of men, such as they could choose from amongst themselves, who were familiar with the country and had been engaged in hunting and trapping for years, and were more or less familiar with the habits and customs of the Indians, one of which men would be worth half a dozen such as the State had sent up there on one or two former occasions. In a small force of this kind they would have confidence, but would not feel safe with a much larger force of young and inexperienced men, such as are usually raised in the more central portions of the State.

I at once authorized a company to be raised in Emmet, Kossuth, Palo Alto and Humboldt Counties. Within five days forty men were enlisted; held an election for officers, were mustered in, furnished with arms and ammunition, and placed on duty, twenty at Chain Lake, and twenty at Estherville, on the west fork of the Des Moines. I authorized them to fill up the company to eighty men, if necessity should demand such an addition to the force. At Spirit Lake, in Dickinson County, I found some forty men stationed, under command of Lieutenant Sawyers, of Captain Millard's company, Sioux City Cavalry, in the United States service. From the best information I could obtain, I deemed this a sufficient force and therefore took no action to increase the protection at this point, further than to furnish the settlers with thirty stand of arms, and a small amount of ammunition, for which I took bond as hereinafter stated. Not being able to see Captain Millard, he being at Sioux City, I did not place the company raised under his command, but simply made an arrangement with Lieutenant Sawyers, by which the forces were to act together until such time as I should be able to see the Captain.

The remainder of Mr. Ingham's report relates mainly to the further distribution of arms and ammunition to responsible men among the settlers, to be distributed for use only in cases of emergency, when it might become necessary for all who were capable of bearing arms to unite their strength for the common defense, and act in conjunction with the regularly organized companies who were constantly on duty. He concludes his report as follows:

Having done all that seemed necessary for the protection of the settlers of the more exposed of the northern border counties, I returned to Fort Dodge on the 8th day of September, intending to proceed at once to Sioux City, and make all necessary arrangements for the protection of the settlements on the northwestern border. At that point I was informed that the Legislature—then in extra session—had passed a bill providing for the raising of troops for the protection of our borders against hostile Indians.* I therefore deemed it best to report to you for further instructions, and did so report on the 10th of September. On the 13th day of that month, you placed in my hands the following instructions, together with your General Orders No. 1.

“EXECUTIVE OFFICE, DES MOINES, Sept. 13, 1862.

S. R. INGHAM, ESQ.—

SIR: You are intrusted with the organization of the forces provided by law for the defense of the northwestern frontier, and with furnishing them with subsistence and forage during and after their organization; also with the posting of the troops raised, at such points as are best calculated to effect the object proposed, until the election of the officer who will command the entire force, and generally with the execution of the orders issued of this date, in connection with this force. It is impossible to foresee the contingencies that may arise, rendering necessary a change in these orders, or the prompt exercise of powers not therein contained, and delay for the purpose of consulting me might result disastrously. In order to avoid such results, as far as possible, I hereby confer upon you all the powers I myself have in this regard. You may change, alter, modify or add to the orders named, as in your sound discretion you may deem best. You may make such other and further orders as the exigencies of the case may, in your judgment, render necessary. In short, you may do all things necessary for the protection of the frontier, as fully as I could do if I were personally present and did the same. The first object is the security of the frontier; the second, that this object be effected as economically as is consistent with its prompt and certain attainment. All officers and citizens are enjoined to co-operate with you, and yield to you the same assistance and obedience they would to me, and I hereby ratify and confirm all you may do in the premises. You are further fully authorized to employ any person or persons whom, in your judgment, you may deem necessary to assist you in the execution of your commission.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant.

SAMUEL J. KIRKWOOD.”

It will thus be seen that Mr. Ingham was given full power and authority to put into effect the law authorizing the organization of the Northern Border Brigade. The good judgment which he had exercised in forming the companies already raised, and in the entire discharge of his duty under his former commission from the Governor, fully justified the confidence reposed in him. He at once proceeded to organize and muster into the service the companies named in the order, at the places designated, as follows: Webster City, Fort Dodge, Denison and Sioux City. He also ordered the construction of blockhouses and stockades at Correctionville, Cherokee, Peterson, Estherville and Chain Lakes. At Spirit Lake a strong stockade had already been constructed. These places formed the nucleus of the principal settlements on the northwestern border of the State. With the completion of these defenses, and their occupation by the four companies last organized, and the two previously stationed at Chain Lakes and Estherville, a force of two hundred fifty mounted men, well armed and equipped, were ready at all times to co-operate with the cavalry forces under General Sully, then operating against the hostile tribes of Indians beyond the border. The wisdom of the action of the Governor, in asking for the necessary legislation to enable him to place an adequate force upon the border, was demonstrated by the security subsequently afforded to the settlers. Most of those who had fled in terror from their homes returned and resumed the cultivation of their farms, with the knowledge that, in case of attack by the Indians, there were places of refuge provided for them. Mr. Ingham—in closing his official report—says: "From information in my possession, I am entirely satisfied that it will be necessary to keep this entire force on duty, after the completion of the blockhouses and stockades, on which they are now engaged."

While the danger from attack was not so great as it had been before these precautions were taken, the fact remained that the number of Indian warriors then engaged in hostilities far exceeded the number of troops under the command of General Sully. In spite of the disparity in numbers, however, the splendid troops, under the command of that brave and intrepid General, had defeated the Indians in several pitched battles, and had driven them far beyond the frontier. The danger was that other Indian tribes, which had thus far refused to join those actively hostile, might be induced to go upon the war path, and, with greatly increased numbers, succeed in compelling General Sully's forces to fall back to the settlements on the frontier. Keeping in mind the horrible events of the recent past, there was still much to justify the feeling of anxiety which pervaded the minds of both settlers and soldiers in those border counties of Iowa. To show how well this feeling was justified, the following extract from the report of George L. Davenport, Esq., who had been sent by Governor Kirkwood to confer with Governor Ramsey of Minnesota, is here given:

. Upon my arrival at St. Paul, I called upon Governor Ramsey, who gave me all the information in his power. He informed me that the outbreak of the Sioux Indians is of the most serious character, and the massacre of men, women and children of the frontier settlements, the largest known in the history of the country. Nearly six hundred persons are known to be killed, and over one hundred women and children are in the hands of the savages as prisoners. The Indians are very bold and defiant, repeatedly attacking the forts and the troops sent out against them. They have plundered many stores and farm houses, and have driven off a very large number of cattle and horses. The Indians continue to attack the settlements almost every week, keeping up a constant alarm among the people. It is estimated that over five thousand persons have left their homes and all of their property, causing immense loss and suffering. Governor Ramsey informs me that he will have, in a short time, about four thousand troops to operate against the Indians, one thousand of which will be cavalry, as soon as horses can be obtained.

It is proposed to erect stockade forts, at short distances apart, along a frontier of two hundred miles, and garrison them with forty or fifty men each. This, it is supposed, will induce many to return to their farms and feel that they are protected, and, in case of alarm, have a place to fly to. I am much alarmed in regard to the safety of the settlements on the northwestern border of our State. I think they are in imminent danger of an attack at any moment, and will be in constant danger and alarm during the coming winter. As the Indians are driven back from the eastern part of Minnesota, they will fall back towards the Missouri slope, and will make inroads upon our Iowa settlements.⁸

⁸Report of Adjutant General of Iowa, 1863, Vol. 2, pages 867-8.

The foregoing official report, showing the terrible calamity that had come upon the hapless settlers in Minnesota, afforded full justification for the prompt action taken by the Iowa legislature and Governor Kirkwood. Had such action been delayed, the depopulation of those border counties would have resulted, either on account of the actual warfare which would have been waged by the Indians, or the fear of it, which would have caused all the settlers to have abandoned their homes and removed to the interior of the State.

During the winter, and a part of the summer of 1863, the work of erecting defenses at the different places indicated in the order was vigorously prosecuted. Lieutenant Colonel Sawyers made frequent reports to Governor Kirkwood as to the progress of the work, and, in the early part of June, made his final report, which reads in part as follows:⁴

HEADQUARTERS NORTHERN BORDER BRIGADE.

Spirit Lake, Iowa, June 8, 1863.

HIS EXCELLENCY, SAMUEL J. KIRKWOOD, Governor of Iowa.

DEAR SIR: Enclosed please find final report of the work at Estherville, together with a ground plan of the same. I am pleased to say that this finishes all the work assigned to the Northern Border Brigade, furnishing for each of the settlements along the line a safe place of retreat in case of attack by the Indians. The works assigned the captains of the different companies are all finished in a good, substantial and workmanlike manner. Captain William H. Ingham has built a large and substantial fortification—one that reflects much credit upon him and his command. . . . You will see from this report, together with the plan of the work, that the works at Estherville are more extensive than at any other point on the line. . . . The fortifications along our northwestern frontier are now complete. . . .

Hoping to hear from you soon in regard to our future service, I remain,

Your obedient servant,

JAMES A. SAWYERS, Lieutenant Colonel,

Northern Border Brigade.

The headquarters of the brigade were subsequently established at Estherville, and from that post details were made for the other posts along the line of the frontier. Near the last of September, 1863, (owing to the defeat of the hostile tribes of Indians on the 3d and 4th of that month, by the forces under the command of General Alfred Sully, at the hard fought battle of White Stone Hill, in which the Sixth and Seventh Iowa Regiments of Cavalry greatly distinguished themselves,) it became evident that the danger of further attacks upon the settlers had greatly diminished, and it was deemed safe to disband the Northern Border Brigade, and to substitute a smaller force in its stead. The following order for the disbandment of the Brigade was, therefore, issued:

STATE OF IOWA, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,

Davenport, Sept. 26, 1863.

GENERAL ORDER No. 121.

I. The Northern Border Brigade, as now organized, is hereby disbanded.

II. All officers of the Northern Border Brigade are hereby directed to turn over all arms, equipments, ammunition, and all other public property, to Lieutenant Lewis H. Smith, Second Quartermaster of said Brigade, and who is hereby continued in said office, for the company ordered to be organized by this Department, under order of this date, in place of said companies of the Northern Border Brigade, hereby disbanded.

III. William S. Pritchard, of Des Moines, will at once proceed to the posts where any of the said companies of the Northern Border Brigade are located, and muster out said companies, as herein directed, and will muster in the company to be raised in accordance with these orders; the company to be mustered for service until relieved by United States troops, unless sooner discharged by order of the Governor.

IV. Said Pritchard will also inspect all horses, equipments and arms, and will accept only those fitted for the proposed duty.

By order of the Governor.

N. B. BAKER, Adjutant General of Iowa.⁵

In confirmation of the statement made at the beginning of this historical sketch, with regard to the duty of guarding the frontiers by troops belonging to the Regular Army of the United States, the following correspondence is here quoted:

HEADQUARTERS, DISTRICT OF DAKOTAH.

Sioux City, Iowa, Oct. 22, 1863.

GENERAL N. B. BAKER,

Adjutant General of Iowa,

SIR: By a late order from the Department of the Northwest, the sixteen counties in the northwest corner of Iowa are placed in my district. I have just returned from the upper Missouri, and know very little about the points now occupied by the Iowa State troops in this section, nor for how long a time they have been called into service. Will you be kind enough, therefore, to give me all the information you can in the matter. I have many places in Dacotah to garrison this winter, but will still have left at this place some three or four companies of cavalry. I expect them here in about a week. At least two or three companies can be placed on duty at points already occupied by State troops, if necessary. But I think it would be better, if possible, to keep the State troops at these posts this winter, as they are better acquainted with the country and are already located. I will send one of my Aids up there tomorrow to visit these posts, and will myself visit the line as soon as I can settle up unfinished business here.

With much respect, your obedient servant.

ALF SULLY, Brigadier-General.

STATE OF IOWA, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,

Davenport, October 29, 1863.

GENERAL: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of yours of the 22d inst., and reply that we now have in service only one company for the northern border. With the exception of this company, the Northern Border Brigade, for the protection of the northern frontier, has been disbanded. The headquarters of that company is at Estherville, and it is scattered in squads over a line of nearly one hundred sixty miles. In my opinion, one company of your cavalry would be amply sufficient to supply the place of the State company. It certainly would not require over two of your companies. The State seriously objects to keeping State troops longer at these posts, and for good reasons. If they are not immediately relieved, every day's delay will increase the labor and difficulty of relieving the State company, as the inclement season soon sets in. We have maintained at State expense five companies on the northern frontier, and can neither obtain credit for the men nor allowance for cash expended, while other States, that have raised men for local or temporary purposes, have received credit for the men, simply because they were mustered into the United States service. As far as the General Government was concerned, it received as much benefit in the one case as in the other, and has had no trouble or expense up to this time, so far as this State is concerned, in the matter. We have an idea that this sort of injustice should cease, and earnestly urge upon you that the State company at Estherville may at once be relieved by the cavalry under your command. Upon notice received from you that you have given the requisite orders, the Governor will issue the proper orders to disband the State company at Estherville. This is urged for another reason. We are called upon for more troops, and if we cannot get credit for the Northern Border Brigade, ⁵Report of Adjutant General of Iowa, 1864, page 669.

we would like to give those soldiers a chance to enlist where the State can obtain credit for them.

With great respect, yours truly,

N. B. BAKER, Adjutant-General of Iowa.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL ALFRED SULLY,

Sioux City, Iowa.

There was further correspondence between Adjutant General Baker and General Sully on the subject, but, no definite action having been taken by the latter, on November 21, 1863, the Governor ordered General Baker to instruct Captain Ingham that his company would be discharged on the 1st day of January, 1864, or at an earlier date, upon being relieved by United States troops. This action evoked the following reply from General Sully:

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF DACOTAH,

Sioux City, Iowa, Dec. 22, 1863.

TO GENERAL N. B. BAKER,

Adjutant-General of Iowa.

SIR: I have this day started part of the command to relieve your State troops on the northwest frontier. Tomorrow I start more, and the third day the remainder. So your State troops can be discharged when you are ready.

With much regard, your obedient servant,

ALF SULLY, Brigadier General,

Commanding District.⁶

Captain Ingham's company was soon relieved and mustered out of the State service. The hostile Indians had been driven far to the north by General Sully's troops, and the settlers upon the frontier were comparatively free from the dangers which had formerly threatened them. With a sufficient force of United States troops, constantly on duty at the posts where fortifications had been erected by the State of Iowa, and the country to the north thoroughly patrolled by General Sully's cavalry scouts, the danger of the Indians committing depredations upon the homes of the settlers was reduced to the minimum.

While the records do not show that the State troops composing the Northern Border Brigade were ever engaged in serious conflicts with the Indians, they do show that they performed most important service and endured great hardships. During the time they were engaged in constructing the fortifications along the line of the frontier, they were in constant danger. Had the Indians proved too strong to be overcome by the troops under General Sully's command, that officer would have retreated to the State line and united his forces with those of the State. Upon more than one occasion before the works were completed, such a contingency seemed likely to occur. It is therefore evident that those hardy sons of Iowa—who braved the rigors of the northern winters and the risk of fierce conflict with the hostile tribes of Indians who had murdered so many of the hapless settlers on the frontier—are entitled to an honored place in the history of their Country's defenders. The descendants of those hardy pioneers, whose families and homes were saved from destruction, will ever hold in grateful remembrance the men who came to the rescue of their ancestors.⁷

⁶Report of Adjutant General of Iowa, 1864, pages 670 to 673 inclusive, containing the entire correspondence on the subject referred to.

⁷The subjoined roster has been transcribed from the records in the office of the Adjutant General of the State of Iowa. It will be noted that the average age of the officers and men who constituted the Northern Border Brigade was greater than that of the Iowa regiments which were mustered into the service of the United States. It may therefore be reasonably inferred that many of them were married men and the heads of families at the time of their enlistment. Such men could most fully enter into sympathy with those whose families were exposed to the danger of massacre by the Indians.

Southern Border Brigade

(State Militia)

HISTORICAL SKETCH

SOUTHERN BORDER BRIGADE

(State Militia)

Inseparably connected with the history of the operations of the Iowa troops who were never mustered into the service of the United States, but who performed service of inestimable value on the southern border of the State, is the record of those companies composed of men whose homes were constantly in danger in the early days of the War of the Rebellion. Living as they did in the counties bordering upon the State of Missouri, they were compelled to organize for self protection. Rumors—which proved to be well founded—that armed bodies of citizens of the slave holding State of Missouri were being formed for the purpose of invading the State of Iowa, kept the inhabitants of those border counties in a constant state of excitement and apprehension. Under the direction and command of Lieutenant Colonel John Edwards, Aide-de-Camp to Governor Kirkwood, the various companies, which had been hastily organized, were concentrated into camps, and were held in readiness to move promptly across the border, and to resist any attempt of the rebel forces to invade the State of Iowa and plunder the homes of her citizens. The prompt and determined action thus taken undoubtedly saved the people of that part of the State from the horrors of invasion.

In the meantime, the Union men in the State of Missouri were placed in a most desperate situation. They were engaged in a fierce and relentless war with their rebel neighbors. They were being driven from their homes, and their property confiscated for the use of the rebel army. They had appealed to their loyal neighbors across the border in Iowa to aid them in their fight for existence, and they did not appeal in vain. In his report to the Governor, (dated at Pleasant Plains, Iowa, July 28, 1861,) Colonel Edwards states that he had sent to Keokuk and Burlington for two pieces of artillery, and that he was about to start with the forces under his command to reinforce the troops under Captain W. C. Drake of Corydon, then stationed at Allenville, on the border of Ringgold County, Iowa, with the purpose of moving across the line to the support of the loyal Missourians, under Colonel Cranor. The following brief extracts, from the report of Colonel Edwards, will serve to show the condition of affairs on the southern border at that time:

. . . . Captain Cranor, of Gentry County, Mo., had sent to Captain Drake for assistance, as the rebels were fortified on Grand River, reported to be from eight to twelve hundred strong, with three pieces of artillery. Colonel Cranor had under his command about three hundred Union Missouri men, badly armed, and over one hundred Iowans who had volunteered under him. I dispatched a messenger to the various armed companies within reach, ordering them to march and concentrate at Allenville, immediately, also at Chariton. I also sent a messenger to Captain Drake to ascertain more minutely the facts as to the condition of affairs in his vicinity. I started for Captain Drake's camp, but was met twenty-five miles this side by the returning messengers whom I had sent the day before. They confirmed the intelligence brought me the day previous. On reaching Captain Drake's camp, I ascertained that messengers had just arrived from Colonel Cranor's command, conveying the information that the belligerents—then within four miles of each other—had made a treaty of peace. . . .

The "treaty of peace" referred to proved to be but a hollow mockery. It was simply a temporary truce, which served to prevent the armed forces from becoming engaged in battle at that time, but did not put an end to the depredations to which the property of Union citizens was subjected. Continuing his report, Colonel Edwards says:

. . . . The secessionists in that region are more bold than before, and have recommenced mustering under the military laws of the State, which are obnoxious to the Union men and to which they will not submit. The Union men are indignant and mortified at the terms of the treaty. Many have become disheartened—have abandoned their homes and their crops, and are leaving the State. The same feelings have taken hold of many families on the border, in Iowa. I have seen families who, abandoning everything to the fates, have returned to friends in other states. The loyal men of both States, separated merely by an imaginary line, have the same sympathies in a common cause. When the rebels of Missouri seek to injure the property and destroy the lives of Union men of that State, appeals for aid are made to friends and neighbors in Iowa; nor do they appeal in vain. The arming and military parades made by our companies along the border, at most points have produced salutary effects. It strengthens and inspires the Union men of Missouri, and carries over to them the neutrals and a great many terror stricken secessionists. At least fifteen hundred citizens of Iowa left their harvest fields and families and rushed into Missouri to the relief of the Union men. These citizens were armed in every conceivable manner, and were without officers, system or drill. . . . The loyal men of Missouri express their gratitude to the people of Iowa, for their timely aid and support on every trying occasion; everything they possessed was cheerfully offered free of charge, to render our citizens as comfortable as possible. I know several gentlemen who not only fed hundreds of Iowa citizens and their horses, daily, for a week at a time, but spent hundreds of dollars—sometimes their last dollar—in this benevolent manner. On account of the excitement and constant alarm along the border, our citizens lost much valuable time, by frequent hurrying to arms; therefore a vast amount of grain was lost on the fields. . . .

Realizing the necessity of maintaining a permanent force of State troops along the southern border, Colonel Edwards exercised the authority given him by the Governor, and proceeded to thoroughly organize the companies, and to bring them up to a good state of efficiency in drill and discipline. In his official report he makes the following statement, showing the conditions then existing, and his efforts to establish a military system, under which more prompt and effective service could be rendered:

In view of apprehended outbreaks, sooner or later, on the borders of Ringgold and Taylor Counties, I have ordered into camp at this place those companies which have received marching orders, and are already on the way to the scene of difficulty. For the reasons before stated, coupled with the news of our late reverses at Manassas Junction, the rebels here and elsewhere will be inspired with new vigor. I came into camp last night with three companies; the rest will follow today and tomorrow. I have commenced systematizing every department of the service, placing the most competent men in the various positions. The strictest discipline will be adopted and drill performed as in the United States service. Every arrangement necessary for the comfort and health of the soldiers will be carried out. The most rigid economy will be practiced, and an exact account rendered of every cent of expense incurred. The times are such that the people demand that something be done at once and effectively. We are so situated on the border that, when we are called upon to act, we must act at once. Heretofore we have had no system, and if called into action our men were liable to be cut off by the enemy and by one another. . . . I will keep out scouts for the next ten days, in the vicinity where danger will be most likely to occur. I will be ready to strike at a moment's notice. . . . The principal design of the secessionists in the northern part of the State of Missouri is to keep up the excitement there as much as possible, in order to divert attention from Governor Jackson's operations in the southern part of the State. They will do all in their power to harass Union men in both States. . . .¹

About the time these militia organizations were being perfected—as shown in the foregoing extract—the Fourth Regiment of Iowa Volunteer Infantry was in rendezvous at Council Bluffs, and, in accordance with instructions from Governor Kirkwood, Colonel Grenville M. Dodge marched with eight companies of his regiment, for the purpose of co-operating with the Iowa Militia in the defense of the border counties, and, if found necessary, to cross the line into Missouri and reinforce the loyal Missourians, commanded by Colonel Cranor. In his official report to the Governor, Colonel Dodge states, that he proceeded with his command to a point thirteen miles north of the Missouri line, where he was met by his scout—Sergeant Teal—who had been in the rebel camp near Gentryville, Mo., and found them about six hundred strong, occupying a good position, but poorly armed and equipped. The Sergeant confirmed the report of the truce (or compromise), and stated that the rebels had apparently disbanded and returned to their homes. At the close of his report, Colonel Dodge made the following statement:

There is no doubt but great excitement exists on both sides of the line. My scout canvassed pretty thoroughly all the counties of northwest Missouri, and found that the rebels of that section were fearing an invasion from Iowa equally as much as the people of southern Iowa were from Missouri. The rebel camp was made chiefly for the purpose of drilling their forces, in order that when Jackson came (which was confidently anticipated), they might be ready to assist him in driving the Union men out of North Missouri. Gentry and Nodaway Counties are now nearly vacant; crops are neglected and farms for miles deserted. On breaking up their camp but very few—say one hundred eighty—appeared to ratify the compromise, the balance scattering, sinking their field pieces in the river, and burying their small arms. I am fully persuaded that arms distributed in our border counties, to at least one company in each county, will render everything safe, as the Union forces in North Missouri are now stronger than the rebels.²

Subsequent events proved that the fear of the rebels of northwest Missouri, of an invasion from Iowa, was well founded. The First Regiment, Western Division, Iowa Volunteer Militia, under command of Colonel John R. Morledge, made three expeditions into the State of Missouri, the last of which extended to the city of St. Joseph, which was evacuated by the rebel forces upon the approach of the Union troops. Colonel Morledge, in his official report to Governor Kirkwood, gives a detailed account of these expeditions, in the last of which five or six of the enemy were killed, and two rebel flags and many prisoners were captured. During the progress of the last expedition, the number of Union troops was constantly augmented by the accession of loyal citizens of Missouri, who had joined the column at different points along the line of march and, upon arriving at St. Joseph, the number had increased to four thousand. The rebel forces retreated in the direction of Lexington, and subsequently joined the rebel army under command of General Price. At the conclusion of his report, Colonel Morledge says:

St. Joseph looked desolate, and as though she had been despoiled of all her goods. Whole blocks of business houses were closed up, many of which had been broken open and robbed of all or nearly all their contents, by the rebels in their flight through the city two days before.³

Colonel Morledge remained in camp at St. Joseph for three days, and then returned with his regiment to Iowa.

Adjutant General N. B. Baker, in his report, published in 1863, (Vol. 1, page xv,) says:

The General Assembly at the Extra Session, 1862, with almost entire unanimity directed the organization of the Northern and Southern Border Brigades. As these organizations are of great interest to the State, I have inserted in the Appendix their rosters—Northern marked (B), and Southern marked (C). These rosters show that the number of men enlisted in the Northern Border Brigade was two hundred fifty, and in the Southern Border Brigade seven hundred ninety-four. In the Appendix, marked (K), will be found reports of Colonels Edwards, Dodge and Morledge, relating to the difficulties on the southern border, in 1861, and the Governor's instructions in relation to the organization of the Southern Border Brigade, in 1862.

The following order was issued by Adjutant General Baker, soon after the passage of the act by the General Assembly:

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
DAVENPORT, Oct. 8, 1862.

General Orders No. 98: Under the law of the last session of the General Assembly, Chapter 17, entitled an Act to provide for the better protection of the southern border of this State, the Governor has ordered that four battalions of troops, for the purpose indicated in said law, be forthwith raised, to be numbered and located as follows:

First Battalion to be composed of troops raised in the counties of Lee and Van Buren.

Second Battalion will be composed of troops from the counties of Wapello, Davis and Appanoose.

Third Battalion will be composed of troops from the counties of Wayne, Decatur and Ringgold.

Fourth Battalion will be composed of troops from the counties of Taylor, Page and Fremont.

These battalions will constitute the Southern Border Brigade. The companies composing these battalions will be designated by this Department alone.

By order of Commander-in-Chief.

zation of the Southern Border Brigade. It will be noted that, in his letter of instructions in relation to that organization, Governor Kirkwood practically adopted the suggestions made by Colonel Grenville M. Dodge, in the concluding portion of his report, heretofore quoted in this sketch. The letter gives a clear view of the conditions then existing in that part of the State, and is, therefore, here quoted in full, as follows:

W. W. THOMAS,
CORYDON, Wayne Co., Iowa.
EXECUTIVE OFFICE, Iowa, Sept. 11, 1862.

SIR: A law has passed the General Assembly authorizing the organization in your county, and the other border counties, of a company of men for home defense against guerrilla bands from Missouri. The law will soon be published, and you will be able to see its provisions and learn its objects. I desire you to enlist the company for your county. I am informed that in some of the border counties there are men whose loyalty is doubtful, and whose sympathies are with the rebels. Such men must not be admitted into the company. I will not, if I can avoid it, be instrumental in placing the public arms in the hands of any man whose devotion to the Government in this hour of peril is doubtful. I do not mean by this that none but Republicans shall be enlisted. I only mean just what I say, that your company must consist of open, known, unconditional supporters of the Government and of the Union, and I hold you responsible, if you accept this service, that you enlist none others. Your company can consist of not less than eighty, nor more than one hundred, men, all told. When you have enlisted the minimum number, you will call the men together and have them elect one Captain and one First Lieutenant, and report the names to the Adjutant General, who will issue commissions. The men are enlisted to act as mounted men, when their services may be needed, and each man must furnish his own horse, saddle, bridle, blankets and clothing. It is not intended these men should all be on constant service. A few men from each company will daily act as scouts, and the others are to be at home, holding themselves as minute men. Please also report to me at Iowa City your action in this matter. I trust you will feel it to be your duty to do this work, and to do it firmly and thoroughly. It is for the defense of your own county, and the service should be promptly performed. If, for any reason, you cannot act in this matter, please hand this authority, indorsed by you, to some man who will do it in the manner herein set forth, and report his name and post-office address to me immediately.

Very respectfully,
SAMUEL J. KIRKWOOD.

Similar letters were addressed to James H. Summers, Decatur City, Decatur County; Charles W. Lowrie, Keokuk, Lee County; John R. Morledge, Clarinda, Page County; E. S. Hedges, Sydney, Fremont County; D. W. Dixon, Ottumwa, Wapello County; R. A. Moser, Lexington, Taylor County; Joseph Dickey, Farmington, Van Buren County; H. Tannehill, Centerville, Appanoose County; H. B. Horn, Bloomfield, Davis County; Thomas Ross, Mount Ayr, Ringgold County.⁵

Supplementing the foregoing instructions of the Governor, Adjutant General Baker, under date of October 14, 1862, issued an order which reads as follows:

In order that the Southern Border Brigade shall not be an unnecessary expense to the State, it is directed that not more than ten men shall be detailed for special service from any company in any battalion, unless there be an actual invasion, and then the additional force must be ordered out by the Major of the battalion; and in every case full report must be made to the Governor, with a statement of the facts upon which the additional force was ordered into the field, and the officer making the order will be held responsible for the correctness of his statements and actions.⁶

⁵Report of Adjutant General of Iowa, 1863, Vol. 2, page 879.

⁶Report of Adjutant General of Iowa, 1863, Vol. 2, page 757.

The wisdom of the action taken by the Governor, in thus creating an efficient and adequately strong force upon the southern borders of the State, was subsequently demonstrated most fully by the better conditions which existed in that section, from the time the organization was established until the close of the war. It is true that the inhabitants of that part of the State did not at any time, while the great struggle was going on, enjoy the feeling of complete immunity from danger which was held by those whose homes were farther away from the scene of strife. They had—in addition to contributing their full quota to the regiments at the front—to maintain the militia organizations, from their own numbers, and for their own protection. The burdens of war therefore rested more heavily upon the people of those border counties than upon those who lived in the interior of the State.

The report made by Colonel Edwards—at the special request of General Baker—gives such a complete summary of the operations of the Iowa State troops on the southern border and in the State of Missouri, that the compiler deems its quotation appropriate to the completion of this historical sketch. It is therefore quoted in full, as follows:

SPRINGFIELD, MO., December 24, 1862.

N. B. BAKER, Adjutant General, State of Iowa.

SIR: In compliance with your request of the 7th inst., to furnish you a brief statement of the expedition under my command, which marched into the State of Missouri during the month of September, 1861, I have the honor to report: that, as Aid-de-Camp to his Excellency, Governor Kirkwood, I had charge of the border between the States of Iowa and Missouri, from the east line of Appanoose County to the west line of Taylor County. The Civil War, which then convulsed the people of Missouri, raged with great violence in the northern part of the State, loyalists and rebels striving for the ascendancy. The bitter feelings engendered between them often broke out in open hostilities, which more or less involved the peace and security of the citizens of Iowa residing near the border. The rebels, acting on the offensive, were the first to arm and unite themselves into bands, to compel the loyalists either to unite with them or take the other alternative of leaving the State; hence thousands, abandoning their homes, fled to Iowa for refuge. During the month of August, Colonel Patten of Gentry, and Colonel Sanders of Andrew County, Mo., were engaged in organizing large bands of rebels in the northern part of that State, near the Iowa line, with the threatened intention of invading Iowa, to supply their commands with horses, principally; then to unite their forces under General Sterling Price, at that time advancing from Arkansas upon Lexington, Mo. By a previous understanding between Governor Kirkwood and General Pope, who was at that time in command of northern Missouri, I was authorized, in case of any emergency that might arise, to march such of the troops of Iowa, as had been assigned to me, into Missouri, to assist the struggling loyal citizens of that State, and, if possible, to prevent an invasion by the rebels into Iowa.

If fighting had to be done, it was preferable to do it in Missouri, where the trouble commenced, and to spare our citizens the consequences of an invasion by the enemy. I was further ordered on arriving at the line, to report to the commanding General. I did so, and my command, while I remained in the State of Missouri, were received as Federal soldiers. Before I called out the troops under my command, however, a large number of citizens on the border, on both sides of the line, advised me of the existing state of things; also Colonel Cranor, commanding the Union forces of Gentry County, Mo. At the numerous and urgent requests of these persons, and after dispatching messengers to the scene of difficulty, and satisfying myself as to the truth of the statements made to me, I ordered out all the troops I could collect and arm—in all between seven and eight hundred—requiring them to rendezvous at Allenville, near the line. Without camp equipage or commissary stores, without any previous preparation, in less than one week's time for organization, I had put my expedition on the march from Allenville. At that time at least three hundred loyal families of Missouri had been driven out of that State, and were then encamped on the prairies of Iowa. I found the whole country in a state of great excitement; no business on either side of the line was being prosecuted; a large number of families in Iowa had abandoned their crops in harvest time, and fled into the interior of the State for safety. A band of rebels, numbering some twelve hundred, were fortified in a bend of Grand River, about twenty-five miles from the line; several other bands were at other points near by. I pushed my command on rapidly, when the rebels commenced retreating, the different bands uniting before reaching St. Joseph, Mo. Before reaching St. Joseph, I formed a junction with Colonel Cranor, when we were ordered by General Pope to advance rapidly on that place, the rebels having possession of the city and being engaged in plundering the citizens. It is estimated that they took seventy-five thousand dollars worth of goods from the loyal citizens of that city.

At the time of my arrival at St. Joseph, there were no Federal forces at that post, or on the whole line of the Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad. I was ordered to proceed to Chillicothe, leaving three hundred of my men at St. Joseph to garrison that post. While I was at Chillicothe, the surrender of Lexington, under Colonel Mulligan, took place. Mine were the nearest Union forces to him at the time, and I had but four hundred and fifty men. After the surrender of Colonel Mulligan, the rebel General Raines advanced upon Chillicothe with four thousand cavalry and one section of a battery, his pickets being within fifteen miles of Chillicothe, while Lewis Best, a noted rebel, had a band of three hundred, ten miles north of the post, to cut off my retreat. I telegraphed to General Fremont for reinforcements (the telegraph wire west of me being cut). He responded that I should be reinforced in the morning with one regiment. A rebel in the office, named Jones, looking over the shoulder of the operator, thought it read ten regiments.⁷ Mounting his horse, he rode to the camp of General Raines, whom he informed of the contents of the telegram. It caused that General to retreat to Lexington, which saved my little band, the post, and the railroad. Later—reinforcements having arrived, I was relieved, and ordered to return home with my troops. Such was the excitement of the time that my command was continually overrun with refugees, seeking safety. I made a forced march of one hundred miles in four days, subsisting upon the enemy as best we could. I took forty prominent rebels prisoners, whom I forwarded to St. Louis, and some property, which was turned over to General Prentiss. The men of my command were generally substantial farmers, a large number of them over fifty years of age. They endured the fatigue of the campaign with fortitude. Their bravery was tested at several critical periods; they never flinched or complained of their hard fare. They deserve well of their Country. These troops served one month.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant.

JOHN EDWARDS, Lieutenant Colonel and Aid-de-Camp,
*Commanding Iowa Troops.*⁸

It will thus be seen that these hardy sons of Iowa—insufficiently equipped and without military experience—bravely co-operated with the troops who were regularly enrolled in the service of the United States, in putting down treason and rebellion in the State of Missouri. They had enlisted for the purpose of defending their own homes against invasion and possible destruction, but, when called upon to aid their loyal brethren on the other side of the border, they nobly responded to the call. At the time this sketch is written—nearly fifty years after the events it describes had transpired—a few of the aged men who belonged to the Southern Border Brigade are still living in their old homes, and a few of those against whom they contended, across the border in Missouri, still survive. These men and their descendants are now living in peace and amity under the flag of a restored Union. The bitter enmities which existed in those days of strife and discord are forgotten, and the two great Commonwealths of Iowa and Missouri vie with each other only in their efforts to contribute to the strength, greatness and perpetuity of the Great Republic to which they belong.⁹

IOWA MILITARY ORGANIZATIONS

SPANISH-AMERICAN AND PHILIPPINE WARS

(The Forty-ninth, Fiftieth, Fifty-first and Fifty-second Regiments Iowa Volunteer Infantry; the Fifth and Sixth Iowa Batteries of Light Artillery; the Twelfth Company United States Signal Corps, and Company M, Seventh United States Infantry—Immunes.)

The proclamation of William McKinley, President of the United States, (bearing date April 23, 1898,) recited the causes which had led up to the declaration of war against Spain, and called for one hundred twenty-five thousand volunteers, for the purpose of prosecuting the war. On April 25, 1898, the Governor of Iowa was advised by telegram from the Secretary of War of the number of troops which would be assigned as the quota of the State. Telegrams were at once sent to the commanding officers of the four infantry regiments of the Iowa National Guard, instructing them to report with their regiments—with the least possible delay—at the designated rendezvous, Camp McKinley, located on the State Fair Grounds, near Des Moines, Iowa. The order was promptly obeyed, and the work of reorganization and preparation for muster into the service of the United States at once began, under the direction of Captain J. A. Olmsted, of the Ninth Regiment, United States Cavalry, then on duty with the Iowa National Guard, and who had been detailed by the War Department as Mustering Officer for the State of Iowa. In designating the numbers of the four regiments, it was decided by the Governor to continue the series as shown by the Iowa Regiments which had been engaged in the Civil War. The First Regiment of the Iowa National Guard, therefore, became the Forty-ninth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and the Second, Third, and Fourth were changed respectively to the Fiftieth, Fifty-first and Fifty-second Regiments of Iowa Volunteer Infantry.

Subsequently, the State was called upon to furnish two Batteries of Light Artillery, one company for the United States Signal Corps, and one company of Colored Immunes. Complete rosters of all these organizations will be found in the succeeding pages, immediately following the historical sketch of each regiment or company. The Colonels of each of the Infantry regiments submitted detailed reports to the Adjutant General of Iowa.¹ From these reports, and other official data found in the records of the office of the Adjutant General of Iowa, the following historical sketches have been compiled. The foregoing brief preliminary sketch is simply explanatory of the events which led up to the formation of the organizations whose subsequent movements and operations are described in the regular sequence in which they occurred.

¹The reports referred to are included in the official report of Adjutant General Melvin H. Byers, for the biennial period ending November 30, 1899, pages 419 to 441 inclusive.

Forty-ninth Regiment

Iowa Volunteer Infantry

HISTORICAL SKETCH

FORTY-NINTH REGIMENT IOWA VOLUNTEER INFANTRY

This regiment was composed of the twelve companies which formerly constituted the First Regiment Iowa National Guard. It was mustered into the service of the United States at Camp McKinley, Des Moines, Iowa, by Captain J. A. Olmsted, of the Regular Army, June 2, 1898. It left the State on June 11, 1898, and was conveyed by rail to Jacksonville, Fla., and, upon its arrival there, was assigned to the Third Brigade, Second Division, Seventh Army Corps. It moved from Jacksonville to Savannah, Ga., on October 25, 1898, and from thence to Havana, Cuba, December 19, 1898. The following account of its movements and operations, during its term of service, is condensed from the official report of its commander, Colonel William G. Dows.

Upon the arrival of the regiment at Jacksonville, June 14, 1898, Colonel Dows reported in person to Major General Fitz Hugh Lee for orders, and was assigned to the Third Brigade, commanded by Brigadier General Henry C. Hasbrouck, of the Regular Army. The location of the first camp proved to be a mistake, for, as soon as the rains began, the ground was flooded, and it was found necessary to move to higher ground, which was done, and the new camp, near Panama Park, about three miles from Jacksonville, was found to be a great improvement; but the long, hot summer which followed proved a severe test to the health and strength of the men, who had been brought up in a more temperate climate. During its stay at this camp the regiment was recruited to the maximum strength, and was brought to a high standard of drill and discipline. On October 25, 1898, Colonel Dows received orders to proceed with his regiment to Savannah, Ga. The camp at Savannah was pleasantly located, and the officers and men of the regiment greatly enjoyed their stay there. On December 19, 1898, the regiment was ordered to embark on transport, and was conveyed to Havana, Cuba, where it arrived December 21, 1898. Two days later the regiment marched through the city of Havana, and thence to a small station called Quemadas—a part of the town of Marianoo—eight miles from Havana. The subsequent service of the regiment, while it remained on the Island of Cuba, was of a more or less arduous character. Companies were detailed for the purpose of guarding the water supply for the city of Havana, performing provost guard duty, and taking charge of some of the forts and public property that had been surrendered by the Spanish Government. During this period the regiment enjoyed a brief relaxation from the monotony of camp and garrison life. With its brigade and division it was ordered on a march, through a part of the island, which occupied several days.

On January 1, 1899, the regiment participated in the parade of troops, and the formal ceremonies attending the lowering of the Spanish flag and the raising of the flag of the United States, in the city of Havana. The regiment remained on the Island of Cuba until April 4, 1899, upon which date it received orders to return to Savannah, Ga., at which place it was mustered out of the service of the United States, on May 13, 1899.

In concluding his official report, Colonel Dows commends in the highest terms the conduct of the officers and men of his regiment, and calls attention to the fact that the Regular Army officers, under whom it served, had given the regiment many compliments in their reports to the War Department, for its efficiency in drill and discipline. It will thus be seen that the Forty-ninth Regiment made the most effectual use of its limited opportunities. It maintained the high record established by Iowa soldiers in the Civil War, and, had the opportunity come to it, would no doubt have won distinction on the field of battle. It is, therefore, fully entitled to an honored place in the history of those Iowa regiments which performed such service as was required of them, in connection with the Spanish-American War.

Fiftieth Regiment

Iowa Volunteer Infantry

HISTORICAL SKETCH

FIFTIETH REGIMENT IOWA VOLUNTEER INFANTRY

This regiment—formerly the Second Regiment Iowa National Guard—was ordered into quarters at Camp McKinley, Des Moines, Iowa, on the 25th day of April, 1898, and was there mustered into the service of the United States, on the 17th day of May, 1898, by Captain J. A. Olmsted, of the Regular Army. On May 21, 1898, Colonel Jackson received orders from the War Department to proceed with his regiment by rail to Tampa, Fla. While enroute, however, the Colonel received a telegram from the Secretary of War, changing the destination of the regiment to Jacksonville, Fla. Upon its arrival at Jacksonville, May 24, 1898, the regiment went into camp on a flat tract of land near the city. The camp was later designated "Cuba Libre." When the rainy season began, notwithstanding its high sounding name, it proved to be a very poor location for an encampment of troops, a portion of the ground being flooded, compelling the men to construct temporary quarters, elevated above the ground. The inevitable result was a considerable amount of sickness among the men, which, in a number of cases, proved fatal. It was not until the first of August, however, that the protests of the officers and men prevailed, and the camp was removed to higher ground. Nevertheless, the general climatic conditions were unfavorable, and, from August 10th to September 5th, the daily sick reports showed from one hundred to three hundred sick in hospital or relieved from duty by the Surgeon. There was no time, however, when the regiment did not have at least eight hundred enlisted men available for duty.

The regiment was assigned to the Second Brigade, Second Division, Seventh Army Corps. The brigade was constituted as follows: First Wisconsin, Ninth Illinois and Fiftieth Iowa Regiments of Infantry. General Bancroft of Massachusetts was in command of the brigade at that time, but there had been several previous changes, both in the make up of the brigade and its commanders. At an earlier period, Colonel Jackson had for a time (by virtue of his seniority in rank) had command of the division, Lieutenant Colonel Lambert, in the meantime, commanding the brigade, the command of the Fiftieth Iowa devolving upon Major Moffit. On August 9, 1898, Governor L. M. Shaw, accompanied by Adjutant General Byers and Colonel E. G. Pratt, made a visit of inspection to Camp Cuba Libre. The Forty-ninth and Fiftieth Iowa marched in review before the Governor, who subsequently made a careful inspection of the two regiments, with a view to ascertaining what could be done for the betterment of sanitary conditions.

On August 20, 1898, Colonel D. V. Jackson tendered his resignation and retired from the service. Lieutenant Colonel E. E. Lambert was then promoted to Colonel and assumed command of the regiment, which he retained until the close of its term of service. On September 12, 1898, orders were received from the War Department, directing the return of the regiment to Iowa. The sick were placed on board a Pullman car, and every arrangement was made for their comfort during the journey. Major John Tillie and Assistant Surgeon H. A. Boyle were detailed to make the necessary arrangements, and, to their untiring efforts, was due the return of the sick soldiers to their homes with the least possible discomfort. The regiment was transported by rail, and arrived at Des Moines, Iowa, on September 17, 1898. The men and officers were then granted a furlough of thirty days, with the exception of Lieutenant John S. Howard and a detail of sixty-four men who were left at Camp McKinley, to take care of the sick and guard the property. The furloughs were subsequently extended ten days, at the expiration of which time the regiment had reassembled in camp, and was mustered out of the service of the United States, November 30, 1898.

The foregoing sketch has been compiled from the official reports of Colonels Jackson and Lambert.¹ Those reports describe many incidents connected with the service of the regiment, which—on account of limitation of space—are not included in this condensed history, which only contains the leading and most notable events which occurred during its term of service. The subjoined roster, which has been carefully transcribed from the official records, contains the names of all the men and officers of the regiment.²

At the close of his official report, Colonel Lambert says: "I desire to take this opportunity to again express my gratitude to the officers and men of my command for their many courtesies and the willingness with which they co-operated with me in all the work for the betterment of the entire regiment. I can assure you that no regiment ever entered the service that was more loyal, energetic, enthusiastic, or more anxious to demonstrate to the world that they would fight unto death for the honor of the flag and their country."

Fifty-first Regiment

Iowa Volunteer Infantry

HISTORICAL SKETCH

FIFTY-FIRST REGIMENT IOWA VOLUNTEER INFANTRY

The following condensed historical sketch of the Fifty-first Regiment is compiled from the records in the office of the Adjutant General of Iowa. The most important features of the service performed by the regiment are described in the official report of Colonel John C. Loper.¹ This report includes many incidents of interest which—on account of the necessity for condensation—could not be included in this sketch. The compiler will, however, endeavor to describe the most important events which marked the service of the regiment. The fortune of war gave to the Fifty-first Iowa a more extended field of operations than was accorded to either of the other Iowa regiments which were enrolled for service in the Spanish-American War. It cannot, therefore, be regarded as a discrimination in favor of this regiment, that a greater amount of space is occupied in describing the service which it performed.

The regiment was organized from the Third Regiment Iowa National Guard. It was ordered into quarters at Camp McKinley, Des Moines, Iowa, on the 25th day of April, 1898, and was there mustered into the service of the United States, by Captain J. A. Olmsted, of the Regular Army, on the 30th day of May, 1898. On June 2, 1898, Colonel Loper received orders from the War Department, assigning his regiment to the Philippine expeditionary forces, and directing him to proceed with the regiment to San Francisco, Cal., and, upon his arrival there, to report to the General in command of that department. In compliance with these orders, the regiment left Des Moines, Iowa, on June 5, 1898, and was conveyed by rail—on three separate trains—to San Francisco, Cal., where it arrived on June 10, 1898, and was ordered into camp at Camp Merritt. Just before leaving Des Moines, the regiment—which had been mustered in with but sixty-five men to each company—was ordered to be recruited to the maximum strength of one hundred six men to the company. Recruiting officers were left in Iowa to enlist and forward the requisite number of recruits. By the latter part of June the regiment had been recruited to its full strength.

During its stay in San Francisco the regiment was brought up to a good state of efficiency in drill and discipline. Its first camp proved to be both uncomfortable and unhealthful, being located near the ocean front and exposed to cold winds and fogs. The location of the camp was subsequently changed to the Presidio, a more sheltered and comfortable place. While the regiment had confidently expected to be sent to the Philippine Islands in June, a series of what seemed unavoidable delays occurred, and it was not until the 3d day of November, 1898, that it was ordered to embark on the transport "Pennsylvania." On the same day, it sailed for Manila, Philippine Islands. At the time of embarkation, the regiment had been reduced from fifty officers and one thousand three hundred thirty-two men, to fifty officers and one thousand forty men. Twenty-seven men had died of disease in San Francisco. All the men who were unfit for service, and those having urgent necessity for being relieved from the service, were discharged.

The transport reached Honolulu November 11th, where it remained four days. Thirty-three men of the regiment were left in the military hospital at Honolulu. The voyage was resumed and Manila Bay was reached on December 7, 1898; distance traveled from San Francisco, six thousand nine hundred ninety miles. The regiment was assigned to duty with the First Separate Brigade, Eighth Army Corps, Department of the Pacific, General M. P. Miller commanding. The regiment was ordered to proceed to Iloilo, Panay Island, on December 26, 1898; arrived and anchored six miles off Iloilo on December 28th, and, on the 30th, moved up to within one mile of the city; distance traveled, three hundred thirty-seven miles. Regiment left Iloilo harbor January 29, 1899, and arrived at Cavite January 31, 1899. Had remained on the transport "Pennsylvania" during the month of January, awaiting orders. On February 2, 1899, the First Battalion went ashore, together with Companies E and M, Second Battalion. It was not until February 5th that the last troops left the ship, Companies C and L being the last to disembark.

The landing at Cavite marked the close of a most remarkable period in the history of the regiment. For ninety-four days it had lived on the "Pennsylvania," enduring the monotony and inactivity incident to life on board a troopship. Not a death had occurred, however, and the health of the men was so extraordinarily good that the hospital claimed but two patients when the regiment landed, and these two were able to walk ashore. At no time had the health of the regiment been better, for which much credit was due to the efficient service rendered by the hospital corps, under the direction of Surgeons Fairchild and Macrae.

The last troops were not yet ashore when the storm of war descended. At 11 o'clock Saturday night, February 4th, the call to arms was sounded. Word was sent from Manila that the insurgents had attacked the Americans at that place. From across the bay the thunder of guns and the roll of volleys told that the conflict was on. It was expected that the natives would attack Cavite from San Roque, but they did not, and the men slept on their arms for the night. For the next few days the Fifty-first Iowa was engaged on outpost duty in the vicinity of San Roque. On February 8th, Admiral Dewey asked Colonel Loper to send a flag of truce to the insurgents at San Roque, and advise them that if the town was not evacuated by 9 o'clock the next day, it would be bombarded. The message was delivered, but, when the hour arrived for the bombardment to begin, it was discovered that the natives had fled, after setting fire to the town, which was mostly destroyed. Majors Hume and Moore, with the Second and Third Battalions of the Fifty-first Iowa, together with other troops, and a battery of artillery, entered the town, and endeavored to save what property had not been destroyed. These troops advanced to the causeway beyond the town—meeting with but slight opposition—where they found the outposts of the enemy; here they were ordered to halt and await further orders. On February 11th, the Second Battalion returned to Cavite and the Third Battalion remained on duty near San Roque, performing outpost duty. This duty was exacting, and the troops were frequently exposed to the fire of the enemy. On February 15th, the insurgents made an advance, but were soon driven back. On February 18th, Colonel Loper was ordered to send a battalion of the Fifty-first Iowa to Manila.

In obedience to this order, the First Battalion, under command of Major Dugan, embarked on lighters and was towed across the bay at nightfall. The battalion landed on the Luneta, and was ordered to report for duty to General Anderson, on the south line, about five miles south of Manila. Assistant Surgeon Macrae was detailed to accompany this battalion.

The First Battalion bivouacked for the night near an old monastery at Pasai, where it was afterwards for a time encamped. A few miles to the left there was frequent heavy firing, and the booming of field batteries, the quick fire of machine guns and the volleys of musketry soon became familiar sounds. In the immediate front of the battalion firing was frequent, and "the song of the Mauser" was also soon well known by the men in the trenches. Companies of the battalion served in the vicinity of Culi Culi church, Pasai, and San Pedro Macati. The service was arduous. Day and night a harassing fire was kept up by the sharpshooters of the enemy, concealed in the bamboos and jungles in front. Outpost duty was perilous, involving much scouting and patrolling. On March 28th, while with a scouting party from Company H, Private Fred Borduwine was wounded in the leg and captured by the enemy. Captain Worthington at once took out a party of eighteen men from Company H, and six from Company A, all volunteers, and began a diligent search for the missing man. Upon reaching the place where Private Borduwine was wounded and captured, the enemy was again encountered and, in the conflict which ensued, the enemy was roughly handled, many of them being killed or wounded, while the Americans, moving back by the left flank, retraced their course without loss. Private Borduwine was not found. It was subsequently learned that he was taken to Malibay, by the Philipinos, but his fate was never known. He is presumed to have died while in the hands of the enemy, as he was never heard from afterwards.

On March 26th, 1899, Companies C and M—under Major Hume—were ordered to Manila for provost guard duty. A few days later, Companies E and L were also ordered to Manila, and Companies I and G were ordered to return to Cavite and assist in guarding the town. On April 14th, the Second Battalion—under Major Hume—was ordered to Malolos. The Third Battalion, with headquarters, followed the next day and, on April 16th, the First Battalion left the trenches at Culi Culi church and marched to Manila, at which place the entire regiment was concentrated and assigned to duty with the Second Brigade, Second Division, Major General McArthur being in command of the division, and Brigadier General Hale, of the brigade. At this time, Colonel Loper was—on account of sickness—unable to remain in command of the regiment, and the command devolved upon Lieutenant Colonel Miller, who proved to be a most able and efficient regimental commander. The campaign which resulted in the fall of Calumpit and San Fernando began on April 23, 1899. The Fifty-first Iowa was prominently identified with the most important engagements and operations of this campaign. On the date last mentioned, a party of scouts and a small body of cavalry became engaged with a force of the enemy, well posted behind intrenchments at Quingua, and a battalion of the Fifty-first Iowa, composed of Companies E, L, G and I, and the First Nebraska Regiment, were hurried forward to their support. A brisk engagement ensued, resulting in the complete rout of the enemy and the capture of Quingua by the Americans. The day was intensely hot, and in the open rice fields the men suffered greatly. The struggle lasted for three hours, when the enemy was forced to abandon his strongly intrenched position. Lieutenant Colonel Miller, with Companies M, K and B, came up in time to participate in the fight. The Fifty-first Iowa had seven men wounded in this engagement. That night the entire regiment was concentrated at Quingua. At daybreak, April 24th, Hale's entire brigade crossed the Bagbag River and moved down parallel with the right bank of that stream, toward Calumpit. The firing line, from two to three miles in length, swept the enemy before it as it advanced. The Fifty-first Iowa was on the extreme right, the Third Battalion, under Major Moore, being in support. The brigade fought its way through miles of rice fields and jungles. Near the town of Pulilan, a short distance from Quingua, the right of the regiment encountered a strong force. After a brisk engagement, in which eighty Philipinos were killed, the enemy was driven from the field. The Second and Third Battalions, and Company D of the First Battalion, participated in this engagement. Toward evening the First Battalion, Companies H, F, A and D, under Major Duggan, joined a South Dakota regiment in driving a body of the enemy out of a long trench, reaching far out from the Bagbag River, four miles from Calumpit. Here Major Duggan was wounded in the arm. There were five others wounded, making six casualties in the regiment during the day.

At daybreak the next day, General Hale's brigade drew near the defenses of Calumpit. At 10 o'clock Hale's and Wheaton's brigades were moving forward to the attack. The artillery and musketry fire of both brigades was soon in full play, and the enemy was driven from his strong line of works, after a brief struggle. The Fifty-first Iowa performed its full share of duty during this important engagement. The regiment went into temporary quarters at Calumpit. On April 29th, the First Battalion was ordered to proceed to Bocaue, fifteen miles from Manila. The next day the battalion escorted a supply train ten miles in the direction of General Lawton's forces, near the mountains, and, on May 1st, rejoined the regiment at Calumpit. On May 2nd and 3rd, the regiment was engaged in clearing the country around Quingua of scattered bands of the enemy, and, on May 4th, advanced—with its brigade and division—on San Fernando, the insurgents' Capital. The Third Battalion, under Major Moore, was left to guard the railroad bridge over the Rio Grande de Pampanga. The First and Second Battalions led the advance of Hale's brigade through the deep mud of the Candaba swamp, and drove the enemy, in full retreat, through Santo Tomas. Here the division bivouacked for the night. The next morning the First and Second Battalions of the Fifty-first Iowa, with no support, and without other aid than a single rapid-fire gun, descended on San Fernando. General Hale directed the movement in person. The Iowa troops charged across the river before San Fernando, scattered a force of the enemy left behind to burn the town, and sent them flying across the fields. The Fifty-first Iowa, therefore, had the honor of being the first to enter the rebel Capital.

The Third Battalion was soon brought forward, and the regiment was again united. Here the regiment lay for some weeks, enjoying a well earned rest. For months to come it was engaged in the performance of outpost duty and occasional fighting, mostly in resisting night attacks on the garrison. With the advent of the rainy season there was a marked increase in sickness among the men and officers of the regiment. On May 25th, 26th and 31st, portions of the regiment came into conflict with the enemy. Four men of the regiment were wounded in these engagements. On June 16: 1899, the enemy made a general attack on the American forces at San Fernando, and the Fifty-first Iowa bore its full part in resisting the attack. The outpost of the Iowa troops was located on the north front of the town. The First and Second Battalions held the left, and the Third Battalion the right, of the line. During the engagement the regiment had five men wounded.² Through the month of June there were frequent night attacks upon the outposts, in resisting which, several men of the regiment were wounded. At the close of June, thirty-six men were discharged for the purpose of enabling them to enlist in the Thirty-sixth Infantry United States Volunteers. A month later forty men were discharged for re-enlistment in the Eleventh Cavalry United States Volunteers.

On July 21, 1899, Lieutenant Guy E. Logan commanded a scouting party, sent out to locate outposts of the enemy. On August 9, 1899, ten companies of the regiment marched to the outpost of the Seventeenth Infantry, and took part in the advance against the enemy at Calulut, meeting with considerable resistance from the enemy. Companies F and K did not take part in the movement, but were, at the same time, engaged in supporting two guns of Battery E, First Artillery, in action on the road to Mexico. The regiment had, at this time, become so reduced in numbers, from disease and wounds, that but two hundred thirty-six men out of the ten companies were available for duty when Calulut was taken. General McArthur requested all the men, who could possibly do so, to take part in the initial attack; those who could not stand the hard march could be excused and remain in camp. Quite a number of the men and officers who had been in the hospital for some time took part in the advance. They went as far as they could, and, when the limit of their strength was reached, were excused by the surgeons. It will thus be seen that there was not only no disposition to shirk from duty, but that these brave men were ever ready to respond to the call to march against the enemy, as long as they were able to keep on their feet.

After the capture of Calulut, a scouting party of fifty men of the regiment, under command of Lieutenants Mentzer and Van Arnam, advanced in the direction of Angeles, encountered the enemy, and routed him after a lively skirmish. Another scouting party of fifty men, commanded by Lieutenants Ross and Wilson, after an engagement with the enemy, on August 11th, entered Angeles, and drove out the insurgents posted there, afterwards returning to Calulut. The regiment remained at Calulut until August 17th, when it was moved to Sindalan. On September 4, 1899, the regiment was relieved by a battalion of the Twenty-second Infantry, and ordered to proceed to San Fernando. At that time fifty-three per cent. of the regiment were on the sick list. On leaving Sindalan, General Wheaton highly commended the regiment for the faithful and efficient service it had rendered. The regiment remained at San Fernando until September 6th, performing outpost and provost guard duty, Major John T. Hume acting as Provost Marshal. On the date last mentioned it was relieved by other troops and conveyed by rail to Manila. Upon the departure of the regiment from San Fernando, General McArthur addressed the officers and men of the regiment in complimentary terms, and closed by saying: "God bless the Iowa boys; may you have a safe voyage home. We will endeavor to complete the work which you have so well begun."

Preparations for the homeward voyage were at once begun. On September 22, 1899, the regiment embarked on the transport "Senator," and sailed for San Francisco, Cal., where it arrived October 22, 1899. Upon disembarking, the regiment was assigned to its old camp at the Presidio, where it was mustered out of the service of the United States November 2, 1899. Colonel Loper commends in the highest terms the conduct of the officers and men of the regiment, and, near the close of his official report, says: "They were gentlemen as well as soldiers, and they did not fail to uphold the honor of the regiment and the dignity of the State from which they were sent."

Fifty-second Regiment

Iowa Volunteer Infantry

HISTORICAL SKETCH

FIFTY-SECOND REGIMENT IOWA VOLUNTEER INFANTRY

The Fifty-second Regiment was organized from the Fourth Regiment Iowa National Guard. The twelve companies of which it was composed were ordered into quarters by Governor Shaw, on the 25th day of April, 1898. The designated rendezvous was Camp McKinley, near Des Moines, Iowa. The promptness with which the order was obeyed was evidenced by the fact that, at 10 P. M., April 26th, the last of the twelve companies had reported at the rendezvous. The regiment was engaged in the ordinary routine of camp duty until the 25th day of May, 1898, on which date it was mustered into the service of the United States, by Captain J. A. Olmsted, of the Regular Army. On May 28, 1898, Colonel Humphrey received an order, by telegraph, from the War Department, directing him to proceed with his regiment, by rail, to Chickamauga Park, Ga., and report to the General in command of the troops which were being concentrated there. The regiment left its rendezvous in Des Moines on the afternoon of the same day the order was received, and was conveyed by rail—in three sections—to Chattanooga, Tenn., where it arrived on the evening of May 30th, and moved thence on the next day to Camp Thomas, Chickamauga Park, where it was assigned to the Third Brigade, Second Division, Third Army Corps, Major General James F. Wade commanding. In this camp the patriotic young men of the North and South were commingled, all imbued with the one thought and desire—to serve their reunited country in active warfare against the Spanish Monarchy. It was a war of humanity, entered into on the part of the United States, for the purpose of securing justice to an oppressed race, and not for the purpose of conquest.

It was the earnest desire of all the troops in camp at Chickamauga that their stay there would be brief, and that they would soon be called upon to embark and proceed to the Island of Cuba; but, in this, they were doomed to disappointment. The resources of Spain were so entirely inadequate that active hostilities soon came to an end, and the war was of short duration. But two of the splendidly equipped regiments from Iowa were given an opportunity for foreign service—as will be seen from the preceding historical sketches—the fortune of war having denied to the others the opportunity which they so much craved.

During the month of June, 1898, the Fifty-second Iowa was recruited to the maximum strength of a regiment of infantry—fifty officers and twelve hundred seventy-six enlisted men—an aggregate of thirteen hundred twenty-six, rank and file. On August 8, 1898, the regiment was selected as part of a provisional division, under the command of Major General James F. Wade, with orders to proceed to the Island of Porto Rico; but, just as the troops were about to move, the order was revoked, and the regiment was obliged to settle back into the dull monotony of camp life. Up to this time, the regiment had been in a fairly healthy condition, but, in less than two weeks after the order to proceed to Porto Rico had been countermanded, it had as many men unfitted for duty as any regiment in its brigade or division. This decline in the health of the men was largely attributed to their disappointment in not having been given the opportunity for active service, even had that service only allowed them a change in environment. These high spirited young men, many of them the sons of veterans of the great Civil War, had entered the service with high hopes that they would have the chance to distinguish themselves in battle. Instead of realizing that hope, they had been kept in camp in their own country, during their entire term of service. They had, however, performed their whole duty in the limited field to which they were assigned. The official report of Colonel Humphrey—from which the foregoing sketch has been condensed—closes with the following statement: "Had the opportunity presented, the regiment would have acquitted itself with honor and credit to the State."

The regiment left Chickamauga August 29, 1898, under orders to proceed to Des Moines, Iowa, by rail, and, upon its arrival there, to report to the commanding General of the Department of the Missouri, at Omaha, for further orders. After reaching Des Moines, the regiment was granted a thirty day furlough, at the expiration of which the officers and men reassembled at Camp McKinley, and were there mustered out of the service of the United States on the 30th day of October, 1898.

Fifth and Sixth Batteries

Iowa Light Artillery

HISTORICAL SKETCH

FIFTH AND SIXTH BATTERIES IOWA LIGHT ARTILLERY

On June 18, 1898, Governor Shaw received the following telegram from the Secretary of War:

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 18, 1898.

GOVERNOR OF IOWA, Des Moines, Iowa:

Under the President's call, May 25, 1898, after filling to the maximum the organizations already in the United States service from your State, you are requested to furnish two batteries of light artillery, each to consist of one Captain, one First Lieutenant, one Second Lieutenant, one First Sergeant, one Quartermaster Sergeant, one Veterinary Sergeant, six Sergeants, nine Corporals, two Farriers, two Artificers, one Saddler, two Musicians, one Wagoner and eighty Privates. The Mustering Officer, Captain J. A. Olmsted, has been directed to confer with your representative, concerning details affecting comfort, shelter, subsistence of organizations, and the order in which they should be mobilized for muster. To save expense and for other reasons that will occur to you, it is suggested that preliminary physical examinations be made of the men before they are taken from their homes. Blanks mailed to Adjutant General of State. The recruiting for the old companies will be conducted by the officers now in the field and under orders from this office.

R. A. ALGER,
Secretary of War.

The Governor directed the following reply to be made to the foregoing telegram:

DES MOINES, June 20, 1898.

GENERAL R. A. ALGER, Washington, D. C.:

Governor Shaw directs me to acknowledge receipt of requisition for two light batteries, and to say that he has them ready for examination, two hundred strong. We caused the National Guard to be examined before leaving their homes, but it proved too lax. This examination will be more rigid. The Governor directs me to ask that ordnance, horses, uniforms, and full equipment be furnished at earliest possible moment. Iowa is proud of her four regiments already sent forward, equipped and paid. The batteries will be composed of picked men, and the Governor desires all necessary supplies, to the end that the State may fully sustain herself.

MELVIN H. BYERS,
*Adjutant General of Iowa.*¹

Under the foregoing call several organizations offered their services, and the following were accepted:

Fifth Iowa Battery, Cedar Rapids, Captain George W. Bever, commanding.

¹Report of Adjutant General of Iowa, 1899, pages 10 and 11.

Sixth Iowa Battery, Burlington, Captain Frank S. Long, commanding.

The officers and men of these batteries went into rendezvous at Camp McKinley, June 30, 1898, and were there mustered into the service of the United States, by Captain J. A. Olmsted, of the Regular Army, July 8, 1898. They were never equipped, but were held in rendezvous, subject to the call of the Government, until September 5, 1898, on which date they were mustered out of the service and returned to their homes. They were an exceptionally fine class of young men, and their discipline and deportment in camp were most excellent. Had the opportunity for active service come to them, they would have gladly embraced it, and would have rendered a good account of themselves.

The subjoined rosters have been carefully transcribed from the records in the office of the Adjutant General of Iowa, and contain the names of each officer and enlisted man who was enrolled in the Fifth and Sixth Iowa Batteries. No deaths are reported in either of these organizations.

Twelfth Company

U. S. Volunteer Signal Corps

HISTORICAL SKETCH

TWELFTH COMPANY U. S. VOLUNTEER SIGNAL CORPS

In June, 1898, Captain Frank E. Lyman, Jr., recruited a company of fifty men in Des Moines, Iowa, for service in the Volunteer Signal Corps of the United States. The company consisted of expert telegraph operators, telegraph and telephone linemen, dynamo tenders, expert visual signalmen from an old National Guard detachment, two blacksmiths, two cooks, two photographers, and several men who had seen service as enlisted men in the Regular Army. The compiler is indebted to Captain Lyman for the following condensed account of the service of the company:

The company left Des Moines, Iowa, June 25, 1898, under orders to proceed to Washington Barracks, Washington, D. C., and, upon its arrival there, to report to Colonel H. H. C. Dunwoody, in command of the United States Signal Corps. Soon afterwards—by order of the War Department—it was designated as the Twelfth Company United States Volunteer Signal Corps. After drawing uniforms and a partial field equipment, it was ordered to Camp Thomas, Chickamauga Park, where it was attached to the headquarters of the Third Army Corps, Major General Wade, commanding. In August it was ordered to accompany General Wade's provisional division to Porto Rico, and entrained for Newport News, where it commenced loading on the United States Transport No. 21, but was ordered ashore again when the protocol with Spain was signed, and the war practically ended. The company was then ordered to return to Chickamauga Park, where it stayed two weeks, encamped on the top of Snodgrass Hill, in order to escape the typhoid fever epidemic. It was then ordered to Camp Hamilton, near Lexington, Ky., where Captain Lyman reported to Brigadier General Joseph Sanger, as Signal Officer of the Third Division, First Army Corps.

The company remained at Camp Hamilton, building field telegraph and telephone lines, and performing other signal duty until November, when it was ordered to Macon, Ga., and, with the Sixteenth Signal Company, comprised the signal troops of the First Corps, for service outside the United States, Major General James H. Wilson, the great cavalry leader of the Civil War, commanding. In December, 1898, the company sailed for Cuba, with General Wilson's headquarters, landing at Matanzas January 2, 1899. The subsequent service of the company on the Island of Cuba was of the most arduous character. It was divided into detachments, and took charge of all the telegraph offices in the department of Matanzas, the operators taking charge of the instruments, and the linemen rebuilding the broken down lines. On April 25, 1899, the company was mustered out of the service of the United States, and its members returned to their homes by way of Havana and New York.

The record of the company is altogether a creditable one. It served nearly one year, four months of that time on foreign soil. Captain Lyman was a most capable and faithful officer. The records show that he was on duty with the company every day during its term of service, and that he signed every morning report. The subjoined roster was transcribed from the records in the office of the Adjutant General of Iowa, and shows the casualties and changes which occurred in the company.

Company M,
Seventh U. S. Volunteer Infantry
Immunes

HISTORICAL SKETCH

COMPANY M, SEVENTH U. S. VOLUNTEER INFANTRY IMMUNES

The records in the office of the Adjutant General of Iowa show that on June 28, 1898, Amos W. Brandt was commissioned Captain, and authorized to organize a company of Colored Immunes. The company was organized and left Des Moines July 17, 1898, for Jefferson Barracks, Mo., at which place it was mustered into the service of the United States as Company M, Seventh United States Volunteer Infantry Immunes, Colonel Edwin A. Godwin, commanding.¹ The regiment remained at Jefferson Barracks until September 18, 1898, on which date it was ordered to proceed by rail to Lexington, Ky., where it arrived September 21, 1898. Its duties at the latter place were of the same general character as those it had performed at Jefferson Barracks, and consisted mainly of the monotonous routine of the camp and garrison, relieved occasionally by brigade and division drills and reviews. During its stay at Lexington, the regiment—with the other troops stationed there—passed in review before the Secretary of War, Company M having the honor to act as the color company of its regiment on that occasion. Governor Bradley, of Kentucky, subsequently reviewed the troops at Lexington.

The regiment left Lexington November 21, 1898, and was conveyed by rail to Macon, Ga., where it was assigned to the Second Brigade, Second Division, Second Army Corps. The Second Brigade was constituted as follows: The Seventh United States Volunteer Immunes, the Tenth United States Volunteer Immunes, the Third North Carolina Volunteer Infantry, and the Sixth Virginia Volunteer Infantry. All these regiments were composed of colored men, except officers, and, in the case of the Seventh Infantry, the field and staff officers and captains of that regiment were white men, while the lieutenants were all colored. The Second Army Corps was under orders to proceed to Matanzas, Cuba, but the order was countermanded on account of the close of the war. During its stay at Macon, the regiment, with the other troops of the corps, passed in review before President McKinley.

On the 28th day of February, 1899, the regiment was mustered out of the service of the United States at Macon, Ga. The officers and men of Company M returned to Des Moines, bringing with them the flag which had been presented to the company—at the time of its organization—by Hon. Isaac Brandt, father of Captain Amos W. Brandt. The Captain commends the conduct of his company during its term of service, and especially mentions ¹Report of Adjutant General of Iowa, 1899, pages 11, 12. A complete roster of the Company is also found on pages 382, 3, of same report, but Captain Brandt's official report does not appear in the records. He has, however, furnished the compiler with the necessary data from which to prepare a condensed account of the service of the Company.

the faithful and capable manner in which his Lieutenants—Edward G. McAfee and Robert A. Wilburn—discharged the duties of their respective offices. Captain Brandt was subsequently commissioned (July 5, 1899,) as Captain of Company F, Thirty-second United States Volunteer Infantry, and served with that regiment in the Philippine Islands until the close of hostilities. The following testimonial is selected by the compiler, from several others of a similar character, as evidence of the gallant manner in which the Captain performed his duty:

HEADQUARTERS THIRTY-SECOND INFANTRY U. S. VOLS.

Balanga, P. I., May 29, 1900.

CAPTAIN AMOS W. BRANDT,

Commanding Company F, Abucay, P. I.

SIR: I am directed by the Colonel to extend congratulations to you, to Lieutenant Frank Werner, and to the enlisted men of your company, referring to the very gallant and successful engagement with the Insurgents on the early morning of the 25th instant, by which they were repulsed with a severe loss, and driven away after an attempted attack on the town of Abucay.

It is very gratifying to him to read in your report that "many deeds of merit were done by non-commissioned officers and privates, and that to mention one of the many above another would be an injustice to all." Please publish this letter to your company, and furnish Lieutenant Werner with a copy for his private file.

Very respectfully,

HENRY M. MORROW,

First Lieutenant and Acting Adjutant,

Thirty-Second Infantry U. S. V.

It will thus be seen that this typical Iowa soldier nobly sustained the honor of his State, in the service he rendered during the Spanish-American and Philippine Wars.

The available material for the history of Iowa troops, who were in any manner connected with these later wars in the history of the United States, has been condensed in the foregoing sketches, which have been made to conform as nearly as possible with those which have appeared in the preceding pages of this work. The work, in its entirety, comprises a complete compendium of the military history of the State of Iowa from the date of its admission into the Union (1846) down to and including the year 1910. Woven in with this history are the personal records of every Iowa soldier, sailor or marine, in so far as the same could be obtained from the official archives. It will therefore be apparent that, notwithstanding the effort which has been made to condense the historical sketches into the smallest possible space, a large amount of labor and research has been involved in the preparation of the work, the completion of which is marked by these concluding sketches of the Spanish-American and Philippine Wars.

HISTORICAL SKETCH

EARLY MILITARY HISTORY OF IOWA

This early military history of the State is condensed from the elaborate work of the late Harvey Reid, which was prepared for the use of the Iowa Soldiers' Roster Board. In order to conform, as nearly as possible, with the general plan of the work adopted by the board, it became necessary to use only such portions of Mr. Reid's excellent compilation as would enable the completion of the entire work to be embraced within the limitation of space finally determined upon. The compiler, in entering upon the difficult and delicate task of condensing within the required limit the work of his friend and comrade, will be guided by an earnest desire to include—as far as may be possible—the main points of interest, leaving to the student of history the perusal of Mr. Reid's work in its entirety, when it shall have been published.¹

IOWA IN THE MEXICAN WAR

(The following Sketch is quoted verbatim from Mr. Reid's Early Military History of the State.)

"The great province of Texas had been left as an unpeopled waste by the Spanish conquerors of Mexico, in accordance with a definite policy to preserve it as a buffer, or neutrality zone, against the American settlements of Louisiana. Mexico achieved her independence of Spain in 1821, and the new republic at once adopted a new policy for the development of the neglected province, by inviting its colonization from the United States. This was done by giving a large land-grant to Moses Austin of Connecticut, on condition that he would establish a colony of three hundred American families within the limits of his Texas domain. This grant was confirmed to his son, Stephen Austin, with the enlarged privilege of establishing five hundred families of emigrants. Thus, by the year 1823, a nucleus of American settlements was formed in Texas, which gradually grew strong enough to overshadow the meager Mexican colonization.

"Spanish and Spanish-American civilization has never been congenial to the Anglo-Saxon spirit, and the Mexican laws and their administration proved to be saturated with all the vices which have characterized the Spanish peoples in their attempted establishment of free institutions. The American Texans, mostly immigrants from the southern states of the Union, of which Tennessee had furnished the largest contingent, soon achieved a condition of semi-independence, which, in 1835, grew into armed revolt against the parent state of Mexico. Sam Houston, ex-congressman and ex-governor of Tennessee, was principal commander of the insurgent forces. The Mexicans soon destroyed all possibilities of conciliation, and forfeited the respect of mankind, by the vile massacre, at San Antonio, of the remnant of a little band of Americans, who had surrendered, after a heroic defense of the Alamo fort against eight thousand Mexicans, commanded by General Santa Anna, president of the republic. The eccentric and daring Colonel Davy Crockett, of Tennessee, was among the slain, and the resulting watch-word "Remember the Alamo!" spread fires of resentment that reached throughout the borders of the Union itself, and aroused a prejudice against Mexican manhood that can scarcely yet be said to have lost its force.

"The massacre of the Alamo occurred on the 6th of March, 1836, and it was amply avenged the following month, when General Houston's small army at San Jacinto defeated and nearly annihilated an army of Mexicans, under Santa Anna, of more than double their numbers, and captured that leader himself. Peace followed per force; the Republic of Texas was formed with Houston as President, and the independence of the new state was promptly acknowledged by the United States, by Great Britain, and by France, and Mexico was obliged to yield like recognition.

"The ruling Texans, all Americans, at once sought annexation to the United States. President Van Buren, unwilling to precipitate the inevitable war with Mexico, declined the proposal. Texas, meanwhile, became the goal of a flood of emigration from the States, that, by 1844, had increased its population to about two hundred thousand souls. And, in this, the last year of President Tyler's administration, the question of annexation became involved in national politics. The convention that nominated James K. Polk declared in favor of annexation, while the Whigs, who supported Henry Clay, opposed it. Polk won, and the Congress which met immediately preceding his inauguration, took up the question in December, 1844, and, after debating the question all winter, passed a bill of annexation March 1, 1845. President Tyler at once gave his assent, and the Lone Star took its place in the American constellation. The union was fully consummated on the 4th of July, 1845, when the Texan Congress formally approved the act.

"It was not unknown to American statesmen, however, that, in this vast acquisition of territory, Uncle Sam had also annexed a boundary dispute. The original Mexican State of Texas, as its boundaries were rearranged in 1821, consisted of the former Spanish territories of Coahuila and Texas. Mexico had conceded, ten years previous to the annexation, that Texas had won her independence, but contended that the original State of Texas, only, had done so, and that the State of Coahuila remained Mexican territory. The southern part of this disputed tract lay between the rivers Rio Grande del Norte and Nueces, the Mexican contention being that the Nueces formed her eastern boundary.

"The administration at Washington agreed with the Texan authorities in holding that the merging of Texas and Coahuila into a single political entity was a fact accomplished at the time of the revolution of 1836, and that the River Rio Grande formed such a great natural boundary between nations that its significance could not be ignored. The situation became so acute when Almonte, the Mexican minister at Washington, demanded his passports, and indignantly left the country as soon as the resolution for annexation passed Congress, that military occupation of the disputed territory became a vital necessity.

"The commander of the Southern Division of the Western Department of the armies of the United States at this time was Colonel and Brevet Brigadier General Zachary Taylor, a pioneer Kentuckian, who had won his high rank by brave and skillful management of the war with the Seminole Indians in Florida. A considerable part of the military career of General Taylor had been closely connected with the early history of Iowa Territory. In 1814, as Captain in the Seventh Infantry, and Brevet Major, he had commanded a boat expedition sent from St. Louis to retake Prairie du Chien from the British, but had been turned back from Rock Island by a superior force of British and Indians. In 1821, as Lieutenant Colonel of the First Infantry, he had been assigned to the command of Fort Snelling, on the upper Mississippi. In 1832, he was promoted to Colonel, and given command at Fort Crawford, Prairie du Chien, where he gave aid to General Atkinson at the battle of Bad Axe, where Black Hawk's forces were annihilated. He remained at Fort Crawford until he was ordered to Florida, in 1836, and it was from that post that occurred the runaway match of his daughter, with his Adjutant, Lieutenant Jefferson Davis.

"A proposition of the United States government, to submit the boundary claims of the two nations to arbitration, having been scornfully rejected by the Mexicans, so evident a distrust of the rightfulness of their own position by that nation strengthened President Tyler and his advisers in their determination to uphold the rights of the new American State, and, in response to a petition from Texan authorities, General Taylor was ordered to advance from his headquarters at Fort Jessup, in western Louisiana, and guard the disputed district. Under these orders, the American forces were moved forward to Corpus Christi, on the bay of the same name, at the mouth of the Nueces River, where a camp was established, and where, before the close of the year 1845, General Taylor gathered a little army of four thousand five hundred men.

"With the opening of the next year it was learned that the Mexican General Arista was gathering an army in the northern part of the republic, for a counter-invasion of Texas, and General Taylor was ordered forward to the Rio Grande. In the 8th of March, 1846, he advanced from Corpus Christi to Point Isabel, on the Gulf of Mexico, established a depot of supplies there, and continued his march to the river. Fort Brown was built opposite the Mexican town of Matamoras, where General Arista assembled an army which threatened Taylor's communications, and, on the 26th of April, captured Captain Thornton's company of dragoons on the American side of the Rio Grande. Taylor, leaving a garrison in Fort Brown, fell back to Point Isabel, to strengthen the defense of that depot, and again advanced to meet Arista's superior force, which had invested Major Brown's little band of three hundred in the new, improvised fortress. The battles of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma followed on the 8th and 9th of May, where the blood of forty-eight dead and one hundred thirty wounded Americans was shed in defense of their country's honor, but the Mexican army which inflicted that loss was simply put out of existence. Our army commanders had relearned the lesson, first taught at San Jacinto, and confirmed in every subsequent action of the war, that no disparity of numbers in favor of the Mexicans could avail against the dash, bravery, endurance and intelligence of the sons of the United States.

"The news of the doings on the Rio Grande carried wild excitement to all parts of the Union. Party dissensions were forgotten; the war spirit flamed out everywhere; Whigs and Democrats alike proffered aid to fill the ranks of the army. The President sent a message to Congress, which was then in session, pointing out that the conflict came from the lawless acts of the Mexican soldiery, who had, without sufficient provocation, shed American blood on American soil. Congress promptly responded, and, on the 11th of May, 1846, declared that 'war already existed by the act of the Mexican government.' Ten millions of dollars were promptly placed at the disposal of the government, and the President was authorized to accept the services of fifty thousand volunteers. Then, again, was displayed the innate enthusiasm that the martial spirit inherited from American pioneers always develops. War meetings were held in the oldest States and the newest territories, and, in a short time, not fifty thousand alone, but nearly three hundred thousand offered themselves for service."

Under the Act of Congress, approved May 13, 1846, which authorized the raising of fifty thousand volunteers, President Polk made requisition on the States and Territories for eighty-six and a half regiments—the half regiment to be raised in the District of Columbia. Iowa's quota under the requisition was one regiment of Infantry, as shown by the following proclamation of the governor:

"The President of the United States, under a law enacted at the present session of Congress, authorizing him to accept the services of fifty thousand volunteers, to serve in the war now existing between Mexico and the United States, having made a requisition upon me, as Executive of the Territory, for the enrollment of one regiment of Infantry, to be mustered into the service at such time as may be required, I hereby proclaim the fact to the citizen soldiery of Iowa, not doubting that they will respond to the call with the utmost alacrity and promptness. It is due to the character of our Territory and its inhabitants that the requisition be at once met by voluntary enlistment, and that it will be so met I have entire confidence. To insure this result, I recommend that active, efficient, and immediate steps be taken in the several counties of the Territory to procure the enrollment, in good faith, of all who may be disposed to tender their services to their country, a report of the result to be transmitted to me at the earliest possible day. The aid of all good citizens—all lovers of their country—is invoked and calculated on; and it is especially enjoined on all officers holding military commissions that they be active and vigilant in their efforts to assist in raising the force called for by the President.

"The regiment to be organized is to consist of ten companies, each company to have one Captain, one First and one Second Lieutenant, four Sergeants, four Corporals, two Musicians and sixty-four Privates. The officers, under the act of Congress of the 13th of May last, are to be appointed and commissioned in accordance with the laws of this Territory. The enlistment is to be for 'twelve months after they shall have arrived at the place of rendezvous, or to the end of the war, unless sooner discharged, according to the time for which they shall have been mustered into service'; and no man under the rank of commissioned officer, who is in years apparently over forty-five, or under eighteen, or who is not in physical strength or vigor, will be received.

"As soon as the War Department is apprised that the enrollment is full, an officer of the army will be detailed to muster the volunteers into the service of the United States, after which, in all things but clothing and pay, they will take the organization of the Regular Army. 'In lieu of clothing, every non-commissioned officer and private in any company who may thus offer himself shall be entitled when called into actual service to receive in money a sum equal to the cost of clothing of a non-commissioned officer or private (as the case may be) in the regular troops of the United States.'

"The President, in thus offering us an opportunity of participating in the danger and glory of inflicting merited chastisement upon the invaders of our soil, has, I am confident, but anticipated the wishes of the great body of our people. It remains for us to prove by our acts, that he has not formed too high an estimate of our devotion to country, and that the flame of patriotism burns not less brightly in Iowa than elsewhere.

(Signed) James Clarke.

By the Governor:

Jesse Williams, Secretary of the Territory.
Executive Office, Burlington, Iowa, June 1, 1846.²⁷

It will be noted that Iowa was still a Territory when the foregoing proclamation was issued, but the terms of service of all the troops enlisting for service in the war against Mexico extended beyond the date when the State was admitted into the Union—December 28, 1846. Their history is, therefore, fully identified with that of the State of Iowa.

On June 26, 1846, the ten companies, which were to compose the regiment from Iowa, had been organized and were ready for service. In fact, two more than the requisite number had been organized, in the following order: Des Moines County, two companies; Lee County, two companies; Van Buren County, two companies; Muscatine County, one company; Louisa County, one company; Washington County, one company; Dubuque County, one company; Johnson and Linn Counties, one company, and Jefferson County, one company.²⁸

The presumption was that the companies were received and accepted in the order in which they were reported to the Governor, until the requisite number was complete. Records were subsequently found showing the organization of a company in Henry County, and of another in Jackson County, while newspaper items and allusions indicate that two or three companies were organized in Dubuque County, instead of the one which was reported to the Governor. It will thus be seen that the militant spirit was dominant among those hardy pioneers of Iowa, and that a much larger number of men offered their services than could be accepted by the President. Indeed, as the war was of comparatively short duration, and the distance to the field of hostilities so great, only one company of Iowa soldiers was given the opportunity to meet the enemy in actual conflict on the field of battle. A larger number, however, participated in one of the most remarkable marches ever undertaken, as will be shown in the subsequent pages of this history. Others were assigned to and faithfully performed post and garrison duty, while anxiously awaiting the order—which never came—to be sent to the front. Rosters of all the companies which have been mentioned are contained in Mr. Reid's history, but the compiler will include only those which performed actual service—either directly or indirectly—in connection with the Mexican War. Where biographical sketches of officers and enlisted men—often occupying many pages—have been found, they have been reduced to the usual paragraph opposite the names in the Roster, thus conforming to the general plan of this work.

CAPTAIN JAMES M. MORGAN'S INDEPENDENT COMPANY OF IOWA INFANTRY VOLUNTEERS

This company was the premier organization of the regiment which Iowa was called upon to furnish for service in the War with Mexico. It was mustered into the service of the United States at Fort Atkinson, Iowa Territory, on July 15, 1846, by First Lieutenant Philip R. Thompson, of the First Dragoons, United States Army. The following roster is transcribed from both the muster-in and muster-out rolls of the company. The term of service was twelve months, and the company was mustered out promptly at the expiration of that period, at Fort Atkinson, July 15, 1847. Except when otherwise stated in the roster, each officer and enlisted man was mustered out with the company.

CAPTAIN JOHN PARKER'S COMPANY OF IOWA DRAGOONS VOLUNTEERS

Captain John Parker's Company of Iowa Dragoons Volunteers was mustered into the service of the United States at Fort Atkinson, Iowa, by Brevet Major Alexander Hooe, of the Regular Army, September 9, 1846. Its term of service was for twelve months, unless sooner discharged. The company at once became part of the garrison at Fort Atkinson, of which it became an important adjunct, furnishing mounted men for scouting purposes, watching the movements of the Winnebago Indians, and endeavoring to keep them within the limits of their reservation. It was subsequently determined by the War Department, however, that the services of the company could be dispensed with, and an order was issued to muster it out of the service. The records show that the company was mustered out, by Brevet Major Hooe, at Fort Atkinson, Nov. 5, 1846. CAPTAIN JAMES M. MORGAN'S COMPANY OF IOWA MOUNTED VOLUNTEERS

It would seem to have been the part of wisdom to have retained Captain Parker's Company in the service for the full length of its term. The Winnebago Indians had become restless, and a portion of the tribe had left its reservation, going to their old hunting grounds in Wisconsin. Another portion had gone west into the interior of Iowa, and only about one-half the tribe remained upon its original reservation. More than the available force of United States soldiers in the vicinity of the reservation was needed to again concentrate the tribe, and prepare them for removal to the new reservation which had been provided for them. It must here be noted that, at the close of the Black Hawk War, the Government had gathered up what remained of the once numerous and powerful tribe of the Winnebago Indians, and had established them upon the neutral strip in northern Iowa. The location did not prove satisfactory to the Indians. In 1846 a new treaty was made with them, by which they gave up their Iowa home in exchange for a reservation in western Minnesota. A considerable portion of the tribe objected to removal to the new reservation, and, as has been shown, were in rebellion against the order which had been issued. It was the plan of the Government Agent for the tribe—J. E. Fletcher—to move the Indians to their new home in a flotilla of canoes up the Mississippi River. To this arrangement, however, the Indians demurred. Their belongings were loaded in wagons, to be hauled to the river, but the Indians threw them out as fast as they could be loaded. Finally, a detachment of troops was sent from Fort Atkinson. When the troops arrived the Indians were in a hostile frame of mind, and a conflict seemed imminent. The agent held a council with the principal chiefs, however, and provided a feast for the entire tribe. By the skillful exercise of diplomacy the threatened conflict was averted. The Indians agreed to march across to the river at Winona, under the escort of Captain James M. Morgan's Company of Iowa Mounted Volunteers.

The cavalcade finally moved from Turkey River on June 8, 1848. The number of Indians was variously estimated from twenty-one hundred to twenty-eight hundred. They were supplied with one hundred sixty-six wagons and about sixteen hundred ponies. Papooses rode in "kyaks" or sacks of hides hung over the backs of the ponies. About five hundred tents afforded shelter for the Indians, and one hundred more were used by the soldiers and the agency and mission people. Their route lay straight north until the Mississippi River was struck at Wabasha Prairie, the present site of the city of Winona, Minn. Before reaching that place, the Indian agent and Captain Morgan had learned of a conspiracy between some of the Winnebago chiefs and a band of Sioux Indians, then encamped in the vicinity of Wabasha Prairie, in which the Winnebagoes had agreed to occupy a reservation adjoining that of the Sioux, and to proceed no farther. The tract of country designated had been purchased by the Winnebagoes from the Sioux, the former tribe promising to pay the latter a stipulated sum, to be derived from their government annuities. The Sioux Indians had pledged their assistance to the Winnebagoes in holding this purchase in violation of their treaty, and to unite with them in resisting the troops in any further effort to remove them to the government reservation which had been assigned to them. Upon receiving this intelligence, and becoming satisfied of its reliability, Captain Morgan sent messengers to Forts Snelling and Crawford for reinforcements, which were promptly sent to him under command of Captains Eastman and Knowlton. The incipient revolt was crushed by this stern display of force, and, upon arriving at Wabasha Prairie, the savage wards of the government and their belongings were loaded in detachments upon barges, and towed by steamboats, as they arrived from below, to the Falls of St. Anthony, where they were again concentrated. The delay caused by this change of transportation occupied about a month.

The land march was resumed from the Falls, and, on July 30, 1848, at the mouth of the Watab River, near Sauk Rapids, on the Mississippi, the new reservation was reached. The distance traveled had been three hundred ten miles. A site for the agency buildings and mission was selected on Long Prairie, and Captain Morgan's Company remained to keep order during the construction of the necessary buildings. The new reservation seemed very satisfactory to the Indians, and to General Fletcher, their agent, who says, in his annual report, under date of Oct. 4, 1848: "The country for the Winnebagoes was judiciously selected. It is the best location that could have been procured for them west of the Mississippi River. They are well satisfied with the country, and look upon it as their permanent home."

About the first of September, Captain Morgan received orders to return to Fort Atkinson with his company. They marched to Fort Snelling, and were thence conveyed by steamboat to McGregor's Landing, where they arrived on September 6th. A short march brought them to their old quarters, where they were mustered out of service on the 11th day of September, 1848, and at once dispersed to their respective homes. While this gallant company had not realized its expectations, of being sent to Mexico to engage in conflict with its country's foes, it had served honorably and bravely in the field to which it had been assigned. Its officers and men had performed every duty which had been required of them. Those members of the company who had first enlisted in the infantry had given longer service than had been required of any other Iowa Volunteers who had originally enrolled for the Mexican War, their entire length of service having been two years and fifty-eight days. The following is a complete roster of the company:

CAPTAIN GUTHRIE'S COMPANY K, FIFTEENTH U. S. INFANTRY

It will be noted that but three of the ten Iowa companies which had been called for by the President had been mustered into the service of the United States. It will also be noted that the three companies, instead of being sent to Mexico, had been kept on garrison duty at Fort Atkinson. While the explanation given for the recruiting of a new company in Iowa is not very clear, it seems to have been organized under special authority from the War Department, and assigned to the Fifteenth Regiment, United States Infantry, and was designated as Company K, of that regiment. Major Frederick D. Mills, who had been Captain of the first company raised under the call of the President (but which was not mustered) was commissioned Major of the Fifteenth Infantry. The selection of the commissioned officers of Company K was conceded to Major Mills. This fact, and his own appointment as Major, suggests a plausible theory that the organization of the company was but a belated act of justice to the men and officers of the first Iowa company to offer its services under the call of the President. That company, as has been shown, was superseded by Captain James M. Morgan's Company of Iowa Infantry Volunteers, which completed its full term of service at Fort Atkinson, Iowa. The new company was promptly organized, and was conveyed from its rendezvous at Fort Madison, Iowa, by steamboat to New Orleans, and thence by ocean steamer to Vera Cruz, where it joined the regiment. From the day it landed in Mexico to the end of the war, the company—with its regiment—was constantly engaged in active service. It participated in numerous battles and skirmishes, in all of which it acquitted itself with distinguished gallantry. Its losses—as shown by the subjoined roster—were heavy, constituting forty per cent of its aggregate number. Nearly every one of its officers received both special mention and brevet promotions for gallant and meritorious conduct on the battlefield. Among those killed or mortally wounded in battle were Major Mills and Captain Guthrie. The Third General Assembly of Iowa, in session at Iowa City, in 1850, gave permanent evidence of its appreciation of those gallant officers, by bestowing upon one of the new counties, organized at that session, the name of Mills, and, upon another, the name of Guthrie. In Mr. Reid's early military history, from which this brief sketch is condensed, the movements and operations of the company are described with great particularity, and many incidents, showing its splendid conduct under fire.

are given. Copies of official reports are quoted, and the record of the company is shown to have been a most highly honorable one, reflecting great credit upon the State.

It has been the duty and pleasure of the compiler to prepare a sketch of each of the military organizations of the State of Iowa which, at any time, rendered active service in the wars in which the United States has been involved, and he regards it as but a simple statement of truth to say that, in the long line of brilliant achievement and faithful service, Company K, of the Fifteenth Regiment, United States Infantry, established a record of such a high standard of excellence as to prove a worthy example and inspiration to each of the Iowa organizations which followed it in the succeeding wars.

The muster roll of the company is copied verbatim from Mr. Reid's history. While it does not comport fully with the general plan of this work, the compiler could not see his way clear to undertake a condensation of the more lengthy paragraphs, as they describe so fully the service performed, together with a summarized statement of the subsequent history of the soldier, with notes giving the source from which the information was obtained. He therefore determined to make a notable exception to the rule, in the case of the roster and record of this one company, Iowa's sole representative upon the battlefields of Mexico.

ROSTER

Edwin Guthrie. Captain. Residence Fort Madison, Iowa. Commissioned by President James K. Polk March 8, 1847. Assigned to Company K, Fifteenth Infantry, April 9, 1847. Wounded in the skirmish at Lahoya Pass, on the road between Vera Cruz and Perote, June 20, 1847. Died at Perote, July 20, 1847. Captain Guthrie was born at Smyrna, New York, Dec. 11, 1806, where he married Adeline Jewett Sept. 7, 1827. He was a manufacturer of chemicals and a distiller, at Sackett's Harbor, N. Y., and removed to Iowa about 1840, where he became Warden of the Penitentiary at Fort Madison, 1843-1845. [Edwin Guthrie, grandson, Washington, D. C., Nov. 15, 1909.]

George Washington Bowie. First Lieutenant, U. S. Infantry, March 8, 1847. Assigned to Company K, Fifteenth Infantry, April 9, 1847. Captain, July 8, 1847. Brevet Major for gallant and meritorious conduct at Contreras and Churubusco. Mustered out with the Company Aug. 4, 1848, at Covington, Kentucky. Colonel, Fifth California Infantry, Nov. 8, 1861. Brevet Brigadier General of United States Volunteers, March 13, 1865. Honorably mustered out Dec. 14, 1864. Native of Maryland. It has not been ascertained when he came to Iowa, but he settled in Burlington as a lawyer. He was elected to the Constitutional Convention which met in 1846, and was a member of the Territorial House of Representatives the same year. He took an active part in the organization of a company in Burlington, for the proposed Iowa regiment for the Mexican War, and was First Lieutenant of the Company under Captain F. D. Mills. He returned to Burlington after the war, but emigrated to California in 1850. He was a candidate for Governor of California on the ticket of the American party, in 1857. Became Colonel of the Fifth California Infantry Nov. 9, 1861, to succeed Colonel John Kellogg, an officer of the Third Artillery, U. S. Army, who resigned on that date. He commanded the District of Arizona, with headquarters at Franklin, Texas, where he was mustered out Dec. 14, 1864. Died in an accident March 18, 1882. [Heitman's Historical Register, U. S. A. Reverend William Salter, D. D., Burlington, Iowa; California Historical Society, by Irving B. Richman; Rebellion Records, Vol. XXXIV.]

John R. Bennett. Second Lieutenant, U. S. Infantry, March 8, 1847. Assigned to Company K, Fifteenth Infantry, April 9, 1847. Brevet First Lieutenant Sept. 13, 1847, for gallant and meritorious conduct at Chapultepec. Mustered out with Company Aug. 4, 1848, at Covington, Kentucky. Captain of Third Minnesota Infantry, Oct. 25, 1861. Resigned Feb. 27, 1862. Was a native of Maryland, and an early settler at Bloomington, (now Muscatine,) Iowa Territory. He was Captain of a company organized at Bloomington for the proposed Iowa Regiment of Infantry for the Mexican War. Soon after his discharge he removed to Chatfield, Minn. In the Civil War he raised a company at that place for the Third Minnesota Infantry, but resigned after a few months' service. His subsequent career has not been fully ascertained, but he is said to have died in Mexico. [Heitman's Historical Register, U. S. A.; Dr. Warren Upham, Secretary of Minnesota Historical Society; S. S. McKenny, Chicago.]

Francis O. Beckett. Second Lieutenant, U. S. Infantry, March 8, 1847. Assigned to Company K, Fifteenth U. S. Infantry, April 9, 1847. First Lieutenant May 6, 1848. Brevet First Lieutenant Aug. 20, 1847, for gallant and meritorious conduct at Contreras and Churubusco, Mexico. Temporarily transferred from the company, at Puebla, July 7, 1847. Mustered out with Company Aug. 4, 1848, at Covington, Ky. He was born in the State of Maine and became a resident of Burlington, Iowa. His work in recruiting for the company seems to have been entirely at Keosauqua, Van Buren County. Persistent inquiries among the oldest settlers of Burlington and Van Buren County have failed to reveal anything of his personal history, and he must have left Iowa very soon after the Mexican War. [Heitman's Historical Register, U. S. A.; Bloomington Herald, summer of 1846.]

Daniel French. Lieutenant. Born in Ohio. Appointed from Ohio, Second Lieutenant, Fifteenth Infantry, April 9, 1847. First Lieutenant Aug. 20, 1847. Brevet Captain Sept. 13, 1847, for gallant and meritorious conduct at Chapultepec. Mustered out with Company Aug. 4, 1848, at Covington, Ky. Second Lieutenant, Sixty-fifth Ohio Infantry, Oct. —, 1861. Captain, Nov. —, 1861. Lieutenant Colonel, Nov. 30, 1861. Colonel, One Hundred Twentieth Ohio, Oct. 17, 1862. [Heitman's Historical Register, U. S. A.] The records are obscure as to just when this officer was assigned to Company K, but, from the roster in Iowa Historical Record, Vol. 1, it would appear to be when he was promoted First Lieutenant, Aug. 20, 1847.

Abel W. Wright. Lieutenant. Born in Connecticut. Appointed from Wisconsin, Second Lieutenant, U. S. Infantry, March 6, 1847. Assigned to Company K, Fifteenth U. S. Infantry, April 9, 1847. Mustered out with Company Aug. 4, 1848, at Covington, Ky.

Henry E. Vrooman. First Sergeant. (Iowa Historical Record list, recorded as private.) Enrolled April 6, 1847, at Fort Madison, Iowa, by Captain Guthrie. Died Sept. 5, 1847, (private) at Hospital, Puebla, Mexico, of ordinary disease.

Walter W. Hudson. Second Sergeant. (Iowa Historical Record list, First Sergeant.) Enrolled April 12, 1847, at Burlington, Iowa, by Lieutenant Bowie. Last paid April, 1848, Roll. Following is his military record in Heitman's Historical Register: Born in Kentucky. Appointed from the army. Private, Sergeant and First Sergeant, Fifteenth Infantry, April 12, 1847, to July 18, 1848. Brevet Second Lieutenant, First Infantry, June 28, 1848. Second Lieutenant March 1, 1849. Died April 19, 1850, of wounds received April 7, 1850, with Indians, near Laredo, Texas. Walter Warder Hudson was born in Mason County, Ky., June 11, 1823. His mother was a sister of Jesse R. Grant, father of General U. S. Grant. His promotion to a Lieutenantcy in the Regular Army, by President Polk, was in recognition of his gallantry in action, being credited with having carried the flag over the walls at Chapultepec. The engagement with the Indians, in which he was wounded, was at Fort Hudson, on the Rio Grande River, in Texas, which fort was named in his honor. He died at Fort McIntosh, near Laredo, Texas. (Appleton's Cycl. Amer. Biog.)

John C. Abercrombie. Third Sergeant. (Iowa Historical Record list, First Sergeant.) Enrolled April 7, 1847, at Keosauqua, Iowa, by Lieutenant Beckett. Mustered out with Company Aug. 4, 1848, at Covington, Ky. Born in Perry County, Penn., Oct. 30, 1823. Parents removed to Miami County, Ohio, in 1833. He came to Des Moines County, Iowa, in 1841, and settled at Burlington as a tailor. Enlisted for the Texan War, under Captain Hight, and went to New Orleans. The war had ended in Texas, the Company was disbanded at New Orleans, and he returned to Burlington. His enlistment in Company K, of the Fifteenth, being credited to Keosauqua is not understood, as his home was at Burlington. Returned to Burlington after the Mexican War and adopted the profession of dentistry. At the opening of the Civil War he was commissioned, by Governor Kirkwood, First Lieutenant of Company E, First Iowa Infantry, and discharged on the expiration of the three months' service of that regiment. On the organization of the Eleventh Iowa Infantry, he was commissioned Major of that regiment. He was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel and Colonel, but the strength of the regiment did not admit of his being commissioned as Colonel. Mr. Reid's history gives a list of sixteen names of Iowa men who were known to have been engaged in active service in the Mexican War, either in the Regular Army or in military organizations of other States. Some of these men rendered distinguished service. Mr. Reid gives extended biographical sketches of nearly all of these men, which have been condensed to the usual paragraph form in the list which follows:

THE MORMON BATTALION OF IOWA VOLUNTEERS

A very extended account of experiences of the organization known as Mormons or Latter Day Saints—from the date of their settlement at Nauvoo, Ill., to the time of their leaving that place and moving farther west—is given in Mr. Reid's early history of Iowa. Limitation of space will only permit the compiler to quote such portions of the official orders as relate to the action of the War Department, in authorizing the organization of a battalion of Infantry Volunteers, to be composed exclusively of men belonging to the Mormon Church. This battalion—as will be seen—was to co-operate with and become a part of an expeditionary force, whose ultimate destination was to be some point on the Pacific Coast. The inducement to the Mormons to engage in such service was mainly the opportunity it would afford them to found a new home for their people at some point in the far west. The following extracts are made from a letter of instructions from W. L. Marcy, Secretary of War, to Brigadier General S. W. Kearny, commanding United States forces at Fort Leavenworth. The letter is dated at the War Department, in Washington, June 3, 1846.

“ . . . It has been decided by the President to be of the greatest importance, in the pending war with Mexico, to take early possession of Upper California. An expedition, with that view, is hereby ordered, and you are designated to command it. To enable you to be in sufficient force to conduct it successfully, an additional force of one thousand mounted men has been provided to follow you in the direction of Santa Fe, to be under your orders, or the officer you may leave in command at Santa Fe. . . . I need not say to you that, in case you conquer Santa Fe, and with it the Department or State of New Mexico, it will be important to provide for retaining safe possession. Should you deem it necessary to have still more troops for the accomplishment of the object herein designated, you will lose no time in communicating your opinion on that point, and all others connected with the enterprise, to this department. Indeed, you are hereby authorized to make direct requisition upon the Governor of Missouri for troops.

“It is known that a large body of Mormon emigrants are enroute to California, for the purpose of settling in that country. You are desired to use all proper means to have a good understanding with them, to the end that the United States may have their co-operation in taking possession of and holding that country. It has been suggested here, that many of these Mormons would willingly enter into the service of the United States, and aid us in our expedition against California. You are hereby authorized to muster into service such as can be induced to volunteer, not, however, to a number exceeding one-third of your entire force. Should they enter the service, they will be paid as other volunteers, and you can allow them to designate, as far as it can properly be done, the persons to act as their officers. It is understood that a considerable number of American citizens are now settled on the Sacramento River, near Suter's establishment, called Nueva Helvetica. . . . Should you, on your arrival in that country, find such to be the case, you are authorized to organize and receive into the service of the United States such portion of these citizens as you may think useful to aid you to hold possession of the country. You will, in that case, allow them, so far as you may deem proper, to select their own officers. A large discretionary power is invested in you in regard to these matters, as well as to all others in relation to the expedition confided to your command. . . ."

General Kearny lost no time in acting upon the suggestion to recruit a battalion from the Mormon emigrants. Captain James Allen, of the First U. S. Dragoons, was detailed for the purpose of organizing the battalion. He received minute instructions, which he carried out to the letter. The additional inducement was offered the Mormons that, upon the expiration of their term of service, they would be allowed to retain as their private property the guns and accoutrements furnished them by the government. The battalion was promptly organized and mustered into the service of the United States. Its service is well described in the official report of Colonel P. St. George Cooke, describing the march from Santa Fe to San Diego, Cal. There were many interesting incidents connected with the march of the battalion to Santa Fe, but it was after leaving that place that its most important and arduous service was performed, as shown in the official report, which is here given in full:

REPORT OF LIEUTENANT COLONEL P. ST. GEORGE COOKE OF HIS
MARCH FROM SANTA FE, NEW MEXICO, TO SAN DIEGO, UPPER CALIFORNIA

"San Luis Rey, California,
February 5, 1847.

"Sir:—In obedience to Army of the West Order No. 33, of October 2nd, I returned from La Joya, New Mexico, to Santa Fe, to take command of the Mormon Battalion. I arrived there on the 7th of October.

"I found that the paymasters, from whose arrival you anticipated a plentiful resource of money for the quartermaster department, had brought so little specie that no payment of troops could be made. The consequence was that Captain Hudson's Company of Volunteers for California, which you had assigned to my command, could not mount themselves; and the quartermaster's department, which scarcely commanded a dollar, could hardly have furnished the transportation. Owing to these difficulties, the Captain's new company was broken up by Colonel Doniphan, commanding.

"A portion of the battalion of Mormons arrived the evening of the 9th of October, under First Lieutenant A. J. Smith, First Dragoons, who had, in the capacity of Acting Lieutenant Colonel, directed its march from Council Grove. The rear of the battalion arrived the evening of the 12th. On the 13th, I assumed command, with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, by virtue of your appointment. Its aggregate present was four hundred forty-eight. I found that their mules were entirely broken down, and that as many as sixty men had, from sickness and other causes, been transported in wagons much of the march; and that there were twenty-five women, besides many children. The Assistant Surgeon of the battalion, Doctor Sanderson, and a senior officer of the department, Doctor DeCamp, reported on the cases of a very large number as subjects for discharge for disability. But the Colonel commanding determined, under all the circumstances, to retain them in service, and ordered them to be sent to winter at "Pueblo," on the Arkansas River, above Bent's Fort. There the Mormons have a temporary settlement, and there Mr. Smith had sent, from the crossing of the Arkansas, a party of ten, commanded by Captain Higgins, in charge of a large number of families, which had theretofore been attached to the Mormon Battalion. This detachment had orders to join the battalion at Santa Fe. (They arrived after its march, and, I learned, obtained permission to return to the Pueblo.) About this time, I learned that you had left your wagons, in consequence of difficulties of the country; and was anxious, for the benefit of all, to disencumber the expedition of the twenty laundresses. Learning that the most of them wished to go with the detachment to the Arkansas, I ordered them all to be sent there. With a sufficient number of able-bodied men (husbands of the women) to take care of it, the detachment amounted to eighty-six, and was placed under the command of Captain Brown.

"I urged every preparation for the march, but it was impossible to complete them before the 19th of October; the battalion was paid, with treasury drafts, on the 16th and 17th. There was no salt pork in Santa Fe; a sufficiency did not arrive until the evening of the 16th. Beef cattle, furnished under previous contract to the battalion, were received on the night of the 17th; and a quantity of pack saddles the same evening. On the 19th of October, I marched out of Santa Fe, and encamped at Agua Frio. At the earnest request of two captains and three sergeants, their wives were permitted to accompany the expedition; having their own wagons and mules and provisions.

"The rations had been issued to the companies, and each had three mule wagons, and one was drawn by oxen (these last were to be sent back on leaving the river). The rations were sixty days flour and salt, sugar and coffee; thirty days of pickled pork, and twenty of soap.

"The mules furnished me were mostly poor and worked down; the half of them were utterly unfit to commence an ordinary march. A number, as well as of oxen, were left behind, unable to walk, in the first forty miles. Thus, I was obliged to exchange them two for one, and to purchase many others. For the first one hundred fifty miles, on the Rio Grande, there was, at that season, no grass deserving the name. I purchased, when I could, corn and fodder, but in very small quantities. I had three hundred eighty sheep purchased, near Socorro, and beeves, to make up the sixty days' rations. About seventy-five miles below that point, I became convinced that the march must fail, unless some improvement was made. I was marching about eight miles a day, in as many hours, through the deep sand; the mules, overworked, growing poorer, giving out, dying and left behind each day.

"From the opinions of the guides, there was also reason to apprehend that the supply of provisions was inadequate; and the ox wagons were then to go back. There were twenty-two men on the sick report, who, with the arms and knapsacks of others, encumbered the wagons. I called on the Assistant Surgeon and company commanders for lists of those they believed worthless for the march; fifty-eight names were soon given to me. Captain Burgwin's camp was fifty-eight miles above. I resolved, then, to send back those fifty-eight men, with twenty-six days' rations, with one ox wagon, and to leave the other two there, to be sent for, retaining the teams, and to make another reduction of baggage. Many tents and camp-kettles were left in the wagons, and all the upright poles, for which muskets were used as substitutes. (The backs of the tents were opened, and a piece inserted, so as thus to become very large and nearly circular, in which ten men were accommodated.) The oxen I used in mule wagons; packed those unfit for draught, and also, though very lightly, the poor extra mules. The detachment went in command of a lieutenant, who received orders to report, for ultimate instructions, to the officer commanding in the territory. A calculation showed that, by these measures, with increased means of transportation, the loads were reduced twenty per cent; and also that the rations (or half rations) of the battalion were increased by eight days. Then, and only then, could I begin to see my way to the end, with confidence. After these two weedings of the old, the feeble and sickly, from the battalion, lads and old grey-headed men still remained.

"The numerous guides and hirelings you sent to me, I found at the lowest village; they had been idle for weeks, and I found I was to venture, with my wagons, into a wide region, unknown to any of them. The river route improved greatly, and, opposite, was apparently a practicable gap in the mountain barrier, between mine and the Chihyahua Road (the fine but badly watered stretch known as the Jornada del Muerto). About thirty miles lower, and in the vicinity of a point called San Diego, the mountains which, so far, had confined the road to the river, break off, and then I turned short to the right, on the arid table land of Mexico, which I found studded with the profusion of isolated mountains of volcanic origin. My method, now, was this: Leroux [guide] with five, six or seven others, would get a day in advance, exploring for water, in the best practicable direction; finding a spring or a puddle (sometimes a hole) in nearly inaccessible rocks, he would send a man back, who would meet me and be the guide. This operation would be repeated until his number was unsafely reduced, when he would await me, or return to take a fresh departure. This was the plan, but ever varying and uncertain, attended, of course, with much anxiety; and sometimes, the inconvenience of neglect or tardiness, on the part of the guides, making the road once or twice, to vary from the better course, which a more thorough examination, in the first instance, would have discovered. Such, with some vicissitudes of risk and suffering, and the accidental aid of a little confused information from a trading party we encountered, was the manner of my progress for about two hundred fifty miles from the Rio Grande to the San Pedro, a tributary of the Gila. But I anticipate.

"Thus I reached the Ojo de Vaca, about twenty-six miles south from the copper mines, on an old road to Yanos, used for transporting the ore. To the west appeared a vast prairie opening, between the mountains; it was the course; but the principal guides had each his dread of it, founded upon vague information, from Indians, of its destitution of water; and watering places might exist and not be found by us. They had explored about twenty-five miles of it, finding an out of the way and insufficient hole of water ten miles distant.

"I ascended a high peak, and there, taking the bearings of distant land marks, which they professed to know, earnestly consulted with them and the interpreter, who had lately passed through Sonora, as to the best course to be taken. They were deceived, themselves, as I believe, and so deceived me, as to the direction of Yanos; and gave a decided opinion as to the unsafety of venturing into the prairie; and also, that it would be best to take the Yanos road, and thence, by an old trail, a road formerly used to connect the presidios or frontier garrisons, Yanos, Fronteras, Fruson, etc.

"The next morning, having reluctantly assented, I took the Yanos road. A mile or two convinced me (and them) that its general direction was very different from their representations; and east of south. I then took the responsibility of turning short to the right, and ordered them to guide me to the water hole. I had some confused information of water to be found in the direction of San Bernadino. Mr. Leroux had been very decided that it would be necessary to go by this southern point, even if I ventured that far on the unknown prairie. I then marched forty miles without water, except a drink for part of the men, where I had hoped to find enough for encamping. The battalion was not prepared for it and suffered much. These were anxious circumstances and the responsibility I had taken weighed heavily upon me; their safety and my success seemed both doubtful. Fortunately, a large spring was reached on the second night, after a continuous march of thirteen hours; and when men and mules were at the point of exhaustion, for the weather was quite warm.

"I was joined here by a party of New Mexicans, who had been trading with the Apaches. I purchased twenty-one mules of them, giving a check on the Assistant Quartermaster at Santa Fe. I also hired one of them to conduct Leroux to the mountain valley, where they had left the Apaches, and sent him to seek an Indian guide. A day or two after, we found a trail leading toward San Bernadino; and the fourth day, early, just after Chabonnaux, the only guide then present, had very unwarrantedly gone off hunting, we fell into what was believed to be the trail or road from Yanos, to Fronteras; and it immediately led us to a precipitous and rocky descent of perhaps a thousand feet, amongst broken, wild and confused peaks, which extended as far as could be seen from our great height. I soon found the trail could not be made passable for the wagons; and I hunted myself for a more promising descent, and, in fact, saw a part of the proper one, but very inaccessible from the mountain height on which I then was. My next care was to seek the nearest ground suitable for a camp; fortunately I found water about a mile off. All pronounced the country before us impassable for wagons; I, nevertheless, organized a large working party, under Lieutenant Stoneman, and sent him to make a passage. That night Leroux arrived, bringing an Apache chief, whom he had got hold of with difficulty, and probably great address, so shy were they found. Next morning it was owing to Leroux's decided assertions and arguments that there could be, and was, no other known pass but the horse trail, that I did not insist on his thorough examination. He even asserted, but was mistaken, that he had examined the opening I had seen and described, and believed might be a wagon road. Meanwhile, the party continued the second day hard at work, with crow bar, pick, etc.; whilst I sent one company and about half the baggage, packed on mules, to the first water on the trail, in a deep ravine below. It was about six miles, and the mules were brought back in the evening. Next morning they took the rest of the loading, and I succeeded that day, with much labor and difficulty, breaking one, in getting the wagons to the new camp. Doctor Foster accidentally found the outlet of an old wagon road, (into mine) and, following back, it led him to the verge of the plain, about a mile from our point of descent. He says this is called the pass of Guadalupe; and that it is the only one, for many hundreds of miles to the south, by which the broken descent from the great table land of Mexico can be made by wagons, and rarely by pack mules. I hold it to be a question whether the same difficult formation does not extend north, at least to the Gila. If it is so, my road is probably the nearest and the best route. But, if the prairie to the north is open to the San Pedro, and water can be found, that improvement will make my road not only a good but a direct one from the Rio Grande to the Pacific.

"San Barnadio [San Bernadino] is a ruined ranch, with buildings enclosed by a wall, with regular bastions. It overlooks a wide, flat and rich valley, watered by a noble spring, which runs into one of the upper branches of the Huaqui River, which is but a few miles distant. Here I succeeded in meeting a few of the Apaches, and obtained a guide, who went about twenty miles, and described the rest of the route to the San Pedro. He was afraid to venture further, and return alone over the plain; the point where he turned back was within fourteen miles of the presidio of Fronteras. It was in the mountain pass that we first saw the wild bulls, from which the command obtained their exclusive supply of meat for about two weeks. They are the increase from those abandoned, when the two ranches of San Barnadio [San Bernadino] and San Pedro (on the river of the same name) were broken up in consequence of incessant Indian attacks. They have spread and increased, so as to cover the country; they were as wild and more dangerous than buffalo.

"I made the next sixty-two miles to the San Pedro River with little more difficulty than cutting my way through dense thickets of mesquite and many other varieties of bushes, all excessively thorny. It was but twenty-seven miles without water over the last divide; there was snow one day, and for about two weeks, at that time, we suffered with cold. I descended the San Pedro fifty-five miles, to a point whence a trail goes to Tucson.⁴ The guides represented that it was eighty-five miles of very difficult, if practicable, ground, to the mouth of the San Pedro, and one hundred from there to the Pimos; also very bad, and little or no grass; and, on the other hand, that it was only about ninety miles of good road, with grass, by Tucson to the same point. I reflected that I was in no condition to go an unnecessary one hundred miles, good or bad; and that, if their statements were true, the future road must go by the town. I had previously sent Lercux, Foster and others to examine if there was water on the thirty miles, which was the estimated distance to Tucson.

⁴In the copy furnished by Mr. Reid, this word is first spelled Tucson and afterwards Tueson. We have followed the first spelling, although the original, printed Report of Colonel Cooke (since found) gives the spelling "Tucson" in every case.

Leroux had just returned; he had found water at a "still house," twenty miles from the river; and had encountered there a Sergeant's party of dragoons. He had made up a story to get off; but, to give it color, Doctor Foster fancied it necessary to go on to the town. Leroux was told by Indians that two hundred soldiers, with artillery, had been there concentrated. I reached the water next day, and probably surprised the Sergeant's party. I found them cutting grass; but the Sergeant, as if the bearer of a flag, delivered me a singular message from the commander, which amounted to a request that I should not pass his post. Next morning I made prisoners of four others, who had come, probably, with provisions; and, as Doctor Foster's long stay had made me uneasy for him, I dismissed one of them with a note stating that I should hold the others as hostages for his safety; and promised to release the prisoners if he was sent to me that evening. Deceived as to the distance, but expecting to encamp without water, I marched late; and, having made twelve miles on road very difficult in places, I encamped at sundown on the high prairie. At midnight, Foster reached me; with him came two officers, one as a "commissioner," with written instructions to offer a kind of truce, by the terms of which I was to pass the town by a certain point, and to hold no communication with the people. I rejected them, and demanded a capitulation; which the commissioner, with great form, wrote, after his own fashion, in Spanish, and I signed it. The terms bound the garrison not to serve against the United States during the present war; and, as the only further tokens of surrender, to deliver to me two carbines and three lances; my men to enter freely and trade with the inhabitants of the town. After a tedious conference of two hours, in which we had been very friendly, but very cold, the officers departed, assuring me my terms could not be accepted. Believing I was eight or nine miles from town, I took measures to march at daylight; but unfortunately, the mules, being herded in mesquite bushes, and without water, the half of them, in the darkness of night, escaped the guard; and I could not possibly march, with any prudence, before eight o'clock.

"The distance proved to be sixteen miles. About five miles from town I was met by a dragoon, or lancer, who delivered me a letter, simply refusing my terms. I told him there was no answer, and he rode off. I then ordered the arms to be loaded. Immediately afterwards, two citizens rode up and reported the place had been evacuated. I arrived at one o'clock, and, having passed through the fort, encamped in the edge of the town. Two small field pieces had been taken off, and all public property of value, except a large store of wheat.

"The garrisons of Tubac, Santa Cruz and Fronteras had been concentrated, and, I understood Doctor Foster, there were altogether about two hundred thirty men; but I have lately learned he only estimated them at one hundred thirty. I remained in camp the next day, December 16th. There was very little grass, and I fed my mules, cattle and sheep on the wheat, and brought off enough for two more days in the adjoining desert. That day, to cover some small parties of mule hunters, I made a reconnaissance, with about sixty men, marching half-way to an Indian village, about ten miles off, where the enemy were stationed. (I intended attacking him under favorable circumstances, but the path led me through a dense mesquite forest, very favorable to an ambush; I learned, however, that this demonstration caused him to continue his retreat.)

"The garrison attempted to force all the inhabitants to leave the town with them. Some of them returned whilst I lay there, and I took pains that all should be treated with kindness. The day that I arrived there, a detachment of twenty-five men, who had been posted at the Pimos, to observe or harass my march, having been sent for by express, passed unobserved around a mountain, near town, and joined the main body. (I afterwards learned that they had made a threatening demand for the mules and goods left for me with the Indian chief. He refused, and expressed his determination to resist, by force, any attempt to take them.) On leaving T., I sent to its late commander, Captain Commaduran, by a citizen messenger, a letter for the governor of Sonora, and I afterwards received an answer that it would be transmitted. It is appended. All things considered I thought it the proper course to take toward a reputed popular governor of a state, believed to be disgusted and disaffected to the imbecile central government. It was intimated to me, whilst in Tucson, that, if I would march toward the capital of the department, I would be joined by sufficient numbers to effect a revolution.

"On the 17th, I marched late, as I did not expect to find water. At eight o'clock P. M., I encamped twenty-four miles from Tucson, with no water or grass. Ten or fifteen miles further there is a little water, in a mountain, close to the road, but it could not be found; and I marched the second day thirty miles, and, at nine P. M., again encamped without water; but the men, about sundown, had a drink from a small puddle, too shallow for the water to be dipped with a cup. On the third day, I marched early, eight or nine miles, and encamped at rain water pools. The next day I found it ten miles to the Gila, at a small grass bottom, above the Pimo villages. The mules were forty-eight miles without water; the men marched twenty-six of thirty-six consecutive hours, and sixty-two miles in rather more than two days, in one of which no meat rations were issued.

"Thus the ninety miles of the guides turned out to be one hundred twenty-eight to the village; fifty-seven miles nearer than the reputed distance by the San Pedro. Excepting four or five miles, the road was excellent, but over a true desert. There is, however, a better watered road from Tucson, which strikes the Gila higher up. I believe this route can be well taken for six months in the year, and that, like much of the road on this side, it is impassable in summer, unless for travelers. It is a great gold district; rich mines have been discovered in many of the mountains in view, but it is so barren and destitute of water that even a mining population can scarcely occupy it.

"I halted one day near the villages of this friendly, guileless and singularly innocent and cheerful people, the Pimos. There Francisco met me with your letter from Warner's ranch; he brought with him seven mules found on the Gila, and, altogether, I obtained at the villages twenty which had belonged to the dragoons. They were not sufficiently recruited to be of much service. I traded the Indian goods and every spare article for corn. After feeding it several days, I brought away twelve quarts for each public animal, which was fed in very small quantities.

"With the aid of a compass, and closely estimating the distances, I had made a rude sketch of my route from the point on the Rio Grande, where our roads diverged, to their junction, near the villages. It is herewith submitted. I have good reason to believe that even with pack mules better time can be made on my route than on yours; and the mules keep in good order, for mine improved on the greater part of it. On the 27th of December, (after making the forced march, without water, across the bend of the Gila,) in consequence of the information received in your letter, I determined to send my useless guides, express, to give you information of my approach, etc.; hoping thus, as I said, to meet orders at Warner's ranch on the 21st of January, and to be of service to your active operations. I also sent for assistance in mules, understanding that you had placed a number of them in that vicinity.

"Sixty or seventy miles above the mouth of the Gila, having more wagons than necessary, and scarcely able to get them on, I tried the experiment, with very flattering assurance of success, of boating with two pontoon wagon beds and a raft for the running gear. I embarked a portion of the rations, some road tools, and corn. The experiment signally failed, owing to the shallowness of the water on the bars; the river was very low. In consequence of the difficulty of approaching the river, orders mistaken, etc., the flour only was saved from the loading, and the pontoons were floated empty to the crossing of the Rio Colorado, where they were used as a ferry boat. I passed that river on the 10th and 11th of January. On the first day and night, the loading of the wagons and many men were boated over. On the morning of the 11th, the mules were driven two miles, from grass; then drew the wagons through the long ford of a mile, nearly swimming. The wagons were then loaded in the willow thicket, and I marched nearly fifteen miles over the sandy road, to the first well, the same day; a great effort and labor. But, as there was no food for the mules on this side, I deemed it so necessary that I forced it, against every obstacle; marching, in fact, when one company's wagon was in a hole in the middle of the river, the sheep and rear guard on the opposite bank. In the well I found no water; and, when obtained by digging deeper, it was in quick sand, and quite insufficient for the men. I had another well dug, and, against hope almost, when considerably below the water level of the old one, that of the river water suddenly boiled up.

"I viewed this, as in other instances, a Providential deliverance. It was the most trying hour of my long military service. That water failing, the next well would also; and all the circumstances well considered, it will be found that on obtaining it not only depended my military success, but the lives of very many, who justly could hold me responsible.

"When of no real use to me, some wagons, which were broken on the march, were left, in order to save the mules. At this first well I left three, because the mules were unequal to drawing them. I had then remaining one for each company and two others. I sent forward a strong party to the next well, to prepare it, and dig another. I arrived there the second day, soon after noon; and, during my stay, until eleven A. M. the following morning, I could not obtain enough water. There I left two more wagons (arrangements were made for sending for all these wagons the moment that I arrived at the first ranch).

"I then took the direction of the 'pozo hondo'—the deep well; sending a party through the first day, and arriving before noon, the second. Although a second deep well had been dug, the water was insufficient even for the men to drink. I had spent the night without water, and thirty miles of desert were still before me; the men wayworn and exhausted, half fed, and many shoeless. But I met there a relief of mules and some bees. Mr. Leroux had sent back fifty-seven mules, which were chiefly young, unbroken, and wild as deer, and the cattle, in one body, (and by poor hands) so a day's time had been lost, and twenty of the mules.

"I immediately had a beef killed for a meal; a drink of water issued to the men, the wild mules caught by their Indian drivers, with the lasso, thrown, haltered and harnessed; the poor animals, which then had not drank for thirty-six hours, struggling desperately during the whole process, which lasted above two hours under a hot sun. Then I marched until an hour after dark, and halted to rest until two o'clock in the morning. I had chosen a spot where there was some large bunch grass, which was cut for the mules. There was no moon, but at two o'clock the battalion marched again; and, at midday, having come eighteen miles more, after long ascending its dry bed, met the running waters of the Carizita. The most of the animals had been without water for about fifty hours. Here there was but little grass, and I marched next day fifteen miles, through the sands, to the Bajiocito, the poor men staggering, utterly exhausted, into camp. At this time there should have been half rations of flour for nine days; but owing, probably, to inevitable wastage, the last of it was eaten here. I rested a day, and received at evening a letter from Commander Montgomery. It advised me of your march to Pueblo; of the tardy arrival of my express, and of communication with you being cut off. Next day I encountered extraordinary obstacles to a wagon road, and actually hewed a passage with axes through a chasm of solid rock, which lacked a foot of being as wide as the wagons. Two of them were taken through in pieces, whilst the work was going on. So much was I retarded that I encamped at dark on the mountain slope, making but seven miles, without water, and without being prepared for it. San Philippi was six miles on this side, but there was a ridge between, so rough with rocks that, after much labor, it took extreme care to get the wagons over in daylight. At San Philippi I met one of my express men, who had returned, according to instructions, to guide me. Though direct from San Diego, he brought neither orders nor news. I encamped that night near the summit of the beautiful pass, overlooking the valley of Agua Calienta. On the 21st day of January I arrived and encamped at Warner's ranch, the very day, as it happened, I had promised in my letter of December 27th.

"This was seven miles off the road to San Diego; but I had resolved, the night before, to march for the Pueblo de los Angeles, where the enemy had concentrated, unless I met orders or fresh information. That which I had, placed your forces approaching it on the south, and Lieutenant Colonel Fremont's from the north. Thus, I should advance from the east, and from the only pass leading to Sonora. I halted at Warner's the 22nd, to rest and refresh my men, before commencing, as I hoped, active operations. The day was required, in fact, to obtain beef cattle, and to collect the new mules, many of which had escaped to their wonted pastures in that vicinity.

"On the 23rd, I marched eighteen miles on the road to Pueblo. That night we were exposed to a drenching rain, and a wind storm which prostrated every tent. The storm continued the next day; I, however, marched over a very bad road, three or four miles, to more sheltered ground, and better grass for the animals. (A mountain torrent in front would have forbidden further progress.)

"On the 25th, I marched into the Temecala valley, and encamped four days' march from Pueblo. There I received a letter, written by your orders, which had followed me by Warner's. From this letter I could infer that hostilities were suspended, and that I was expected at San Diego. Accordingly, next morning, I left the valley by a very difficult outlet, and, descending into that of the San Luis, fell into the road leading from Pueblo de los Angeles.

"At San Luis Rey I received your instructions, by express, to march to San Diego Mission, and there take post. I arrived there, by a very bad cross road, on the 29th of January, and the same evening reported to you, in person, at San Diego.

"This march from Santa Fe has extended, by my daily estimate, to eleven hundred twenty-five miles. It has been made in one hundred two days, in fourteen of which no march was made; so that the marching days average slightly less than thirteen miles. The rest days have been very nearly one in seven. It is believed, by many who have had experience, that the weekly day of rest is advisable on a long march, even for speed. In looking back, I find that the half of mine were unavoidable detentions. I made, also, some twelve marches of less than nine miles, in consequence of extraordinary bad road, or the delays of road making, over difficult ground, and also the necessity, at times, of accommodating the marches and camps to inconvenient watering places. If I had continued on the most direct route to San Diego, the distance would have been rather under eleven hundred miles—about eighteen hundred miles from Independence, Mo., by Santa Fe.

"The constant tenor of your letters of instruction made it almost a point of honor to bring wagons through to the Pacific; and so I was retarded in making and finding a road for them. From this road, any that may follow will have various advantages. The breaking the track, often through thickets of mesquite and other thorny bushes, although worked on by pioneers, was so laborious that I habitually relieved the front wagons about every hour; but a team on a firm open prairie labors much less, if on a beaten track. Much of the difficult ground on the Gila, consisting of light porous clay, becomes a good beaten road. My journal and sketch indicate some points where the road may be shortened; but, between the Ojo de Vaca and the point of leaving the San Pedro River, it is probable that between eighty and one hundred miles may be saved, and some bad road be avoided. It is only necessary for a small, experienced party, well provided with water, (with Indian guides, if practicable,) to explore the prairie, and discover the water places. The direct distance is about one hundred sixty miles.

"The worse road is on the Rio Grande, opposite the upper and middle part of the Jornada del Muerto. It may probably be avoided by coming the Jornada road half way down or more, and then crossing to the west side. I have reason to believe that there are gaps in the mountains, and opposite where my road becomes good. This assumes that the great highway will pass as far north as Santa Fe—which may not be the case. The country from the Rio Grande to Tucson is covered with grama-grass, on which animals, moderately worked, will fatten in winter.

"An emigrant company may leave Independence, Mo., from June 10th to late in August, or Van Buren, Ark., later. It will subsist a short time on buffaloes, and be able to lay up much of the meat, dried or salted. In New Mexico, it may rest, make repairs, and obtain supplies—particularly of mules, sheep and cattle—which, in that grazing country, will be found cheap; it may pass through settlements for two hundred fifty miles; and they will be much extended in the rich river bottoms to the south, when the Indians shall be subdued.

"I brought to California both beeves and sheep; the latter did, perhaps, the best, requiring little water; they gave no trouble; two or three men can drive and guard a thousand. At Tucson, or at the Pimo villages, fresh supplies may be obtained. The Pimos and Maracopas, fifteen or twenty thousand in number, wonderfully honest and friendly to strangers, raise corn and wheat, which they grind and sell cheaply for bleached domestics, summer clothing of all sorts, showy cotton handkerchiefs, and white beads. They also have a few mules and cattle. I gave them some breeding sheep. Oxen will not do well for draught; their feet become tender; and, west of the Pimos, their food is not found sufficient or suitable. Mules require no shoes; I cached a large quantity on the Gila, having used none. Undoubtedly, the fine bottom land of the Colorado, if not of the Gila, will soon be settled; then all difficulty will be removed. The crossing is about one hundred miles from the mouth, and about sixty above the tide. For six months in the year, the river is said to be navigable by steamboats for three hundred fifty miles; its bottoms are wide and rich; and sugar, undoubtedly, may be grown. In winter, it is fordable at the crossing; but I think it has at least as much water as the Missouri at the same season, and may be navigable by steamers at the mouth of the Gila at all seasons.

"In conclusion, much credit is due to the battalion for the cheerful and faithful [manner] in which they have accomplished the great labors of this march, and submitted to its exposures and privations. They would much have preferred to lighten and abridge them, by leaving the wagons; but, without previous discipline, all was accomplished with unity and determination of spirit. To enable the mules to endure the extraordinary labor of drawing these wagons without a road, and often without food or water, the duties of guards were greatly increased to herd them safely, as they did, over tracts sometimes a mile in extent, sometimes two miles from the camp, or beyond a river; and ten times did the battalion encamp without water. I am indebted to Lieutenants Smith and Stoneman, of the First Dragoons, who performed the duties of Assistant Commissary of Subsistence and Assistant Quartermaster, for valuable assistance, particularly in directing the pioneers. Mr. Willard P. Hall, too, was ever ready to give me aid, particularly in the most active and venturous duties.

"Thus, General, whilst fortune was conducting you to battles and victories, I was fated to devote my best energies to more humble labors; and all have cause to regret that the real condition of affairs in this territory was so little understood. But it is passed, and I must be content with having done my duty in the task which you assigned to me, if, as I trust, to your satisfaction.

Respectfully submitted,

P. ST. GEORGE COOKE, Lieutenant Colonel, Commanding Mormon Battalion.

BRIGADIER GENERAL S. W. KEARNY, *Commanding Army of the West,
San Diego, Upper California."*

It will thus be seen that the Mormon Battalion had a very remarkable record of service. The subjoined roster of the battalion was transcribed from Mr. Reid's early history without abridgment. The compiler has endeavored to describe the main incidents connecting the State of Iowa with the War with Mexico, and, considering its sparse population, it certainly must be conceded that its citizens made a record in that war unsurpassed by any other State in the Union.

IOWA MORMON BATTALIONINTRODUCTION.

The official Muster-out Rolls of the Mormon Battalion were supplied by the Assistant Chief, Records Division of the Auditor of the Treasury for the War Department. We have also a printed list of all the companies of the battalion taken from "A Concise History of the Mormon Battalion," written by Daniel Tyler, a Corporal and Sergeant in Company C. This affords an opportunity for the comparison of the two lists, and, where differences appear in the spelling of names or otherwise, they will be noted.

In a few instances some additional accounts of personal history will be given, found in a Church Encyclopedia, printed in the December, 1889, number of the Historical Record, a Church periodical published in Salt Lake City. The detached service noted after the names of several of the soldiers we find explained in the history of the battalion.

A guard was detached on September 16, 1846, from a point on the Arkansas River, under Captain Higgins, to take a number of families which had accompanied the battalion to Pueblo, a Mexican town located farther up the Arkansas River—the present city of Pueblo, Colorado. This guard appears on the official record as on detached service, by order of Acting Lieutenant Colonel A. J. Smith.

Again, on October 17th, those incapable, from sickness and debility, were sent from Santa Fe to Pueblo, by order of Colonel Doniphan, Commanding the Army of the West. Again, on November 10th, the twenty-second day after leaving Santa Fe, when about to turn off from the valley of the Rio Grande to cross the mountains and deserts, Colonel Cooke sent back Lieutenant W. W. Willis, with fifty-five sick men, to Santa Fe, and from there they also marched to Pueblo.

These detachments all remained at Pueblo during the winter, and late in May took up their march for Salt Lake City, where they arrived during July, and were there mustered out to date July 16th, the expiration of their term of service.

This explains the note on the official roll. [See also record of Gilbert Hunt, of Company A, for further explanation of muster out.]

of

Captain Jefferson Hunt's Company A, of the Mormon Battalion of Foot Volunteers, to the 16th day of July, 1847, when discharged by expiration of term of service.

It appears that all "Joined for Service and Enrolled at the General Rendezvous" July 16th, 1846, at Council Bluffs, Iowa, and that all were "Mustered Into Service" at the same place and on the same date. (Those details are therefore omitted in paragraphs which follow.)

In the Historical Register and Dictionary of the United States Army, edited by F. B. Heitman, and published by the War Department, in 1903, the name of this battalion is given as the Iowa Mormon Battalion.

Evidence on file indicates that it was stationed at or near Great Salt Lake at time of M. O., but travel pay has been allowed in each case from Los Angeles, so the detachment was evidently considered as having been M. O. at that place the same as the balance of the Company." Some tiles had previously been burned and perhaps some bricks may have been imported as ballast, but none had ever been made there." ("The Mormon Battalion" in Historical Record, Vol. 8, page 937.)

(In the history of Mormon Battalion, Historical Record, Vol. 8, page 919, it is stated that "On the 10th of April, Marvin S. Blanchard departed this life at Pueblo, Colorado, after a lingering illness." We are unable to reconcile this discrepancy. If he died April 10th he could not have been mustered out July 16th.)

Hughes, in Doniphan's Expedition, 1848, (Connelly's Reprint, Page 258) says that "Glines" was Sergeant Major of the Mormon Battalion. It appears from Tyler's History of the Mormon Battalion that, after remaining at Pueblo until Dec. 23d, John H. Tippetts and Thomas Woolsey (Company E) left there alone and without a guide to take money to their families and friends at the place they called Winter Quarters, on the Missouri River opposite Council Bluffs, where Florence, Nebraska, now stands. It being in the dead of winter, the journey was a hazardous and perilous one, but they arrived safely Feb. 15, 1847, at the house of Brigham Young. The following April the two soldiers joined the Company of Mormons there, who became known as the Pioneers of 1847, led by Brigham Young, who set out for Great Salt Lake Valley, to select their new abiding place. The pioneers on their march were divided into Hundreds, Fifties, and Tens. Tippetts is registered as one of the Eleventh Ten.

When near Fort Laramie, on the West Platte River, Apostle Amasa M. Lyman took Tippetts, Woolsey, and another man, and left the column to meet the Pueblo detachments, who had left that place on their way to Salt Lake. The junction of the two parties was made on the 11th of June, on Lodge Pole Creek, and they proceeded from there on to their destination in the Mormon's new home. Mustered out with detachment, to date July 16, 1847. It appears in Tyler's History that, on Oct. 19, 1846, Roswell Stevens started for Council Bluffs, in company with Lieutenant Samuel L. Gulley, John D. Lee, and Howard Egan, who carried the checks the brethren were sending home to their families. He returned the following summer with John H. Tippetts and others. (See John H. Tippetts, Company D.) He thus appears registered among the "Pioneers" of 1847. ["Mormon Battalion," Historical Record, Vol. VIII, pages 916, 920, 939.]

- George Wilson. Private. On detached service since Nov. 10, 1846, by Battalion Order No. 16. Mustered out with detachment, to date July 16, 1847.

Thomas Woolsey. Private. On detached service since Oct. 17, 1846, by order of Colonel Doniphan, Commanding Army of the West. Mustered out with detachment, to date July 16, 1847. According to Tyler's History, Woolsey was detached, with Captain Higgins' party, Sept. 17, 1846, and he also tells the story about how Woolsey and John H. Tippetts made a trip back to winter quarters on the Missouri river. [See John H. Tippetts, Company D.] He also gives Woolsey's name as one of Lieutenant Willis' sick detachment, which agrees with the Official Roll. The explanation probably is that some of Captain Higgins' party returned to the Battalion at Santa Fe, after their arrival at Pueblo. This hypothesis has some support from the clause in Lieutenant Colonel P. St. George Cooke's Journal, in which, writing at Santa Fe Oct. 13th, he says: "Captain Higgins was ordered to join the Battalion with his party." It does not appear that Higgins did return to the Battalion before its departure for California, but some of his men might have done so.

DISCHARGED

John Allen. Private. Drummed out of service by sentence of General Court-martial, May 28, 1847. The "Church Encyclopedia," in Historical Record, Vol. VIII, page 942, contains this item: "John Allen, a non-Mormon, who was drummed out of service in the Mormon Battalion."

On Tyler's list the following names appear which are not on the Muster Roll: George Allen, Justice C. Earle, John Findlay, Israel Harrison, William Howell, — Rollins, L. Richards, James R. Scott, John Snyder, Elisha Smith, John Smith.

It will be noted that on the Muster Roll five names appear that are not on Tyler's list, namely: Bates, Beddome, Joseph Clark, Davis and Fauney.

The Recapitulation and Certificates were not filled out on the Roll of this Company furnished us.

SERVANTS TO OFFICERS

The following names of young men and boys, who served as servants to officers in the Mormon Battalion, were sent in to Daniel Tyler for publication in his History of the Battalion. NEW COMPANY A

When the Mormon Battalion was mustered out of service at Los Angeles, on the expiration of their term of service, July 16, 1847, the opportunity was given them to re-enlist for during the war. The Church Officers did not favor their continuing in service, but enough finally enrolled themselves to make up a company.

Daniel C. Davis, formerly Captain of Company E, became Captain of the new company, and the other officers, non-commissioned officers and privates were pretty well distributed among the old companies. The Muster Out Roll shows that the company was all enrolled July 20, 1847, at Los Angeles, Cal., by Captain D. C. Davis, and that all were mustered into service on the same date and at the same place by A. J. Smith, First Lieutenant, First Dragoons.

The Roll also shows that all were mustered out with the company March 14, 1848, at San Diego, Cal., except Lieutenant Robert Clift, detached, and two deaths. The Muster Roll concludes with the following ending: "This company was mustered into service, pursuant to authority of Colonel Mason, on the 20th day of July, 1847, for one year, they reserving a right to claim a discharge on the first of March, 1848, and the transportation allowance for Volunteers to be allowed them either to the Bay of San Francisco, or the Great Salt Lake, into which the Great Bear River empties. In the month of November, 1847, they were advised that, if they were discharged before the expiration of one year, they would not receive either bounty land or Government script. They claimed their discharge on the 1st of March, thereby agreeing to relinquish all claims to land or script, and have received their transportation allowance of 50 cents for every twenty miles travel home(to the Great Salt Lake)."

The Spirit Lake Massacre

And Relief Expedition

THE SPIRIT LAKE MASSACRE

In the early days—while Iowa was still a Territory—there was more or less trouble between the white settlers and the Indians, who were naturally jealous of the encroachments being made upon their ancient hunting grounds. Finally, the Indians determined to make one last desperate effort to drive back the invaders, and that notable struggle—the Black Hawk War—ensued, resulting in the defeat of the Indians. That was prior to the admission of Iowa into the Union as a State, and the history of the part taken by Iowa men in that war is not germane to the work in hand, which is intended to cover only the operations of Iowa troops participating, directly or indirectly, in the wars which have occurred since Iowa became a State. The last notable struggle, prior to the War of the Rebellion, in which Iowa soldiers were engaged in protecting the settlers on the northern frontier of the State against the incursions of the savages, is described in Mr. Reid's early history of the State. "The Spirit Lake Massacre and Relief Expedition" is herewith reproduced in its entirety, together with the rosters of the soldiers engaged. The subsequent conflicts with the same hostile tribes, which occurred after the breaking out of the War of the Rebellion, are described in this work, in connection with the history of the Iowa troops engaged in service on the northern frontier.

No other events in Iowa, since civilization began history within its limits, have combined so much of human agony, of death in its cruellest, most harrowing forms, and also of human bravery, fortitude, endurance and philanthropic sacrifice, as were displayed in what has come to be known as the Spirit Lake Massacre, and in the relief expedition which set out to aid or rescue the endangered settlers. Largely through the efforts of the late Charles Aldrich, Curator of the Historical Department of Iowa, and a member of the Soldiers' Roster Board as first organized, the story of that diabolical massacre, and of the trials and labors of the relief expedition, has been as thoroughly told, in its various phases, as perhaps any other prominent event of Iowa history.

The only narrative placed upon record, by an eye witness of the dastardly tragedy at the lakes,¹ is the History of the Spirit Lake Massacre and Captivity of Miss Abbie Gardner, written, in 1885, by Mrs. Abbie Gardner-Sharp, ¹The name "Spirit Lake Massacre" is really a misnomer, since the victims all lived, in fact, upon the shores of East and West Okoboji Lakes, except William Marble, a victim, and his wife, a captive, who lived adjacent to Spirit Lake. The entire cluster of lakes, however, was generally known as the Spirit Lake region.

and revised, with additions by her, in 1902. In 1887, at the initiative and, to a great degree, through the efforts of Charles Aldrich, the Board of Supervisors of Hamilton County ordered placed in the Court House of that county a brass tablet, to commemorate the heroic endurance of Company C, of the Spirit Lake Relief Expedition. At the unveiling of that tablet, papers and addresses were given by seven participants in the expedition, telling their recollections of the direful march and its attendant circumstances. These personal histories (revised by their authors) and other reminiscences are printed in the Annals of Iowa, Third Series. A paper by Sergeant Harris Hoover, another participant, is printed in Volume IV of the Annals of Iowa, Third Series, reproduced from a publication in the Hamilton County Freeman, Mr. Aldrich's paper, soon after the event.

A History of Dickinson County, Iowa, published in 1902, was written by Hon. Roderick A. Smith, who was a member of the relief expedition, and who gives a very full and graphic account of the events leading up to the murders and subsequent developments. Hon. B. F. Gue, in Volume I of his History of Iowa, presents a well written and fully detailed account of the whole affair, derived mainly from the documents secured by Mr. Aldrich, as before stated. An address by Hon. Charles E. Frandreau of Minnesota, at the dedication of the monument erected under auspices of the State of Iowa, at Lake Okoboji, presents many first-hand facts regarding the connection of that gentleman and other Minnesota and United States officials with the rescue of the unfortunate captives held by the Indians.

The State of South Dakota in 1904 published, for their Department of History, Doane Robinson's History of the Dakota or Sioux Indians, in which he gives an account of the massacre and rescue of the captives. Besides the sources already cited, he had the advantage of personal interviews with an Indian and a half-breed having some knowledge of the affair.

The present writer, while recognizing the obligation imposed by the Act of the General Assembly of Iowa authorizing the publication of the present Roster Series, which requires that the story of the Spirit Lake Massacre be included in the military history of the State, feels much diffidence in presenting a new version of what has been so well told by abler pens. This part of the work properly belonged to our lamented collaborer, Hon. Charles Aldrich, whose diligent zeal had collected so much of the valuable material which must go into it, and, no doubt, he would have undertaken it, as an officer of the Roster Board, had not his failing health and lamented death prevented his taking up the task. His collated material and his words will be used wherever practicable, in the hope that the space occupied by the Spirit Lake Massacre in the Roster Series will be recognized as another one of the bounteous contributions which have been made to the history of his adopted State, by the genius and industry of Charles Aldrich.

The Relief Expedition, in its character as a military organization of Iowa Volunteer soldiers, demands the fullest consideration in these pages, and in preparing its Roster we have, so far as has been possible to secure the data, given each man a paragraph containing enough of his personal history for positive identification.

The Dakota or Sioux² Indians became known from the earliest explorations of the West as one of the most warlike and intractable tribes with which the whites had to deal. Their earliest known habitat was in the wooded country of northern Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan. During the early part of the Eighteenth Century, they grew tired of constant warfare with their inveterate enemies, the Algonquin, Chippeways and Iroquois, and were attracted by the easily secured supplies of animal food which the buffaloes of the prairies provided. So they gradually left the woods and spread themselves over the boundless plains of the northern prairie regions. When white settlements beyond the Great Lakes began, the Sioux, divided into seven great tribes, appear to have possessed the valley of the Chippewa River, in Wisconsin, the southern part of Minnesota, from a line running not far north of St. Anthony's Falls, North Dakota, to a line bending northward to Devil's Lake, thence to the Big Horn Mountains as a western boundary, with the North Platte River as a southern boundary to its junction with the South Platte, where the line bent directly north to the Niobrara River, followed that stream to its mouth, and then a direct line through northern Iowa to the Mississippi.

The entire state of South Dakota is included within these limits, a large tract in northeastern Wyoming, and one nearly as large in northwestern Nebraska.³ The line through Iowa (or that portion of it from the Mississippi to the Des Moines River) was recognized by the treaty of 1825, which established a boundary between the Sioux on the north and the Sacs and Foxes on the south, and became, by the later treaty of 1830, the center of the Neutral Ground tract, afterwards occupied by the Winnebagoes.

By a treaty, concluded July 15, 1830, with the Yankton and Santee bands of Sioux, the Omahas, Otoes, Missouris, and Sacs and Foxes, all of western Iowa included in the Missouri slope was ceded to the United States, and the Indians removed therefrom as a place of permanent residence. On the 23rd of July, 1851, another treaty was signed with the four bands of Sioux occupying that territory, by which they relinquished all their lands in Iowa and Minnesota east of the Big Sioux River and a line from Lake Kampeska to Lake Traverse and the Sioux Woods River. This included about half of the present state of Minnesota. The Sioux retained as a reservation a strip ten miles in width on both sides of the Minnesota River from its source to where Fort Ridgely was built.

The agency for the Wahpeton and Sisseton bands was established at the mouth of the Yellow Medicine River, and was generally known as the Upper Agency. Another agency, thirteen miles above Fort Ridgely, was known as the Lower Agency, and had charge of the Wahpekutah and M'dewakautons bands. These four bands are sometimes collectively called the Santees or Santee Sioux.

One prominent chief of the Wahpekutahs, named Wamdisappi, or Black Eagle, was not present when the treaty was signed and took no part in it. He and his followers were savages of such ferocity, and were so quarrelsome and revengeful, that they could not live in peace even with their own tribe. They had, therefore, left the main body and, after a sojourn on the east fork of the Des Moines, around the present site of Algona, had struck west across the Big Sioux and established themselves on the Vermillion River, in what is now South Dakota. From here they roamed over the country as far east as the Des Moines and even to the Cedar. About 1848 Black Eagle died, and was succeeded, as chief, by his son, Inkpadutah, or Scarlet Point, who was more treacherous, bloodthirsty and adroit than his father.

A party of these outlaw Indians under Sidominadotah—an older brother of Inkpadutah—made an attack, in 1848, on a surveying party working in the upper Des Moines country, under a Mr. Marsh, destroyed their instruments, robbed them of their supplies and compelled them to abandon the work. The report of Marsh to the government, and complaints from settlers, brought an order to General N. G. Clarke, commanding the Western District, to establish a military post for the protection of the threatened region. Under this order Captain and Brevet Major Samuel Woods, with Company E, of the Sixth U. S. Infantry, marched from Fort Snelling and selected a site on the Des Moines River at the mouth of Lizard Creek, for a fort, which eventually received the name of Fort Dodge. The post remained in command of Major Woods as long as it was occupied. He will be remembered as one of the Majors of the Fifteenth Infantry in the Mexican War, and thus a commander of Captain Guthrie's Iowa Company.

The First Lieutenant in Company E, while at Fort Dodge, was Lewis Addison Armistead, a Virginian, who had participated in Scott's campaign in Mexico, and afterwards attained fame as a Confederate brigadier in the Civil War, and was killed at the high-water mark of the Rebellion, in Pickett's charge, at Gettysburg. The Second Lieutenant was John L. Tubbs, a Tennessean, who had risen from the ranks of the Twelfth Infantry in the Mexican War to a commission in the Sixth, but resigned May 6, 1851, while at Fort Dodge, and returned to civil life.⁴ Lieutenant Tubbs was succeeded by Second Lieutenant James Lawrence Corley, a South Carolina graduate of West Point, class of 1850. He became Adjutant of the Sixth Infantry in 1855, served as such until May, 1861, when he resigned to join the rebel army, in which he served as Colonel Quartermaster.⁵

Major Woods brought from Fort Snelling sixty-six enlisted men, and arrived at the site of his new post on the 2nd of August, 1850. His route took him through the southeastern part of Tama County, whither he had first gone to assist in removing the lingering remnants of the Sac and Fox tribes to their reservation in the Indian Territory.⁶ There, on the Iowa River, in Tama County, the command was joined by one who had been appointed their sutler, or post trader. This was "Major" William Williams, who had come to Muscatine during the previous year, from western Pennsylvania, where he had been engaged as a merchant, a salt manufacturer, and as cashier in a bank. He had also been an officer in the Pennsylvania State Militia, in which he had gained efficiency as a commander and a taste for military matters.

In April, 1853, the War Department ordered the military post at Fort Dodge to be abandoned, and a new fort to be established by Major Woods and his command on the St. Peters or Minnesota River, as a support to the Indian agencies located on the reservations provided for the Santee Sioux under the treaty of 1851. The site for the new post, which received the name of Fort Ridgely, was selected in connection with the Lower Agency, on the Minnesota River, near the mouth of the Little Rock. The military reservation and buildings on the Des Moines were thrown open to sale as government land, and a large part of them were purchased by Major Williams, who laid out on the reservation the town of Fort Dodge in the spring of 1854. During that year a few venturesome settlers made claims in the groves that bordered the streams of the region, and the summer of 1855 witnessed a strong influx of explorers and land seekers, new United States land offices having been opened at Fort Dodge and Sioux City. Fort Dodge grew into a flourishing frontier town, filled with the bold, hardy spirits that ever characterize the adventurous American pioneer.

These early settlers were not without apprehensions that the frequent visits of roving bands of Indians from beyond the Big Sioux and Missouri

⁴Lieutenant Tubbs became a Captain in Griffin's Battalion, Texas Volunteers, in the Civil War. (Heltman's Historical Register, U. S. A.)

boded no good. Petitions and letters were sent to Governor Grimes asking for protection. He had no authority to call out a military force, but he wrote to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and to the Indian Superintendent at St. Louis, asking that those Indians be kept out of the State, and that a military post be established for the protection of settlers. He wrote, under date of January 3, 1855, to the Iowa delegation in Congress, reciting the facts, and that his appeals to the authorities had borne no fruits, and asked their co-operation in securing the desired relief. Among other things, he said: "I have taken the responsibility to appoint Major William Williams, of Fort Dodge, a kind of executive agent, to act for me in protecting both the settlers and the Indians, and particularly to preserve the peace. I had no legal authority to make such appointment, but, as there was no government agent in that section of the country, and I was so remote from the scene of trouble and felt that there should be some one in the vicinity who would act prudently and who could act efficiently, I knew no better course than to appoint him, as I have indicated." The letter closes as follows: "I trust, gentlemen, you will stimulate the department at Washington to take immediate steps to remedy the evil complained of. We have just cause for complaint. The government has undertaken to protect our frontiers from the Indians, with the assurance that this stipulation would be fulfilled. That frontier is filled with peaceful citizens. But the Indians are suffered to come among them—destroying their property and jeopardizing their lives. I hope that no time will be lost in allaying the apprehensions that exist in some parts of the State on this subject."

No result came from these appeals and, on the approach of another winter, Governor Grimes wrote a letter on December 3, 1855, direct to Franklin Pierce, President of the United States, in which he recapitulated the complaints that had reached him the previous year, and his appeals to the National authorities for relief, and stated:

"I am reliably informed that the same Indians, but in increased numbers, have again pitched their tents within the State and are making preparations to remain during the winter. The Secretary of this State, General George W. McCleary, writes me that he has information that a large body of Sioux Indians have destroyed the settlements in Buena Vista County, and forced the inhabitants to abandon their homes. He also writes me that these Indians are manifestly making preparations for war, and have been and are now making great efforts to induce all of the Mississippi River Sioux to unite with them in hostilities upon the whites. I hear from various sources that several runners have been sent by the Sioux west of the Missouri River to those in this State, and in Minnesota, with war belts, urging the latter to make common cause with them. The result of all this is a great state of alarm along the whole frontier. The pioneer settlers are abandoning their homes and improvements, and are retiring to the more dense settlements in the interior of the State. Almost everybody anticipates a bloody Indian war, and petitions are reaching me every day, praying that an armed posse may be called out to expel the Indians by force.

"Although I do not agree with the greater part of the people in the northwestern counties that there is danger of open and premeditated hostilities during the winter, I should not be surprised if these Indians attacked the whites so soon as vegetation started in the spring, so as to enable them to forage their horses. But whether they intend hostilities or not, difficulties and perhaps war will be likely to result from their intrusion upon the settlers. The frontier men have no great love for the Indians—they are suffering loss by their pilfering—they dare not leave their families alone, and hence many of them are compelled to remove their families to points in the State where they can be protected. There are bad men enough to sell the Indians whisky, which converts them into devils and prepares them for any atrocity. They retard the settlement and improvement of that part of the State. All these consequences of their presence excite the settlers' minds, and render an attack upon the Indians but little less imminent than an attack by them, events in my view to be equally deplored. I beg leave to call your attention to the importance of having the Indians removed from this State at the earliest possible day. I believe that the public safety demands it. The people of the State conceive that they have a right to ask it. They have bought their homes of the government with the understanding that they were to be protected in the possession. They are virtually denied it so long as the Indians are permitted to harass them by their presence.

"A year ago the General Assembly of this State unanimously asked for the establishment of a military post on the Sioux River near the northwest corner of the State. I concur entirely in the propriety of that measure. I have no doubt that two companies of dragoons or cavalry stationed there would effectually prevent the incursions of the Indians, and give quiet to the whole of northwestern Iowa. Without such a post they may be removed, but it does not occur to me how they may be permanently kept out."⁸

What reply was made to this appeal, if any, does not appear, but it is certain that no action was taken by the national authorities, as desired. Hon. Charles Aldrich, in writing upon the subject, well says:

"Governor James W. Grimes wrote letters to our United States Senators and to the authorities at Washington some time before the outbreak of hostilities, asking that the general government take immediate steps for the protection of our exposed frontiers. Little or no attention was paid to his reiterated requests, and so, when the Indians resorted to hostilities, our Iowa border was wholly without protection. Had the earnest appeals of Governor Grimes been heeded, the Spirit Lake Massacre would not have occurred. What made this neglect appear more stupidly and wickedly cruel was the fact that in those days the catching of runaway negroes, under the infamous fugitive slave law, was rife in the land, and detachments of the Federal Army, or vessels of the United States Navy, could be secured to return a slave to his master."⁹

The apprehensions expressed in the letter of Governor Grimes to President Pierce, that attacks by settlers upon the Indians were not unlikely, had unfortunate realization in facts. One Henry Lott, an unscrupulous, criminal fellow, who had built a cabin at the mouth of the Boone River as early as 1846, and sold whiskey to the Indians, had offended one of the bands of Sioux by stealing their horses, and was driven out of his cabin by them, his horses and cattle taken, and a young son frozen to death in the removal. Lott returned, in 1853, to a new location on the east branch of the Des Moines River, in Humboldt County. In January, 1854, the Sioux chief of the outlaw band, Sidominadotah, with his family, camped on the river near Lott's place. Since this chief had been the leader of the band which had subjected Lott to indignities five years before, he determined now to have the most ample revenge. By stealth and treachery, equal to the worst savage manifestations, he and his son succeeded in killing the old chief, his mother, wife and several children. One little girl hid in the grass and escaped, and a little boy, terribly wounded and left for dead, recovered.¹⁰ Lott immediately burned his own cabin, and, with his stepson, loaded their portables into a wagon and made their way to the California trail, in which country he was not long afterwards hung by a vigilance committee for crimes committed there. The murdered chief was a brother of Inkpadutah, who discovered the unburied bodies of his relatives a few days after their dastardly slaughter, and there can be no doubt that the terrible occurrences at Spirit Lake, three years later, were but an exemplification of the savage idea of retribution—that it might be inflicted upon any of the offending race, without regard to whether the guilty ones were involved or not.

In the Dickinson County group of lakes, the more northern is Spirit Lake proper, known to the Indians as Minnewaukon or Spirit Water. It is nearly circular in shape, and covers about twelve miles in area. East Okoboji is separated from the foot of Spirit Lake by a narrow neck, overflowed in very high water, and extends southeasterly about six miles. Directly south, and connected by a narrow strait, lies West Okoboji—"the most beautiful lake in Iowa." It is of a curved or horseshoe shape, trending at first southwestward about five miles, then, in a graceful curve, an equal distance to the northward.

Settlements in the lake region began in the summer of 1856, the first arrival being Roland Gardner, in July. He was a native of Connecticut, born in 1815, who had settled in early manhood and married in Seneca County, New York, between the beautiful lakes, Seneca and Cayuga, and thus gained a passion for lake scenery. He had started, in 1853, for a removal to the western frontier; sojourned for a time in Ohio and Indiana, continued his journey in the fall of 1854, halted for a time on the Shell Rock River and at Clear Lake, but made a final move, in 1856, which brought him to the southeastern shore of West Okoboji Lake, where a log house was built for the accommodation of his family, and that of Harvey Luce, his son-in-law. With Mr. Gardner was his wife, daughters Eliza and Abigail, young girls of sixteen and thirteen years respectively, and a boy of six. Mr. and Mrs. Luce had two young children. Other settlers who arrived and made claims that summer were as follows: James H. Mattock, wife and five children, came from Delaware County, Iowa, and built a log cabin just south of the strait connecting the two Okobojis. Robert Matheison made his home with Mattock, his family remaining in Delaware County for the winter. A party from Red Wing, Minn., built on the north side of the strait. They were William and Carl Granger, brothers, Dr. Isaac H. Harriott and Bertell A. Snyder, and they all made claims in the vicinity. At the time of the massacre a young man named Joseph Harshman was stopping temporarily with them. There were no women with this party. On the east side of East Okoboji, Joseph M. Thatcher and Alvin Noble, from Hampton, Franklin County, Iowa, formerly from Indiana, built a cabin together. They each had a wife and one small child. Morris Markham, a former Hampton and Indiana neighbor, boarded with them. Joel Howe, father of Mrs. Noble, built on the same side of the lake, near the Thatcher and Noble home. He had a family consisting of his wife and six children (besides Mrs. Noble). William Marble and his young wife, from Linn County, came in September, and built a cabin in a grove on the west side of Spirit Lake.

Thus there were about forty people, men, women and children, who had prepared to spend the winter of 1856-7, within a radius of about seven miles on the shores of the most beautiful lakes in the West. There were no settlements to the west of them. Fort Dodge was eighty miles southeast. About the same distance, southwest, on the Little Sioux River, was a small settlement at Smithland in the southern part of Woodbury County, a smaller one at Correctionville, and a few scattered settlers along the south line of Clay County, near what are now Peterson, Linn Grove, Sioux Rapids and Gillett's Grove. The Clay County settlements were about forty miles south of Okoboji Lakes. Their nearest neighbors were six or seven families who located during the same summer eighteen miles north of the lakes, in Minnesota, at Springfield, now Jackson. This settlement was on the Des Moines River. Farther south, near that river, George Granger had a cabin just over the state line in Iowa. A few cabins were located at High Lake, in what is now the south part of Emmet County. In the same year, an Irish colony from Kane County, Illinois, settled on the Des Moines River, in Palo Alto County, near the present town of Emmetsburg. From there to Fort Dodge were scattered settlements on the river, two to five miles apart. Webster City, east of Fort Dodge, had become an important town and the county seat of Hamilton County.

The winter of 1856 and 1857 was one of the most severe in the history of the West. A heavy snow of about two feet in depth came early in December, which was followed by others in quick succession, all accompanied by high winds in the nature of blizzards. In February, an average of four feet of snow, with drifts interspersed of fifteen to twenty feet in height, lay on the ground. The sloughs and ravines were filled and concealed, so that communication between settlements was practically impossible. The poor settlers were illy prepared for such a winter. Their cabins were unfinished and generally without floors, since no lumber could be had at less than a hundred miles' hauling. No crops had been raised, and provisions were very scarce, being obtained in the winter only by trips on snow shoes, with hand sleds for the transportation.

Inkpadutah and his band of fifteen to twenty outlaw Indians, with their squaws and papooses, had spent the fall of 1856 at Black Loon Lake, in Jackson County, Minnesota, the county which adjoins Dickinson County, Iowa. Early in the winter they had proceeded down the Little Sioux River as far south as Smithland. Their presence there became disagreeable to the settlers, who complained that the Indians were killing off all the elk and other game. A quarrel ensued, in which a party of Indians were disarmed by the settlers and threatened into leaving the vicinity. They then followed up the Little Sioux along the line of settlements, committing depredations that grew more atrocious as they advanced. In Clay County they not only took arms and ammunition from the whites, and killed and drove off cattle, but also captured two young women near Peterson, kept them a day, and then allowed them to return. At Gillett's Grove, near the present town of Spencer, all of a large herd of cattle were killed and everything in the houses of the two Gillett brothers destroyed. A revelation, made by one of the Gillett's, thirty-five years after the occurrences, that he had shot an Indian for an insult offered his wife, and that the brothers immediately loaded their belongings and started for Fort Dodge, would seem to account for an acceleration of the embittered feelings of the lawless band of savages, and to have precipitated the fearful revenge they exacted upon the innocent and helpless.¹¹

¹¹R. A. Smith quotes Gillett's story from Galbraith's History of Clay County, told on a visit to the scene of his former home, and says: "It may be regarded as singular that Gillett should have kept the affair a secret for thirty-five years before giving it to the world, but that might be accounted for on the theory that he knew he would be blamed for not warning the other settlers of the danger he had precipitated by his somewhat rash act."—History of Dickinson County, pp. 58-60.

The raid up the Little Sioux valley occurred in February, 1857. After leaving Gillett's Grove, the Indians camped for several days at Lost Island Lake, near the present site of Ruthven, and, on the evening of the 7th of March, made their appearance in the settlements at the Okoboji Lakes, erecting their tepees directly on the trail between the Gardner and Mattock log cabins. The presence of Indians at the lakes was not unusual or unexpected, and their arrival excited no serious apprehensions on the part of the settlers.

Two or three weeks previous to this, Harvey Luce and J. M. Thatcher had taken an ox team and sled and started for the older settlements to the east, to procure a new supply of provisions. The trip was an arduous one, through the unbroken snow and tremendous drifts, and in the face of high winds and extreme cold, but they extended their journey to Hampton, Shell Rock, Cedar Falls and Waterloo. On their return, they were joined at Waterloo by Robert Clark, a young friend of Mr. Luce, and at Hampton by Enoch Ryan (a brother-in-law of Alvin Noble), Jonathan Howe, son of Joel Howe, and Asa Burtch, a relative of Mr. Thatcher. The overloaded oxen were so nearly exhausted when they reached Shippey's cabin, in Palo Alto County, on the Des Moines River, about ten miles below the present site of Emmetsburg, that it became necessary to stop there and recruit the animals. It was arranged that Thatcher and Burtch should remain with the team, while Luce and the other three young men pursued their way on foot, reaching their destination on the evening of the 6th of March. Howe and Ryan joined their relatives on the east side of the east lake, and Clark accompanied his friend Luce to the Gardner home.

On the morning of the 8th of March, Mr. Gardner rose early to prepare for a trip to Fort Dodge for needed supplies, which he had planned to make on Mr. Luce's return. Preparations were interrupted by the entire band of Indians, with their squaws and papooses, making a demand for breakfast. This was given from a scanty store, but, after eating, the savages became ugly and insolent, demanding ammunition and other things. Hostile demonstrations were interrupted by the arrival of Dr. Harriott and Mr. Snyder from the Granger cabin, and the Indians withdrew. Though still unwilling to believe that serious danger threatened, Mr. Gardner abandoned his trip and, when the Indians finally departed to their camp about noon, driving his cattle with them and shooting some of them, he sent Luce and Clark to warn the other settlers and advise that they all assemble at the Gardner house, the largest in the settlement, for mutual support and defense.

About three o'clock shots were heard from the direction of the Mattock's house, and, two hours later, just at sun down, nine savages were seen approaching Gardner's. Mrs. Gardner, believing them still amenable to kindness, prevailed on her husband not to begin hostilities. Mrs. Sharp says: "They entered the house and demanded more flour, and, as father turned to get them what remained of our scanty store, they shot him through the heart. He fell upon his right side and died without a struggle. When first the Indian raised his gun to fire, mother or Mrs. Luce seized the gun and drew it down, but the other Indians instantly turned upon them, seized them by their arms, and beat them over their heads with the butts of their guns; then dragged them out of doors and killed them in the most cruel and shocking manner. They next seized the children, tearing them from me one by one, while they reached their little arms to me, crying piteously for the protection that I was powerless to give. Heedless of their cries they dragged them out of doors and beat them to death with sticks of stove-wood."¹²

They ransacked the house, broke open trunks, took some clothes and destroyed what they could not use, and then went back to camp, dragging Abigail, nearly crazed with horror, with them as a captive. At the Mattock house some resistance had been made, as Dr. Harriott and Mr. Snyder (who had come across the strait to assist their neighbor) and Mr. Mattock were killed with their rifles in their hands. At least one Indian was badly wounded by a shot from Dr. Harriott's gun. Eleven dead bodies were found here. Besides those named, Mrs. Mattock and five children, Robert Matheison and Joseph Harshman were involved in the slaughter. At the Granger cabin, Carl Granger was shot and then his head was split open with a broad axe. (William Granger was absent on a visit to his family at Red Wing.) Luce and Clark were overtaken and shot on the south shore of East Okoboji, on their way to warn the Howe settlement. Thus twenty victims of savage hate marked the sacrifices of the first day's fiendish work.

At night the Sioux warriors celebrated the butchery by the hideous revelry of a war dance with blackened faces over the blood-stained snow, as they circled round and round among the mutilated bodies of their victims. In the morning, a part of the force went around East Okoboji to the Howe and Thatcher cabins four miles distant. Mr. Howe was met on his way to Gardner's to borrow some flour. He was shot and his head severed from his body and carried some distance. At his house, Mrs. Howe, her son Jonathan, just arrived from Hampton, her grown daughter Sardis, and three younger children, were murdered before they suspected danger, and then the savage fiends hurried on to the Thatcher cabin. There they found Mr. Noble, his wife and one child, Mrs. Thatcher and her babe, and Mr. Ryan, one of the Hampton visitors. The men, entirely ignorant of the terrible events in progress, received them with the usual frontier hospitality, and were thus decoyed out of the cabin and shot simultaneously. The babies were snatched from their mothers' arms, and killed by swinging their heads against an oak tree near the house.¹³ The two young women were dragged away by the cruel monsters, as captives, and with a refinement of cruelty were taken first to the house of Mr. Howe, where Mrs. Noble saw the dead body of her mother under the bed, where the poor woman had crawled after her head had been beaten to a pulp with a flatiron. Her brother Jacob, thirteen years old, suffering, but conscious, sat in the yard. The Indians were busy slaughtering the cattle and hogs, and Mrs. Noble tried to get him into the house with a hope of hiding him, but an Indian discovered the effort and finished the dastardly work of murder before her eyes.

The three captives were brought together at the Indian camp, which was removed the next day over the ice of West Okoboji, to a grove three miles beyond. Another move, on the 11th, took the Indians to a grove on Spirit Lake beyond William Marble's cabin, which they did not discover until the 13th. Then a party of the savages called upon Marble with ostensible friendly intent, traded rifles with him, induced him to contest shooting at a mark, and, when his rifle was empty, shot him to death. Mrs. Marble attempted to flee, but was overtaken and forced to return to their camp, as the fourth of the band of captive women. At night another war dance ¹³This is as told by Mrs. Sharp (page 77 of her book), evidently derived from the two women. It must be, however, that the infants were carried with or by their mothers, dead or alive, a mile to the Howe cabin, since the bodies of both were found there by the burial party, and the bodies of the two men only at the Thatcher house.—See Smith's History of Dickinson County, p. 87, and Lieutenant J. N. Maxwell's Address, Annals of Iowa, Third Series, Vol. III, p. 528.

celebrated the day's bloody work, and, before leaving Marble's grove, they peeled the bark from a white ash tree and marked upon the exposed surface rude pictures representing six cabins, the larger one in flames, and ten or a dozen human figures, some whites and some Indians. The hieroglyphics would probably tell some part of the fell story to other savages, but had little meaning to civilized eyes.¹⁴ From Marble's Grove the marauders moved northwesterly, camping in groves on the small lakes of the region, never two nights in a place, until, on the twenty-fourth or twenty-fifth of March, they made a halt on Heron Lake, fifteen miles northwest of the little settlement of Springfield, Minn.

The massacre at the lakes was discovered before the Indians had left the scene of their crime. A yoke of oxen, belonging to Morris Markham, a trapper who was boarding with Mr. Thatcher, strayed away early in the winter. Mr. Luce on his return brought tidings of them, which induced Markham to depart at once and secure them. Leaving them in good care, he started back to the lakes on the 9th of March, the day of the tragedy in his home at Thatcher's. Walking all day he lost his way at night, but about eleven o'clock succeeded in reaching Mr. Gardner's cabin. That seemed to be abandoned and everything in confusion. He did not find the bodies, but felt sure that Indians had been making trouble. He started down through the grove to the Mattock place, in the darkness of a cloudy night, was startled by dogs barking in an unaccustomed place, and found himself so near the Indian camp that he could hear their voices in the tepees. Withdrawing without detection, he made his way across East Okoboji to Mr. Howe's cabin, where the dread story was told by the dead bodies on the snow, and it was confirmed by his visit to the Thatcher place, which followed. Cold and exhausted by his long tramp without food, he still dared not risk spending the night in the house, but repaired to a deep ravine and, with frozen feet, awaited the dawn. Daylight confirmed the night's revelation, and without further investigation, he dragged his weary feet to the cabin of George Granger, on the Des Moines River. Some trappers were met there, who carried the news to Fort Dodge. Their frightened tales were so incoherent, however, and at second hand, that they were not believed and little attention paid to them. Markham kept on his journey to Springfield, and roused the people of that little settlement to a keen sense of their own peril. One of the persons there was Miss Eliza Gardner, who had come in October to visit the family of Dr. Strong, and the early snow and frequent storms had made travel so impracticable that she had stayed all winter.

Just a week later the condition at the lakes was discovered by another party, and the dread news carried to the southern settlements. In November, 1856, three brothers-in-law from Newton, Jasper County, Iowa, Orlando C. Howe, B. F. Parmenter and R. U. Wheelock, the two first named being lawyers, made a trip to the Spirit Lake region, with a view of securing a location for a town site and county seat of one of the new counties in that part of the State which had been named but were still unorganized. They were charmed with the romantic scenery and other advantages of the lakes, and spent some time hunting and fishing and making the acquaintance of the few settlers then building their homes there. They resolved to make that the locality of their proposed venture and to return very early in the spring for a permanent settlement.

Accordingly, about the first of March, they loaded a wagon (drawn by oxen) with spring and summer supplies and started for their contemplated metropolis. The deep snow and drifts and the absence of roads or bridges made their progress slow. They crossed the Des Moines at Fort Dodge and went up on the west side of that river, thus missing the direful message of the trappers who came down on the east side. On the night of March 15th, they camped about ten miles from the lakes, but their progress the next day was impeded by a storm, and they finally left their wagon in a slough east of Gar Lake, when night came on, and sought the settlements on foot. They reached Thatcher's about midnight, found all confusion, but saw no dead bodies, and camped for the balance of the night at Howe's place, but did not discover the actual state of facts until daylight revealed that a bloody massacre had wiped out the entire settlement. They started immediately for Fort Dodge, without attempting to take their wagon with them, and arrived there on the evening of the 21st of March. They were well known in Fort Dodge. Their story confirmed what had been regarded as a wild rumor, and, on the next day, which was Sunday, a meeting was called in the brick school house and attended by a throng of eager spirits who were ready to brave any danger and exposure to rescue and avenge their imperiled fellow pioneers. Messengers were sent at the same time to Webster City, Homer and Border Plains, and aroused there the same interest and determination, and it found vent in a public meeting Sunday evening at Webster City.

At the Fort Dodge meeting Major Williams presided and read his commission from Governor Grimes, authorizing him in cases of emergency to take measures to protect the frontier. He therefore called for volunteers to form military companies that could proceed at once to the scene of peril. About seventy men enrolled within a few minutes, and were divided into two companies. One, called Company A, chose as Captain Charles B. Richards, a lawyer of the village, who had acted as secretary of the meeting; the other, or Company B, elected as Captain John F. Duncombe, another young lawyer. The Lieutenant of Richards' company was Frank A. Stratton, who rose in the Civil War from Captain to Colonel of the Eleventh Pennsylvania Cavalry. Major William Williams, although past sixty years of age, insisted upon sharing the hardships of the trip, and took command of the detachment. George B. Sherman of Fort Dodge was detailed as Quartermaster and Commissary, and Monday, the 23rd of March, was spent in providing the necessary transportation, stores and commissariat. R. A. Smith, who was one of the volunteers, says:¹⁵

"The expedition was without tents and was but partially supplied with blankets, the men being limited to one apiece. The means of transportation were very imperfect. There was no grain in the country above Fort Dodge, and it was impossible to take any along, as it was necessary to take provisions for the round trip. The snow was nearly four feet on the level, and all of the ravines and low places were completely filled, and, when the snow commenced melting, it was one continuous reach of water and slush. The enlisted men were no tenderfeet. They comprehended, to its fullest extent, the perils and privations they would necessarily have to overcome before completing the task they had undertaken, and, while they went at the work of preparation with that careless gaiety and nonchalance which usually characterized the representative frontiersman, they well knew that it was more than probable that some of their number would be left on that wild and desolate prairie, their flesh to be torn and devoured by the beasts and birds of prey, and their bones to bleach in sun and storm until they turned again to dust. Looking back and recalling the events of that memorable expedition the only wonder is that the number of victims was not materially larger."

Late in the evening of that day, a company of about thirty men came in from Webster City to join the detachment, having marched twenty miles since noon. This was the outcome of a meeting in that little town Sunday evening. Many more were willing to enlist, but it was concluded to select young men only. It became known as Company C, and chose as Captain John C. Johnson. He lived on a claim at Bach Grove, but happened to be in town when the meeting was in progress, caught the spirit of the hour, volunteered and sent back word to his mother, who never saw him again. They were provided with two yoke of oxen and a wagon loaded with such provisions and extra clothing as could be gathered in the short time allowed. The expedition was armed with every kind of gun, from double-barreled shotguns to the finest rifles, and moved out of Fort Dodge about noon of the 24th of March. At McKnight's Point, in Humboldt County, on the third day out, they found William L. Church, an Ohio veteran of the Mexican War, who was returning from Webster City to his family at Springfield, Minn., but had heard of the expedition, awaited their arrival and enrolled as a member of Company C. Jeremiah Evans, at the same place, joined Company B. Near the Irish colony they met Cyrus C. Carpenter and Angus McBane, who were returning from a business trip to Algona, and those gentlemen promptly resolved to share the perils of their neighbors and joined Company A. Andrew Hood and William P. Pollock, settlers there, also enrolled in Company A.

We have seen that Inkpadutah's band had made a halt at Heron Lake, eighteen miles northeast of the Springfield settlement, and that Morris Markham had gone to the same settlement with news of the tragedy at the lakes. On the 26th of March the savages painted themselves in their most hideous war paint, and let their captives know, by signs and jargon, that they intended to continue their work of murder and rapine in Springfield. Leaving the white women in charge of one warrior and the squaws, they departed on their bloody mission, in which it is supposed that they had the aid of a band of Agency Sioux, which was also encamped in the neighborhood. Charles Aldrich has well told the story of the scenes which ensued, in his tribute to the heroine of the day, Mrs. Louisa J. Church, delivered at the unveiling of the Memorial Tablet in Webster City, in August, 1887, which we give in full, as published in Annals of Iowa, Third Series, Vol. III, pp. 546 to 549:

"We have placed conspicuously upon this beautiful Memorial Tablet the names of Mrs. William L. Church and her sister, Miss Drusilla Swanger, with a high tribute to those heroines.¹⁶ Why we have done this I will briefly explain. Not many months before the massacre, the Churches had settled at Springfield (now Jackson), Minn., some fifteen miles from Spirit Lake, and about eight miles north of the Iowa line. They resided there when Inkpadutah's band so terribly raided the little settlement at Spirit and Okoboji Lakes. At that time, in the absence of Mr. Church in Hamilton County, his wife was living in their log house with her two little boys and her sister.

¹⁶Mr. Aldrich, in a preliminary note, says: "The facts given herein were derived from conversations with Mrs. William L. Church, shortly before the family removed to the State of Washington."

"When the news came to this settlement of four or five families, of the murders at Spirit Lake, the people assembled at the home of J. B. Thomas, one of the settlers, and prepared to defend themselves. This was what is called a double log house—quite a large building for that locality at that day—and standing in the margin of the oak grove, not far from the west branch of the Des Moines River. There were in the party Mr. Thomas, his wife and five children; Mrs. Church and two children; Miss Eliza Gardner, Jareb Palmer, David Carver and John Bradshaw.¹⁷ John Bradshaw had first settled about a mile and a half northwest of where I now stand. (Hamilton County Court House, Webster City.) His house stood there vacant sometime after I came here, in 1857. Old settlers will all remember the 'Bradshaw House.' But he had removed to the Spirit Lake country.

"Just after they had assembled, two young men (Charles Tretts and Henry Chiffen) volunteered to go on foot to Fort Ridgely, seventy-five miles away, and appeal to the commandant for aid. Those who were left were well armed, reasonably provisioned, stout of heart, and determined to make the best defense in their power if they should be assailed. A week had nearly passed when little Willie Thomas, aged nine, came running in, exclaiming that the boys were coming, who had gone for the soldiers. This was good news and the people rushed to the door forming a little group outside. True enough, two men were seen coming dressed like whites, but they were Indians, dressed in the clothing of men killed at Spirit Lake. Just then the main party of the Indians, who were approaching from another direction, fired a volley from a dozen pieces into the group of men, women and children near the door. Willie Thomas was shot through the head and fell to the ground; Miss Swanger was shot through the shoulder, receiving a severe flesh wound; Thomas was shot through the left arm (wrist), which was broken and bled profusely; Carver was shot through the body¹⁸ and, for a time, suffered the severest pain. All except the wounded boy rushed into the house, and speedily barricaded the doors and windows. In fact, the poor boy would seem to have been forgotten for the instant. But it mattered little in the result. The firing on both sides now became hot and frequent, and continued so for two or three hours. Port-holes were made on the four sides of the house by removing the chinking from between the logs. Through these the besieged could plainly see the Indians without exposing themselves. Whenever an Indian showed himself he was fired upon, and so they were held at bay. Several times, however, the red devils made a rush towards the house, which they wished to set on fire, but each time discretion proved the better part of valor and they fell back.

"During this time the condition of things in this remote little fortress can scarcely be imagined or described. Miss Swanger and Mr. Thomas were bleeding profusely from their wounds, while the little wounded boy lay shrieking and groaning outside. The little fellow lived about two hours, when death mercifully ended his suffering. At one time the poor mother feared her husband would bleed to death in spite of everything she could do, while the shrieks and groans of the dying boy, just outside the door, could be distinctly heard. Miss Swanger at first bled very freely, but Mrs. Church stuffed her handkerchief under her sister's dress and so stopped the flow of blood, while Mrs. Thomas bound up her husband's arm and stopped the bleeding, which otherwise would have ended his life. Mrs. Church and ¹⁷Mrs. Sharp in her book (pp. 96, 104 and 113) states that Morris Markham, who had escaped from Spirit Lake, was also in the Thomas house.

¹⁸"Through the inside of the left arm, the ball entering his side, from which it was never extracted."—Mrs. Sharp's Narrative.

Miss Gardner loaded the guns and kept watch at some of the port-holes. At one time it was thought their bullets would be exhausted, and Misses Swanger and Gardner cast some from an old spoon.

"The fight went on until the dusk of evening. It then happened that Mrs. Church and Miss Gardner were in one of the rooms watching, while the men were in the other. They now saw an Indian dodge behind a large oak tree. While there he kept peering out toward the house. No man was handy to 'draw a bead' upon him, and Mrs. Church picked up a shotgun heavily charged with buckshot and, encouraged by Miss Gardner, leveled it in that direction. Presently the Indian stuck out his head again farther than before. Mrs. Church says: 'I plainly saw a large, dark object by the side of the tree which I knew to be the head of an Indian, and at this I discharged the gun. I was terribly excited and fell back, and cannot tell you whether I hit him or not. I certainly wanted to kill him.' Miss Gardner, who was watching the Indian, averred that she plainly saw him fall. In the account written at my instance for the Hamilton Freeman, by Jareb Palmer, who was one of the besieged, he stated it as a fact that Mrs. Church killed the Indian.

"A year or more later the body of an Indian was found upon a rude platform in a tree top, tree burial being the custom of the tribe. The body had been wrapped in a buffalo robe, and some white woman's feather pillow was under his head. What was left of this dusky brave was tumbled down upon the ground by the men of Captain H. B. Martin's command from our county. The skull was brought to me, and I sent it to the Phrenological Collection of Fowler and Wells, New York City. I saw it there, some time later, with a notice which had appeared in the Freeman pasted across the forehead. Upon the return of some of the men to the locality, a few months later, the tree was examined and part of the charge of buckshot was still imbedded in it near the spot where Mrs. Church had aimed, and the other part had plainly passed on. It would thus seem to be settled, as nearly as any such event can be proved, that she killed one of the assailants. Immediately after this event the Indians ceased firing, and left the place.

"One of the settlers, Joshua Stewart, had been stopping with his wife and three children at the Thomas house—'Fort Thomas' it really deserves to be called henceforth—but the poor wife and mother became insane through her fear of the Indians, and being in such a crowd of people added to her discomfort and mental trouble. Her husband finally concluded to return to their own house, a mile or two distant, believing the danger had passed away. But the same band which had infested the Thomas house came to Stewart's. They called him to the door, and shot him the instant he appeared. The fiends then murdered the insane mother and her two little girls. The boy, Johnny, who was about eight years old, managed to hide behind a log. The Indians plundered the cabin and soon left. The boy then fled to the double log-house where he was recognized and taken in at one of the windows.

"The home of the Churches was also pillaged and everything movable carried away or destroyed. The other houses in the settlement shared the same fate. A span of horses was in the barn at the Thomas place, but the Indians took them away when they left. When darkness came at last, the besieged determined to start south toward the nearest settlement, with an ox team and sled, which was the only means left them. The oxen were yoked and hitched to the sled upon which were placed the wounded and the little children and such provisions and clothing as could be carried. The forlorn little party, with this poor means of locomotion, probably started near the middle of the night, traveling very slowly, as the ground was covered with snow. Mrs. Church or her sister each led or carried one of her little boys. The march was kept up until the oxen tired out, when there was a short rest. Progress was very slow and most wearisome for some two days. Finally, on the third day, they saw several men approaching from the south, whom they mistook for Indians. This was a trying time for the poor refugees. The men, who were rapidly advancing upon them, wore shawls, which made them look like Indians with blankets, and it was evident that they were well armed. Some of the women and children were wild with affright and gave utterance to shrieks and lamentations. Two of the men were helpless from wounds and another was not naturally an Indian fighter, though doubtless brave enough. John Bradshaw thought his time had come, but, far from flinching, he took their eight loaded guns and stacked them some rods in advance. He asked the other well men to stay with the women and children and wounded, and keep them from embarrassing him, and he would sell his life as dearly as possible. Thus the dauntless hero stood until he saw a signal from the advancing party and knew they were friends. When the latter came up his face was pale as ashes, but no one doubted that he would have fought while life lasted. We can well imagine that men can be brave when surrounded by other brave men, whatever the odds. But what a grand figure was that of our Hamilton County Bradshaw, going out alone to yield up his life, as he supposed, in so hopeless a fight with merciless savages. It seems to me that was a scene for a painter or sculptor, and that sometime it will be placed upon canvas, or in imperishable marble for the adornment of our magnificent Capitol. Where did you ever read of anything more grandly heroic?

"The terrible alarm was turned in an instant into an abandonment of equally wild rejoicing, for the comers were a detachment from the expedition under Major Williams, and Mr. Church was with them. Mrs. Church and her young sister had worn their dresses off to the knees in walking through the crusted snow, and their shoes were nearly gone. They were almost exhausted from the toilsome march, lack of food, exposure to the inclement weather, and the terrible anxiety of the previous week.

"The Churches returned to this (Hamilton) county, where they resided until the spring of the present year (1887), when they removed to Washington Territory, whither two of their children and Miss Swanger (now Mrs. W. J. Gillespie) had preceded them. Mr. Church was also a soldier in the Union army, as well as a veteran of the Mexican War. All who have known them will agree with me that the permanent record which our county has here made of their actions and sufferings, and the heroism of these matchless women in our pioneer days has been well deserved."

In addition to the victims named in Mr. Aldrich's address, the Indians killed the brothers, George and William Wood, who kept the store of the settlement, and had had such frequent dealings with the natives that they relied upon the friendship often evinced, and did not abandon their trading cabin. Mrs. Sharp, in her book,¹⁹ relates that another party of settlers assembled at the cabin of Mr. Wheeler (but neither Wheeler nor any of his family are mentioned as among the fugitives nor in any way). They were Mr. Henderson, who was lying helpless from having had both feet amputated as a result of their having been frozen; Mr. Smith, who had lost one foot from the same cause, the amputation in both cases being recent and unhealed; Mr. Smith's wife; J. B. Skinner and wife; Mrs. William Nelson and a young child; A. P. Shiegley and his little son. Dr. E. B. N. Strong, whose family, including Eliza Gardner, his guest, were at the Thomas house, visited his patients, Henderson and Smith, at the Wheeler house that morning, was detained by knowledge of the attack being made on "Fort Thomas" (as Mr. Aldrich has dubbed it), and finally, in a panic, fled alone from the scene and made his escape. The Indians made no attack upon the Wheeler cabin, except to fire one volley, some of the bullets of which passed through the door. After a night of apprehension and terror, Mrs. Smith in the morning ventured over to the Thomas cabin, to find it deserted and the body of Willie Thomas lying in the yard. Realizing now that they were alone in the settlement, and believing that the Indians hovered near, the inmates who could travel made a hasty exit on foot, hoping to reach those who could succor the helpless cripples they were obliged to leave behind. They overtook the other fleeing fugitives, and shared with them the rapture of meeting the brave men of Major Williams' command.²⁰

Returning to the story of the heroic trials and privations of that impromptu military force which was hurrying forward on its mission of help, we will give it first as told by William K. Laughlin, of Webster City, a member of Company C, in his narrative presented at the dedication of the memorial tablet, in Hamilton County Court House, August 12, 1887. This narration is chosen as presenting more details of the whole trip than any other:²¹

"By noon of Monday, March 24th, we were all on the move up the Des Moines, but our progress was very slow and we did not reach Dakota, in Humboldt County, until about sunset Tuesday. From Dakota our line of march was on the east side of the west fork of the Des Moines River. Here we were soon on a trackless prairie, with snow from two to three feet on a level, to five to ten in drifts and low depressions. Our best men were placed in front ranks to open the way, being relieved at intervals by others. Through the deepest drifts and ravines we had to attach cable ropes to the wagons, and the whole command join, if necessary, to pull them through. I well remember at one deep cut so many were at the ropes that a pair of oxen attached to one of the wagons was nearly suspended by their yoke swinging on the cable. The afternoon of that day was cloudy and a storm threatening, and we failed to reach McKnight's Point as expected, and had to camp on the prairie without fire or shelter, where we took our cold supper and snow beds without a complaint. Next day about noon we reached McKnight's Point. Here we found deserted houses, and Company C, soldier-like, took possession of one. We spent the rest of the day here and had warm meals. . . . From here to Shippey's next day we found better traveling.

"Sunday, the 29th, was a beautiful, clear day; snow melted until long stretches of bare ground could be found, and we made the longest march of any day since leaving Fort Dodge, reaching the Irish Colony, sixteen miles from Shippey's. Here all the settlers for many miles above and below

²⁰The South Tablet of the Spirit Lake and Okoboji Monument, among the names of "Persons who fled from the attack on Springfield, (Jackson) Minnesota, and were rescued by Relief Expedition," contains the names: "Mrs. Harshman and children, Mr. Harshman (son of preceding)". These people are not mentioned in any of the narratives available to the present writer. It is also singular that none of the published stories of the rescuing party name any more of the fugitives that were met than the seventeen who fled from the Thomas cabin, and Dr. Strong. The story of the Wheeler cabin people, in the text, rests upon Mrs. Sharp's narrative, which was given, she says (p. 113 note), on the authority of Mr. Palmer, Mr. Markham, Mrs. Gillespie, Mrs. Church, and her sister, Eliza.

on the river had collected for company during the long, tedious winter. They knew nothing of the massacre at Spirit Lake until after the news was received at Fort Dodge, although they were only about thirty-five miles away. They were living in little log cabins and dug-outs, and seemed very destitute. Most of them had only been there since the summer and fall before, and had raised nothing.

"The Monday following we moved up near Big Island Grove. Tuesday, Major Williams sent out scouting parties to reconnoiter among the many small lakes there, and discovered the first signs of the Indians where they had been cutting holes in the ice and taking out fish, but, judging from the decomposed state of the fish, it had been several days since they had been there. Late that afternoon we met that heroic band of refugees from Springfield, Minn., where they had made a gallant defense, driven the savages back and were fleeing from their homes, destitute, having left everything but the clothes they had on. Their only conveyance was a sled drawn by a pair of oxen, and they were nearly starved. Here we camped and did all we could to make them comfortable."

Here let us interrupt Mr. Laughlin, and let Lieutenant Frank R. Mason (Company C) tell the experiences of that scouting and of their meeting the refugees:²²

"The morning after arriving at the Irish Colony, Major Williams selected ten of the strongest men from the company to scout the country, north, northeast and northwest, for Indians and Indian signs. Our stock of provisions consisted of about forty pounds of coarse corn meal and twenty pounds of flour. I was one of the ten men selected. Lieutenant [J. N.] Maxwell, [W. L.] Church, [J. M.] Thatcher and [A. N.] Hathaway were also of the company. I do not recollect the names of the other five. [C. C. Carpenter, in his address at the same occasion, names as others William Defore, of Boone County, Albert H. Johnson, of Webster County, William K. Laughlin, and himself. R. A. Smith, in History of Dickinson County, p. 82, gives incidents showing that he was one of them. This makes up the list of ten.] Major Williams ordered corn bread prepared for us. Each man was allotted a piece about the size of a common skimmer and not much thicker. This was to be his ration for three days. Being very hungry, when my portion was given me, I resolved that the easiest and most convenient way of carrying it would be to eat it, which I did with a relish. We took our departure from the command about six o'clock in the morning, and a beautiful morning it was.

"The snow at that time was more than two feet deep. We took a northeasterly direction, and traveled about twelve miles that forenoon, when we reached a hill, and Lieutenant Maxwell ordered us to halt. We scraped the snow from the hilltop, and there the boys dined. Lieutenant Maxwell, with his usual tact, suggested that I act as sentry, while the others ate; accordingly I stationed myself a few rods from the men. Looking directly north I discerned an object in the distance which at that time appeared a mere black spot on the horizon. After observing it closely for several minutes I became satisfied that it was a moving object, and called Maxwell's attention to it. We put our ramrods in line with it and sighted. We soon concluded that it must be a band of Indians. A consultation was held immediately, and it was decided that we should meet them as quickly as possible.

"The band of Indians (as we then supposed the object to be) must have been about two miles away. About half way between us and them there was a small creek bordered with willows, which we wished to reach before they did, as we did not want to give them the advantage of ambush. Therefore it was a race, long legs coming into active service. Church and Hathaway, being short and somewhat stocky, did more rolling than walking. We succeeded in passing the bushes, and, as we ascended a knoll, we beheld what appeared to be redskins. After a hasty examination of our arms and ammunition, we made ready for a fight. Presently the band opposite halted and prepared to defend themselves. We remained in this position a few moments awaiting Lieutenant Maxwell's order to fire. Every man was eager for the fray, some of the boys expressing their surprise that our worthy commander did not give the order at once. We were ordered to advance until within twenty rods of the party and then halt.

"Suddenly Mr. Church (whose station was next to me) sprang forward and exclaimed, 'My God, there's my wife and babies!' We then discovered our mistake. The supposed redskins were white refugees. Such a heart-rending scene as was then presented I never witnessed. The relatives and friends of those refugees had supposed they were dead, and the unexpected meeting was one never to be forgotten. It was at this time that Mr. Thatcher was told of the probable fate of his wife and child. A number of the party were wounded and in terrible condition. Mr. Thomas was traveling with his hand dangling by the cords of his arm, having been shot through the wrist. It now began to rain.

"Lieutenant Maxwell ordered me to return to the main body as quickly as I could, and inform Major Williams of our discovery.²³ I ran every step of the way, about eight miles, and was seen by the company when two miles from them. Captains Duncombe and Richards came to meet me. Major Williams soon came up and I told him my story; a brief consultation followed, and the Major ordered me to return to the refugees, in company with Captains Duncombe and Richards and the Surgeon. [Dr. G. R. Bissell.] It was now about four o'clock. We made a quick march, arriving at the camp about nine P. M. The remainder of the company came up at twelve o'clock. When we reached camp it was storming furiously, and the scene that greeted us was terrible to behold. Men, women and children, some wounded, and all in a starving condition, with no fire, no covering except wet blankets, and, worse than all, no food. We were a sad company. Every man was as silent as the grave. Many of us were then feeling the effects of exposure and hunger."

Mr. Laughlin's narrative continues:

"The fight at Springfield was on the Thursday previous, and Major Williams was sure we could overtake the Indians, so the next day we went on to Granger's, and there learned that the U. S. Regulars, from Fort Ridgely, had given them a short chase and let them get away. Here our supplies were almost gone, and all streams were at their highest stage, so Major Williams decided it was useless to go farther. He called for a voluntary detail to go over to Okoboji settlement to bury the dead, as the U. S. troops had failed to do this. Our detail comprised twenty-three men, under Captain Johnson and Lieutenant Maxwell. Captain Richards started with ²³R. A. Smith says: "It was decided by the scouts and refugees to go into camp in the nearest grove, and send back messengers to the main body to hurry up supplies and to inform the surgeon that his services would probably be needed. The messengers detailed for this service were Frank Mason, of Company C, and the writer." History of Dickinson County, p. 82.

us, but his horse could not get over the river. [R. A. Smith gives the names of this detail as follows:²⁴ Captain John C. Johnson, Lieutenant John N. Maxwell. Privates—Henry Carse, William E. Burkholder, William Ford, H. E. Dalley, O. C. Howe, George P. Smith, O. S. Spencer, C. Stebbins, Silas Vancleave, R. U. Wheelock, R. A. Smith, William A. Defore, and B. F. Parmenter, of Company A; Jesse Addington, Robert McCormick, J. M. Thatcher, William R. Wilson, Jonas Murray, and A. Burtch, of Company B; William K. Laughlin, and E. D. Kellogg, of Company C.]

"The rest were to go back as far as the Irish Colony and wait until we returned. We separated from the main column, with rations for two days, on the morning of April 2nd, and reached Mr. Thatcher's house on East Okoboji about 2 P. M. We found the door shut and only cook stoves and bedsteads inside, feathers were strewn all over the prairie, that had been emptied from beds as a useless luxury; behind the house we found the dead bodies of Noble and Ryan, full of bullet holes; we buried them by a large oak tree near the house. Some of our men went to the Howe house, and there found seven dead bodies in a promiscuous heap inside. Among them was Mrs. Thatcher's little babe. Mr. Thatcher was with us; he was away after provisions at the time of the massacre, and had joined us, to find his home destroyed, his young wife missing and, if not dead, probably sharing a worse fate than death, and nothing left but the mangled remains of that baby. We spent the night at the Thatcher house. Next morning we found another dead body (a boy twelve or thirteen years old) at Howe's, near a fallen tree not far from the house, with an ax by his side. He had evidently been cutting wood and was killed at the same time as those in the house, none of them suspecting their danger. The oldest son had a horrible cut diagonally across the face from the corner of the mouth on one side to the temple on the other. Here we buried nine.²⁵

"We then went to Mattock's, across the lake; found the dead scattered all around in the woods and on the lake shore, and the house burned. Here was evidence of a desperate struggle. Dr. Harriott lay behind a large tree, grasping his broken rifle; Mrs. Mattock and her little daughter lay near each other by the lake. The little girl's brains had been dashed out and lay in the snow beside the body, a most sickening and heartrending sight. We collected and buried eleven bodies in one grave. Carl Granger's body we found near his house and, close by, his faithful dog; he was horribly cut about his head and face; we buried him where we found him.

"Finally we reached Gardner's and found six, some outside and some inside, and we buried them all together. By this time it was late in the afternoon; we had finished our sad task; our rations were about gone. Mr. Wilson, of our detachment, who had been at Mr. Gardner's during the winter, knew they had some potatoes buried under the cook stove (the only floor their cabins had was the ground); the stove was in its place unharmed, and we found about a bushel of potatoes, and had them for supper and breakfast, thus helping out our slender rations.

"In the ashes where the Mattock's house was burned were some charred bones, but we could not possibly identify them as human bones, and I did ²⁴History of Dickinson County, p. 84.

²⁵R. A. Smith points out (History of Dickinson County, p. 87) the discrepancy shown here and in other writings on the number of the slain. Nine skeletons were exhumed and reburied from the Howe place when the Monument was built, but the names on the monument account for only seven, as Mr. Laughlin first stated. The headless body of the elder Howe was found on the lake shore and buried there or at the Mattock place, and the Thatcher babe was returned to its father's place. Mr. Smith solves the problem by stating that there were five younger children of Mr. Howe, but the compilers of the monument inscription evidently found the names of only three.

not think they were. From the history of the massacre I believe all persons known to have been there have been accounted for. We buried twenty-nine, and Robert Clark, Harvey Luce, and old Mr. Howe were found afterwards.* But the Indians made thorough work; not one was allowed to escape alive. It was a remarkable thing that none were scalped. The wretches must have been ashamed of their bloody work.

"Saturday morning, April 4th, we started for the Irish Colony, leaving Messrs. Howe and Wheelock, who had left a load of goods some distance out on the prairie at the time they made the discovery of the massacre, also Mr. Thatcher and Mr. Wilson, who had interests to look after in that vicinity."

R. A. Smith, in the History of Dickinson County (page 90), explains that the company were divided in opinion as to whether a start to return had better be made that morning, in the face of a storm that seemed to be threatening, and by a route straight across the prairie towards the Irish Colony, or whether they had not better rest another day and then return by the route over which they came, and were familiar with, and thus avoid the risk of finding their way over the bleak and trackless prairie. The question was settled by forming a line, and those in favor of starting at once and by the shortest route stepped out three paces. They numbered sixteen, leaving seven who remained until Monday morning, secured the provisions from Howe and Wheelock's wagon, were sheltered from the terrible storm which raged Saturday afternoon and Sunday, and then made their way back down the Des Moines River route without especial discomfort, except in crossing the flooded valley of Cylinder Creek. Besides the four named by Mr. Laughlin, the party included B. F. Parmenter, Asa Burtch and R. A. Smith.

Mr. Laughlin continues:

"Our course lay over a trackless prairie in a drizzling rain. Jonas Murray, of our party, had been at the lakes the year before and pretended to know the way, but he proved to be a poor guide. By this time the snow was nearly gone and every stream was a raging torrent, and ponds were overflowing. About noon we came to a large stream [Mud Creek in Lloyd Township], and had to follow up and down some time before finding a crossing. Two of our men—Robert McCormick and Owen Spencer—went far above and crossed and separated from us, but succeeded in getting through to the Colony in safety. . . . Late in the afternoon we came to some small lakes with some scattering trees on the opposite side. By this time the wind changed suddenly and began to grow colder. The lake was apparently between us and the course we ought to take, and we followed close around the shore. Off to the west lay a large marsh covered with tall grass. Those in advance passed between marsh and lake and succeeded in getting around, when we discovered that Captain Johnson, Burkholder, Addington, George Smith and Jonas Murray, five men in all, had dropped off in our rear and were going around the marsh. We expected they would return to us when they got around, but, as it was growing dark, and we could see them on high ground beyond, we thought best to try to go to them, as Major Williams' parting advice was, 'Stick together, boys'; but they soon passed out of our sight in the darkness. We then retraced our steps, passed the south end of the lake, and traveled directly east. The moon was full and would gleam out through the rifts in the clouds occasionally. We traveled until about nine o'clock, when we halted, finding we were making but little headway, having to meander ponds and wade streams that were fast freezing, and decided to go no further until morning. Soon the most of us were tumbled down in a promiscuous heap, lying close to keep one another warm on the naked, burned prairie. Our pants were a sheet of ice. Some had blankets but many only their wet clothes.

"Lieutenant Maxwell and myself did not lie down during that terrible night, but kept tramping around and occasionally rousing the sleepers and making them stir around to keep from freezing. I expected we would all be frozen before morning. I had taken off my socks the day before and wrung them out and carried them in my pocket, and as soon as we halted, I pulled off my boots, replaced my socks, and put on my boots again. I thus saved my feet and I got through without freezing any part. The following morning the sun was clear and we were in sight of timber directly east, eight or ten miles away. I was among the last to leave our camping ground. I remember picking up one empty provision sack and following on. I soon overtook Henry Carse, the oldest and best clad man in our party, having double mackinaw blankets and a fur overcoat. He was on the sunny side of a gopher hill trying to put on his boots, which he had pulled off at night. I passed him without a thought that they were frozen and that he could not get them on. The ponds and also the streams where there was not much current were frozen, so they bore our weight. Most of the men made a bee line, wading streams running slush ice, but I was more fortunate, being long and light, by seeking places that were iced over, and, crawling at full length, I got over without getting wet. Elias Kellogg and myself were first getting to the timber; he had waded every stream and his clothes were a coat of ice. I immediately went about starting a fire. I had no matches and neither had the others. My gun was empty and my powder dry, so I put a charge of powder in my gun, and loaded with some cotton from out of my vest lining. I discharged it into some rotten wood which caught and, by pouring on more powder and with vigorous blowing, I succeeded in starting a fire.

"Lieutenant Maxwell was among the first to get to the timber and by the time we got our fire well going most of the boys had straggled in. Mr. Carse came in last, led by Henry Dalley, a mere boy, poorly clad, whom Mr. Carse had befriended by taking him under his double blankets that night. Carse had his boots in his hands, and was ill and delirious. The soles of his feet were worn out walking on the frozen ground. Kellogg was the next object of attention. He had seated himself by a tree and was almost helpless and unconscious of his misery. We had to arouse him and cut his frozen overalls away. Had he been left alone, he would probably never have arisen from his condition.²⁷ With a good fire we were soon warmed. . . . The river had to be crossed. It was high and full of floating ice, but we got some long poles and, with this help, crossed from one cake of ice to another and reached the other side. . . . No sooner was the advance party over than the others all followed, and when we gained the open ground on the other side we could see the Colony as conjectured, and, foot sore and weary as we were, we soon made the distance.

"We found Major Williams and part of the men there waiting for us with much anxiety. The Major had made preparations for us; fresh beef from the poor settlers' poorer oxen was cooked and ready. This was the first and only meal since noon of the day before, and to us who had fasted over thirty hours was a luxurious feast. Major Williams dispatched runners down the river at once to look for Captain Johnson and those with him. They returned that evening without result. The next morning Smith, Addington and Murray came in. They had been to another cabin further on and, finding some provisions, had staid all night. They stated that they had separated from Captain Johnson and Burkholder early the previous morning; that those men had taken their boots off at night and they were frozen so they could not get them on, and, while they were cutting up their blankets and tying them onto their feet, they had disagreed as to the course to be taken. Pulling off their boots was a fatal mistake. To reach the place where their bones were found, eleven years afterwards, they must have traveled all that day and part of the next night, and have lain down together in that sleep that knows no waking. Thus perished two brave and true young men, in the very flush of their early manhood. . . . Here [at the Irish Colony] the command broke up into squads and detachments, the wagons carrying those unable to walk, while those able to help themselves had to get home as best they could, and, in most cases, did so in three or four days."

It will be remembered that the Spirit Lake detail, whose fortunes Mr. Laughlin has related, separated from the main body at George Granger's, near the Minnesota state line, on the 2nd day of April, and that Major Williams had directed the detachment to leave the further pursuit of the Indians to the Fort Ridgely Regulars, and to retrace their march to Fort Dodge. We select from the address of Captain C. B. Richards his account of the experiences of the command through the fierce blizzard whose force and fury took the lives of Johnson and Burkholder, and came so near ending the existence of their comrades.²³ Captain Richards had been selected to command the Spirit Lake burial detail, and intended to take his Indian pony to carry their surplus bedding and provisions, but, on arriving at the bank of the Des Moines River, it was found that the high water had opened a channel through the ice that the men could cross on a log, but which it was impossible to get the pony over. Captain Richards says:

"I turned over the command to Captain Johnson, divided the load on the pony among the men, gave to William E. Burkholder of my company, and one of my intimate personal friends, my rations and a veil to protect his face and eyes and a small shawl, and bade him good-bye, little thinking it would be forever. Mr. Burkholder was a young man of rare promise; educated, brave, generous, unselfish. He volunteered for this expedition, knowing that it would be at great personal sacrifice, having been nominated by the Republicans of his county as their candidate for treasurer and recorder [the functions of two offices were then discharged by one officer], and knowing that his absence during the election might, and probably would, result in his defeat; but he never gave it a regretful thought. His patriotism and his manhood called him, and he went to lay down his young life that he might protect his fellow citizens and their frontier homes from the merciless savages.

"Being unable to get the pony across the river, and the entire command having been some two hours on the return march, there was no one to take the pony back and I was obliged to follow on and overtake the main body before night, which I did before they left their mid-day camp. We camped for the night at a small trapper's cabin at Mud Lakes, where the men found the frozen carcasses of some beavers which they tried to cook to piece out their scanty rations. The excitement and hope of accomplishing some good having ceased, all were anxious to get where they could find food and rest. Many were foot sore, and several had entirely worn out their boots, and all were nearly used up by the constant exposure, poor food and hard marching through the melting snow and water. . . .

"While the rapid melting of the snow made it much easier for both men and teams most of the way, the waterways and creeks were rendered nearly impassable and so much time was consumed in crossing that we could only make about the same distance per day as when the snow was deepest. . . . The Irish Colony was reached in the evening. Here the officers were called together to consult as to ways and means to get food to keep the men together until we could reach Fort Dodge. [An effort to procure a steer for beef, on promise of payment by the State, was refused, and attempts to butcher it were resisted by the whole population with pitchfork and clubs until guns were loaded and the desired beef ration taken by military force. The animal was soon dressed and distributed to the men, and for the first time in ten days they had a full meal.]

"Here we had hoped the detachment sent to the Lakes might overtake us, but, as they did not come, we left what meat had not been used for the men and resumed our march. The day was warm until about noon, when a cold rain began making it dreary and dismal. We found several small creeks and all the ravines full of water, but crossed all without much detention until we arrived at Cylinder Creek, about twelve or fifteen miles from the Colony and two from Shippey's, where we expected to camp for the night. This point we reached about three P. M., when we found the bottom on the west side one vast sheet of water fully half a mile wide. We had become accustomed to overcoming obstructions and at once sent two men with poles to wade out as far as possible and ascertain the depth of the water. Their report was that the men could wade for nearly half a mile in water from two to five feet deep, when they would reach the channel proper of the creek which was from sixty to eighty feet wide and very deep with a swift current.

"We determined to make a boat from our wagon box, by calking the cracks with cotton taken from our comforters, and with this (first stretching a rope across the deep water) we could wade the men out to that point and run them across in the wagon box. Captain Duncombe selected Guernsey Smith, a man of great strength and endurance, and I selected Solon Mason from my company, a man of equal strength and courage. They waded, one on each side of the improvised boat, while Captain Duncombe and myself bailed the water which found its way in nearly as fast as we could dip it out. When we arrived at the bank of the creek proper, within eighty or one hundred feet of the farther shore, we took Smith and Mason in. We stationed two men—who had waded out for the purpose—near the bank where they found a place with not more than four feet of water, to hold one end of our long rope while we pushed across, uncoiling the rope as we went. When we struck the swift current we were carried rapidly down stream, but, by using all our poles, we managed to get across. As we struck the farther shore, where the bank was steep and a lot of ice piled up, our boat shut up like a jack-knife, there being no braces at the corners. Every man jumped for shore and, by getting hold of some willows, all got out, Mason losing his overcoat and hat, and all getting wet. When the boat, which went under in the collapse, came up, it was only separate boards floating down the rapid stream, and the rope was gone. The men who had come out to hold one end could not stand the cold water longer and had waded back to the main body. We had hoped to stretch this rope across the deep water and ferry over the men.

"About this time the wind suddenly changed to the northwest and was blowing fiercely and very cold, so that our wet clothes began to freeze and stiffen. Captain Duncombe and myself at once concluded to send Smith and Mason to Shippey's for an ox team and a load of poles with which to construct a raft on which to cross the men, in the meantime going up and down the banks of the creek to see if there were any better place to cross. By the time they returned the wind was blowing a gale, with the air full of snow and the cold becoming intense. Mr. Mason was without overcoat or hat, only a handkerchief around his head. The Shippey boys at once loaded a wagon with poles, and with these, on their arrival, we tried to construct a raft, but, in the face of that blizzard, for such it had become, we could do nothing. By this time it had grown so dark that nothing could be seen of the other shore, neither—on account of the noise of the wind—could we get any reply to our frequent calls.

"We were utterly incapable of further exertion. The howling wind and drifting snow was fast obliterating the track. Our only safety lay in getting to Shippey's before the darkness and drifting snow made it impossible. It was a terrible walk, with our frozen clothes, and it was nine o'clock in the evening when we reached the cabin. Here we passed a night which no lapse of time will ever obliterate from my memory, so small was the cabin and so cold, and we had only our wet clothes. We warmed ourselves by the open fire, had some bacon and bread and a cup of coffee. We had no blankets, but borrowed what the Shippeys could spare from their scanty store, and spent the night, some trying to sleep, some drying their clothes by turning first one side to the fire then the other, all anxious and making frequent visits to the door, hoping the storm would abate, but each time only to find the wind and cold increasing. . . . I remember that it seemed as if the light of day would never come.

"The image of each man in the command out in this terrible night, with neither food, fire nor even the protection of a tent, was constantly before me. And what they would do to save themselves was ever in my thoughts; but I had great faith in their ability and judgment. I had seen them for the last twelve days tried as few men ever are, with no shrinking and no fear, and full of expedients to meet every demand on their courage, bravery and endurance, and believed they would be equal to this trying occasion; but still I had fears. So terrible was the wind and cold and so penetrating the drifting snow that the terrible thought would come that we might find them huddled together in one frozen mass—or, realizing that they could not live where they were, they would try to get back to the Irish Colony, and that we would find them scattered on the prairie, each where exhausted nature had succumbed to the fierce wind, the biting cold and blinding snow. But then came as a relief the thought that Carpenter, Stratton, Stevens and others were fully capable of saving the party by their coolness, experience and good judgment.

"With early dawn Captain Duncombe, Smith, Mason and myself started for the creek, the blizzard at its height, if not increasing. [Mason's clothes were still wet, he became chilled and was taken back to the cabin.] On reaching the creek we were unable to see across, or much more than across the channel. The ice had formed and would bear us near the shore, but it was very thin farther out and would not bear our weight. We found two of the boards from the wagon box we had used as a boat the previous night. With these, one lying flat on the center of the board, the other holding the end of a rope fastened about him we tried for an hour to cross the thin ice, but the wind was against us and we were so cold and benumbed that it was impossible, and were obliged, in order to prevent freezing, to return to Shippey's. I froze my cheeks so that the scar still remains, while lying on a board trying to make my way across.

"We spent the time until afternoon watching the weather and the thermometer which marked twenty-eight degrees below zero that morning, and in drying our clothes preparatory to making another effort to reach our men towards night, when we thought the ice would be thick enough to bear our weight. We made the trip again about three P. M. and worked until dark with no better success, and wended our way back to Shippey's, all hope of ever finding the party alive having nearly departed, as the storm, if anything, had been constantly increasing all day, and the mercury showed that it was getting colder. But, soon after we had returned, Sergeant Harris Hoover and two of the men came in. They had traveled a mile or more up the creek and had found a place where they crossed, but not without breaking through the ice and getting wet. From them we learned that the men were all living, and, having improvised a windbreak by stretching a wagon sheet and blankets over the wheels of the wagon, had crawled in so close together that the animal heat had kept them alive, although suffering much from hunger and their cramped position. This news was like a stimulus to us, and we ate our bacon and bread with a relish, and obtained some much needed sleep during the night, although still anxious for our Spirit Lake detachment, but believing they must have arrived at the Colony before the storm. We had many fears for our teamster, J. W. Dawson, an old man then seventy years of age, who from the start had never spared himself or flinched from his severe duties, and for Major Williams, then sixty-two years old. When there was no probability of crossing Cylinder Creek, they had started back in the face of the storm, with one team, for the Colony, on the skeleton of the wagon, we having used the box as a boat.

"At early dawn Monday morning (thirty-four degrees below zero), we went to the creek and saw the men on the other side getting ready to cross. We found the ice, even over the current, strong enough to bear a team and our loaded wagon, which we assisted across. I found my pony alive, though he had been exposed to the storm with nothing to break the wind, and with no food or water for two days and nights. The men all reached Shippey's by eight o'clock, and there had the first food they had eaten since Saturday noon. How they lived through those two terrible nights, wet, cold and hungry as they were, has always been a wonder to me, and still is. . . . As soon as the men had eaten their breakfast they started again on the homeward march, leaving all they could not carry for the teams to bring when they followed. We spent the first night at McKnight's Point, where Major Williams and our teams overtook us. From this point there was but little to do but get to the nearest settlement where food and shelter could be had, and many left the main body and made for the nearest cabins at Dakota and on the west fork, a sufficient number remaining to assist in bad places, and thus we arrived at Fort Dodge, and, for the first time in several days, I removed my overcoat and had a night's rest. . . .

"To Major William Williams, an old man with wonderful powers of endurance and nerves of steel, all were attached. He endured all the hardships of the march and all the exposure and want, the same as any private, with no word of complaint. George B. Sherman, of Company A, was chosen Commissary of the Expedition, and a more thankless task or one requiring more hard work no one had. To keep a hundred men from eating up all the stores for a two weeks' trip in three days was almost impossible, but he did his duty, and tried to piece out our scanty rations and give each man just share. For the entire Expedition I have ever had a warm and brotherly feeling. . . . These men, whose unselfish, generous, energetic, hard-working, toiling days and sleepless nights were spent in assisting entire strangers, could not be otherwise than good citizens, most valuable to the State and community in which they lived."

The experiences of those who remained on the west side of Cylinder Creek (which there flowed south), during the blizzard, cannot better be told than in the words of Ex-Governor C. C. Carpenter, who was one of the party. Mr. Carpenter says:²⁹

"On arriving at Cylinder Creek we found the channel not only full but the water covering the entire bottom bordering the creek to a depth of from three to four feet. When we found that it would be impossible to cross at the point where the road intersected the creek, we resolved to send a party up the stream to see if a better crossing could not be found. But, in less time than I have occupied in telling this story, the wind began to blow from the north, the rain turned into snow, and as every thread of clothing in the entire command was saturated with water, our clothing began to freeze upon our limbs. . . . With one or two others I followed down the creek a mile or more, until we came to the bluffs overlooking the bottoms bordering the Des Moines River. I had hoped that we might discover some elevated ridge through the bottom, over which we could pass and reach the timber that fringed the river. But, on reaching the bluffs and looking out over the bottom lands which fell back from the river one or two miles on either side to their base, it was one wide waste of water. So we concluded our only hope was to remain right where we were until the storm abated.

"On getting back to the road we found our comrades improvising a cover, by taking the wagon sheet and one or two tents which we had along, and stretching them over the wagon wheels and staking them down as best they could to the frozen ground, leaving a small opening on the south side for a doorway. This done, we moved the animals to the south side of our tent on ground sloping to the south, in order to afford them all the protection possible. Then we put all our blankets together, made a common bed upon the ground and all crawled into it, without removing our clothes—every thread of which was wet—and most of which were frozen as stiff as boards. There we lay through that long Saturday night, all the succeeding Sunday, and the following Sunday night. The air outside was full of fine snow. At different times during the night three or four of us crept out of our nests, and went around our tent, banking it with snow on the north, east and west sides; and when the fierce winds would blow the banking away, so as to open a new air hole, we would repeat the operation. To add to the horrors of the situation, during this more than thirty-six hours of absolute imprisonment, we were without food.

"By daylight on Monday morning we were on the move; and, to our joy, found the ice which had formed over Cylinder Creek the day before would bear us up. The severity of the weather cannot be better attested than by stating the fact that all the men, our wagon, loaded with the little baggage of the camp, and the few horses belonging to the command, were crossed upon the bridge of ice with perfect ease and safety. Since that experience on Cylinder Creek, I have marched with armies engaged in actual war. During three and a half years' service, the army with which I was connected marched from Cairo to Chattanooga, from Chattanooga to Atlanta, from Atlanta to the Sea, and from the Sea through the Carolinas to Richmond. These campaigns were made under southern suns and in the cold rains and not infrequent snow storms of southern winters. The marches were sometimes continued without intermission three or four days and nights in succession, with only an occasional halt to give the weary, foot-sore soldier a chance to boil a cup of coffee. But I never in all those weary years experienced a conflict with the elements that could be compared with the two nights and one day on Cylinder Creek.

"After crossing the creek on Monday morning, we went to the Shippey house, some two miles south, where we cooked our breakfast. From this time forward no order of march was observed, but each man found his way home to suit himself. . . . I have frequently thought in later years of the good discipline preserved in a command where there was absolutely no legal power to enforce authority. This fact is really the highest compliment that could be paid the officers. Had they not possessed the characteristics which gained and maintained the respect of these men, no shadow of discipline could have been enforced. On the contrary, during those trying days, on the march and in the bivouac, there was complete order. Of the three captains, two are living—C. B. Richards and John F. Duncombe. Their subsequent careers in civil life have been but a fulfillment of the prophecy of the men who followed them through the snow banks of northwestern Iowa in 1857. With Captain J. C. Johnson I was but little acquainted, but I watched him with interest and with admiration during the few days of our march. He was a man of fine physique, was deliberate, quiet almost to reticence, with a handsome face and manly eye. In short, from what I saw of him, I may say that the marble and brass, which we have come today to unveil in commemoration of him and his company's virtues and heroism, are not of a more solid and enduring character than were the noble and generous traits of his nature. His cruel death, and that of his no less noble and promising comrade, William E. Burkholder, was the one circumstance which veiled the results of the Expedition in a lasting sorrow.

"The First Lieutenant of Company A, Franklin A. Stratton, was perhaps more fully endowed with all the qualities which constitute a soldier than any other man of the company or perhaps of the command. He was quiet, prompt, uncomplaining, methodical, and, in the line of his duty, exacting. Remembering my comradeship with him on the Spirit Lake Expedition, when he went into the War of the Rebellion I prophesied for him a successful career. He rose to be the Colonel of his regiment, and died a few years ago, a Captain in the Regular Army.

"But time fails me to name all who deserve honorable mention. I cannot close, however, without paying a few words of tribute to Major William Williams, who commanded the Expedition. Having been the Sutler of the battalion of Regulars which was stationed at Fort Dodge, he knew something of the movement and sustenance of troops. He had the ability to make that knowledge available, and on the Expedition illustrated his competency to command. There was a quiet, competent air in his deportment that commanded respect, and he moved those undisciplined men as quietly and as orderly as would have been possible by an experienced soldier. I have never thought that full justice had been done to the man who led this Expedition, and who in many ways proved his interest and faith in the pioneers of Northwestern Iowa; so I have turned aside, here and now, to say a tardy word in recognition of his many noble qualities.

"He was born in Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, December 5, 1796, and died at Fort Dodge, February 26, 1874, and at the date of these events was in the sixty-second year of his age. He was reared a banker, and for years was Cashier of the branch of the Exchange Bank of Pittsburg, located at Hollidaysburg. But he had been an open-handed, generous giver, and had no innate love of gain; so he lost money instead of making accumulations, and sought the great West to rebuild his broken fortunes. Now he was a man well advanced in years, but, true to his impulses, where there was a blow to be struck to protect the weak, he found his place at the front. Though small of stature and not physically strong, during this entire campaign he was seldom seen on horseback. It was not easy for younger men to complain of the hardships of the march when, day by day, they saw him resolutely pushing forward. I met him and talked with him many times during the campaign, frequently advised him to favor himself, but he always answered, with a twinkle in his eye, that he had none of the infirmities of age."

We have seen that when Morris Markham came to the Springfield settlement with news of the disaster at the Lakes, two young men of that settlement, Charles Tretts and Henry Chiffen, volunteered to go on snow shoes to Fort Ridgely, seventy-five miles to the northward, and appeal for aid to the United States troops quartered there. Markham arrived at Springfield on the 9th or 10th of March, and the two messengers started upon their arduous trip within a day or two later. The country over which they traveled was absolutely without settlements, and no roads or trails existed, so their progress was slow and very difficult, and they did not reach the military post and agency until the 18th of March.

The post at Fort Ridgely was then commanded by Colonel Edmund Burke Alexander,³⁰ of the Tenth United States Infantry, a new regiment organized in 1855, the former one of that number having disbanded after the Mexican War. The garrison consisted of five companies of the Tenth Infantry. The United States Agent for the Sioux of the Mississippi, at the Redwood and Yellow Medicine Agencies, was Charles E. Flandreau, afterwards a Judge ³⁰Edmund Burke Alexander was born in Prince William County, Virginia, Oct. 2, 1802, and died at Washington, D. C., Jan. 3, 1888. He graduated at West Point in 1823, and his first assignment, as Second Lieutenant in the Third Infantry, was to the temporary post, called Fort Atkinson, at Council Bluffs, across the river and a few miles above where is now Council Bluffs, Iowa. He also served at Fort Armstrong, on Rock Island, in 1828 and 1829. As First Lieutenant, Third Infantry, he served from 1830 to 1838, in the Southwest, at Fort Smith, Arkansas, Fort Towson, Indian Territory, and other posts in that region; was then promoted to Captain and A. Q. M., on duty in the same department until the Mexican War, when, as Captain in the Third Infantry, he took part in Scott's campaign, being brevetted Major, for Cerro Gordo, and Lieutenant Colonel, for Churubusco. Promoted to Major of the Eighth Infantry, he served in New Mexico until March 3, 1855, when he was commissioned Colonel of the new Tenth Infantry, authorized on that date. Being ordered, with his regiment, on the Utah Expedition, against the recalcitrant Mormons, he assumed its command until General Albert Sidney Johnston joined them en route. After the Civil War began, he remained on the plains at Fort Laramie and Fort Kearney until 1863, when he was made Acting Assistant Provost Marshal General, and Superintendent of the Volunteer Recruiting Service for the State of Missouri with headquarters at St. Louis. He was brevetted Brigadier General of Volunteers March 13, 1865, another of the Virginians in the army, who, like Thomas and St. George Cooke, remained loyal to his flag. After the War, he remained in command of the Tenth Infantry, with headquarters at Fort Snelling, until retired, for age, in February, 1869.

in Minnesota. Judge Flandreau was present at Fort Ridgely when the messengers from Springfield arrived there, and, as the highest civil officer of the United States Government available, took active part in directing operations for the relief of the settlers. He has left upon record an account of the measures taken by the government authorities there which we give in his words:³¹

"The people at Springfield sent two young men to my Agency with the news of the massacre. They brought with them a statement of the facts, as related by Mr. Markham, signed by some persons with whom I was acquainted. They came on foot and arrived at the Agency on the 18th of March. The snow was very deep and was beginning to thaw, which made the traveling extremely difficult. When these young men arrived, they were so badly affected with snow blindness that they could scarcely see at all, and were completely wearied out. I was fully satisfied of the truth of the report that murders had been committed, although the details, of course, were very meager. I at once held a consultation with Colonel Alexander, commanding the Tenth United States Infantry, five or six companies of which were at Fort Ridgely. The Colonel, with commendable promptness, ordered Captain Barnard E. Bee,³² with his company, to proceed at once to the scene of the massacre, and do all he could—either in the way of protecting the settlers or punishing the enemy.

"The country between the Minnesota River and Spirit Lake was at that day an utter wilderness without an inhabitant. In fact, none of us knew where Spirit Lake was except that it lay about due south of the fort, at a distance of from one hundred to one hundred twenty-five miles. We procured two guides of experience from among our Sioux half-breeds, Joseph Coursall (more generally known as Joe Gaboo) and Joseph La Framboise. These men took a pony and a light train to carry the blankets and provisions, put on their snow shoes and were ready to go anywhere; while the poor troops, with their leather shoes and their back loads, accompanied by a ponderous army wagon on wheels, drawn by six mules, were about as fit for such a march as an elephant is for a ball room. But it was the best the government had, and they entered upon the arduous duty bravely and cheerfully. I had a light sleigh and a fine team with my outfit aboard, with a French-Canadian voyageur for a driver and old Mr. Prescott for my interpreter, being well outfitted for the occasion, as I always took care to be while on Indian duty in the winter time.

"We started on March 19th at about one o'clock P. M., at first intending to go directly across the country, but we soon decided that course to be utterly impossible, as the mules could not draw the wagon through the deep snow. It became apparent that our only hope of reaching the lake was to follow the road down by the way of New Ulm to Mankato, and trust to luck for a road up the Watonwan in the direction of the lake, we having learned that some teams had recently started for that point with supplies. The first days of the march were appalling. The men were wet nearly up to their waists with the deep and melting snow, and utterly weary before they had gone ten miles. Captain Bee was a South Carolinian and, though a veteran, had seen most of his service in Mexico and the South. Mr. Murry, his Lieutenant,³³ was a gallant young fellow, but had not seen much service. Neither of them had ever made a snow camp before; and, when we had dug out a place for our first camp, and were making futile efforts to dry our clothes before turning in for the night, I felt that the trip was hopeless. So much time had elapsed since the murders were committed, and so much more would be necessarily consumed before the troops could possibly reach the Lake, that I felt assured that no good would result from going on. So I told Captain Bee that, if he wanted to return, I would furnish him with a written opinion of two of the most experienced voyageurs on the frontier that the march was impossible of accomplishment with the inappropriate outfit with which the troops were furnished. It was then that the stern sense of duty which animates the true soldier exhibited itself in these officers. The Captain agreed with me that the chances of accomplishing any good by going on were very small, but he read his orders and said: 'My orders are to go to Spirit Lake and do what I can. It is not for me to interpret my orders but to obey them. I shall go on until it becomes physically impossible for me to proceed further. It will then be time to turn back.' And go on he did.

³²Barnard E. Bee, born in South Carolina in 1824; graduated from West Point in 1845, and, as Second Lieutenant in the Third Infantry, served in General Persifer F. Smith's Brigade of Trigg's Division, in Scott's Campaign in the Mexican War, being wounded at Cerro Gordo. He had been stationed in New Mexico until 1855, previous to coming to Minnesota; took part in the Utah Expedition, 1857-1858; and was at Fort Laramie when he resigned, in 1861, to become a Brigadier General in the Confederate Army. He was killed at the first battle of Bull Run, and is said to have given the well-known sobriquet to the distinguished General Thomas J. Jackson, when he shouted to his own wavering troops: "See Jackson there standing like a stone wall."

"We followed the trail up the Watonwan until we found the teams which had made it, stuck in a snow drift, and, for the remaining forty or fifty miles, the troops marched ahead of the mules and broke a road for them, relieving the front rank every fifteen or twenty minutes. When the Lake was reached the Indians were gone. A careful examination was made of their camp and fires by the guides, who pronounced them three or four days old. Their trail led to the west. A pursuit was made by a portion of the command, partly mounted on the mules and partly on foot, but it was soon abandoned on the declaration of the guides that the Indians were, by the signs, several days in advance. The dead were buried, a guard was established under Lieutenant Murry with twenty-four men, and Captain Bee with the balance returned to the fort. I learned afterwards from Mrs. Marble, one of the rescued women, that the troops in pursuit came so near that the Indians saw them, and made an ambush for them, and, had they not turned back, the prisoners would all have been murdered. The guides may have been mistaken in their judgment of the age of the camps and fires, or may have deceived the troops. I knew the young men so well that I have never accused them of a betrayal of their trust, but it was probably best as it was, in either case, because, had the troops overtaken the Indians, the women would certainly have been butchered and some of the soldiers killed. The satisfaction of having killed some of the Indians would not have compensated for the result."

³³Alexander Murry, born in Pennsylvania, entered the Military Academy at West Point July 1, 1847, but resigned the following January. He obtained a commission, however, as Second Lieutenant in the Tenth Infantry, on its organization, March 3, 1855; was promoted First Lieutenant January, 1861; was transferred to the Thirteenth Infantry in May, and promoted to Captain Oct. 24, 1861. He was retired March 30, 1864, for disability incurred in line of duty.—Heitman's Historical Register, U. S. A. The name is spelled Murray in all of the Massacre histories consulted, but the army official registers record it as above.

The narrative of Mrs. Sharp also states that the detachment under Lieutenant Murry came so near overtaking the Indians as to reach, at three P. M., the site of the camp which they had left in the morning. The savages had then halted in a hollow near a small stream and were well hidden, but from a near-by hill could see the movements of the soldiers. An Indian ascended a tree as a lookout, a guard was placed over the captives with the purpose of shooting them if an attack was made, the rest of the band prepared for battle, and the squaws tore down the tepees and skulked off among the willows. After an hour of suspense the soldiers were seen to turn back, when the Indians made haste to decamp, traveling two days and nights with scarcely a halt.

The soldiers had arrived at Springfield on the evening of the 27th of March, scarcely twenty-four hours after the killing of the settlers there, and on the same day that the refugees had taken their departure. A day was spent there in burying the dead and viewing the situation. Inkpadutah and his band left Heron Lake, fifteen or twenty miles west of Springfield, on the morning of the 28th. The troops started in pursuit on the morning of the 29th. They were in no condition, after the hardships and sufferings of their march, to undertake an effective campaign, and doubtless were not animated by as earnest a purpose as were Major Williams' volunteers, and perhaps were too easily duped by their half-breed guides.

Major Williams, in an official report made to the Governor, under date of April 12th, immediately after his return to Fort Dodge, passes strictures upon the company of Regulars that are hardly justified by the facts, as they became known later. He says:³⁴

"By forced marches we reached the state line near Springfield and encamped about sundown on the margin of a grove; detailed sixty men, armed with rifles and sixshooters, with orders to cook their suppers and supply themselves with cold rations, and be ready to march all night, in two divisions of thirty men each, and surprise the Indians before daylight the next morning; furnished them with guides, as the information we had just received was that the Indians were embodied at or near the trading house of a half-breed by the name of Gaboo. We proceeded with great hopes of overtaking and giving a good account of them; but to our great mortification we found that they had all fled at the approach of fifty Regulars from Fort Ridgely. . . . Had they not sent to Fort Ridgely for troops, we would most certainly have overtaken them.

"The conduct of the troops from Fort Ridgely is hard to be accounted for. On Thursday, the 26th of March, the Indians attacked Springfield and neighborhood. The citizens defended themselves as well as they could. The battle lasted until nightfall, when the Indians withdrew. On Friday, in the afternoon, the troops from Fort Ridgely arrived, all well mounted on mules. [A mistake. They made the march on foot. Six men were mounted on mules belonging to their army wagon when the pursuit of the Indians was made. See Flandreau's narrative.] Those troops lay at Springfield all day Saturday and assisted in burying the dead. . . . Their officers lay over from Friday evening until Sunday morning without pursuing or making any effort to overtake the Indians, who, they must have known, had taken off four white women as prisoners.

³⁴The entire report is printed in Mrs. Abbie Gardner Sharp's History of the Spirit Lake Massacre, pp. 114-121.

"On Sunday morning he, the commanding officer, set out on their trail and followed them half the day, finding their camp fires, overtaking three or four straggling squaws, let them go, and finding all sorts of goods thrown and strewn along their trail to lighten their load and expedite their flight. [It is clear from the statements of Judge Flandreau, Mrs. Sharp and all later sources, that no squaws were overtaken.] When he could not have been over half a day's march from them he stopped, and returned the same evening (Sunday) to Springfield. On Monday he set out for Spirit Lake to bury the dead, etc. He went to the first house, that of Mr. Marble, found one dead body, buried it and returned to Springfield."

While there are other errors also in Major Williams' report, it is very remarkable that he should have obtained such accurate information as he gives so soon after the event.

The Indians, after being assured of safety by their hurried flight, moved very leisurely to the westward. They made a halt for a short time at the Red Pipestone Quarry, and replenished their supply of pipes. The young women captives were compelled to carry packs equal to those borne by the squaws who were inured to such labor, and to wade through snow and slush and overflowed creeks. Mrs. Thatcher, whose nursing babe had been killed before her eyes, was in a particularly sad plight. With inflamed and broken breasts, with one limb swollen until it burst, she carried her burdens and underwent the hardships with heroic endurance, until the Big Sioux River was reached, at what is now Flandreau, South Dakota, about the 1st of May. The crossing was made over the river here upon a tree which had fallen across the channel and collected a raft of driftwood, forming a practicable though treacherous bridge. As Mrs. Thatcher stepped upon the bridge, a young Indian, who had all along exhibited a particularly malignant spirit, took the pack from her shoulders, and put it on his own, and, when they reached the middle of the stream, pushed her into the rapid, ice-cold current. With more than human strength she breasted the torrent, reached the shore, but was clubbed back by the savages. She swam across the stream, but was intercepted by the fiends on that side, floated down until she touched another brush bridge on which a part of the band was crossing, and there her miseries were ended by a bullet from one of those inhuman wretches.

At Lake Herman, near what is now Madison, South Dakota, where the band camped for some time, they were visited by two Christian Indians, sons of Spirit Walker, Chief of the village of Lac-qui-Parle, Minnesota. These friendly Indians heard, while hunting on the Sioux, that white women were held by the outlaw band at Lake Herman, and determined to try to rescue the captives. After arguments lasting more than a day, Inkpadutah agreed to give up one of the captives. Finding that they could secure no more, the Christians consented, and were told to select the one they desired. The women were under a shelter tent near by, baking fish. Seahota stepped to the tent and looked in. Abbie Gardner was so young that he concluded they would be relatively kind to her, so she was passed. Mrs. Marble looked young and not unhappy, so they concluded to take Mrs. Noble, who was older and looked distressed. They motioned to her to follow them, but she mistook their motive and turned from them in anger. They then motioned to Mrs. Marble, who followed them good naturedly.³⁵ Mrs. Marble was taken at once to Lac-qui-Parle, where she was supplied with a civilized garb by Chief Spirit Walker, and sent to the Upper Santee Agency, where Judge Flandreau, the Indian Agent, paid the generous rescuers one thousand dollars as compensation for their services. On the arrival of Judge Flandreau and Mrs. Marble at St. Paul, where they at once repaired, the Territorial Legislature, then in session, appropriated ten thousand dollars (or so much of it as might be necessary) out of an empty treasury, to be applied to the rescue of the remaining captives. Before this action was taken, however, Major Flandreau, Rev. Dr. S. R. Riggs and Rev. Dr. Thomas S. Williams (the two latter missionaries to the Sioux) secured, at their own expense, the services of three Christian Indians to go and buy the two white women from their captors.

On the arrival of these friendly emissaries at the camp of Inkpadutah, which had been removed to a large village of Yanktons, on the James River, near what is now Ashton, South Dakota, they found that Mrs. Noble had been clubbed to death, a few days before, by Roaring Cloud, a son of the Sioux Chief, when she refused to accede to his infamous demands. The young girl, Abbie Gardner, was purchased after a good deal of dickering, and speedily restored to Judge Flandreau, who conducted her to her friends.

A well-laid plan, by Colonel Alexander, to follow Inkpadutah with four or five companies of the Tenth Infantry, and effect the capture of the band, was frustrated by a peremptory order for the entire command to start at once to join the expedition which was about to move to Utah under General Albert Sidney Johnston, and bring under subjection the unruly Mormons. In July it became known at Fort Ridgely that a portion of Inkpadutah's band was in camp on the Yellow Medicine River, near the Upper Agency. Lieutenant Murry, with about twenty Regulars and a few volunteers, was sent to capture or destroy them if possible. They made the march in the night, guided by John Other Day, (the friendly Indian who had led Abbie Gardner's rescuers,) and at daylight approached the camp. An Indian, recognized by the guide as Roaring Cloud, the murderer of Mrs. Noble, attempted to run away, but was killed by the soldiers in a running fight.

The Agency Sioux were notified that their annuities would be withheld until they delivered Inkpadutah and his band to the authorities for punishment. A force of about one hundred warriors, made up of squads from the different bands under Little Crow, (afterwards notorious for his part in the New Ulm massacres,) made a campaign into the Indian country for about two weeks, when they returned and reported that they had killed three of his band, wounded one and taken one squaw and one papoose prisoners. The fight was at Lake Thompson, in the center of Kingsbury County. The Santees claimed that they had done all they could; that the guilty Indians did not belong to their bands, and that they should not be punished for the deeds of others. After some consideration and delay the payment of annuities was resumed, and no further effort made to apprehend the murderers.

Evidence collected from Sioux Indians by Doane Robinson, Secretary of the State Historical Society of South Dakota,³⁰ goes to show that Inkpadutah joined with Little Crow in the New Ulm massacres; that he was intrusted with high commands in the Indian defense during the campaigns made by Sibley and Sully against the Indians, and exhibited high qualities of military skill; that he afterwards joined with Red Cloud, Crazy Horse and Sitting Bull, and, in the Custer massacre on the Little Big Horn, had command of one of the villages, and that it was his band which repulsed Major Reno and prevented him from joining Custer. He was among those driven into Canada, and died there about 1879, aged about sixty-four years. Mr. Robinson says:³⁷

"It was only as a war chief that he won the admiration of the Indians. In civil life they would have none of him. Except where bloodshedding was the business in hand, they knew by sore experience he was not to be trusted. During all of the time that he was in command of the Indian forces, the white men did not realize that he was even present, and, in all of the writing, there is not a line that gives him credit for any part in those battles. Everything considered, he must be accorded a high place as a military leader. There is little of record, and little which the living Indians know of him which indicates much of his mental endowments. He appears never to have resorted to diplomacy to carry a point, but invariably depended upon brutal force. If there is one exception to this, it was in the negotiation for the release of Mrs. Marble. Greyfoot, the rescuer, relates that he craftily argued that the taking back of one captive would be sufficient to convince the white men that the annuity Indians had acted in good faith. It is scarcely probable from all of his conduct that he was other than he seemed—a terrible monster."

The heroic quality of American manhood, which has ever attained its highest expression among the pioneers of the frontier, was never better exemplified than it was in the daring and endurance of the little band of volunteers from Fort Dodge and Webster City, the hardships and peril of whose short campaign we have presented from their own words. In proper recognition of what they did and dared, and in honor of the murdered dead, the Twenty-fifth General Assembly of the State of Iowa passed an act, which was approved by Governor Frank D. Jackson, on March 30, 1894, providing for the erection of a monument commemorative of the massacre of pioneers at Okoboji and Spirit Lakes, near the scene of the tragic event, and for reinterment of those killed. The act provided for the appointment of five commissioners to carry out its purposes, and the Governor appointed as such commission: Ex-Governor Cyrus C. Carpenter of Fort Dodge, Hon. John F. Duncombe of Fort Dodge, Hon. Charles Aldrich of Des Moines, Hon. R. A. Smith of Okoboji, and Mrs. Abbie Gardner Sharp of Okoboji.

The Commission secured as a site a lot adjoining the one on which stood the log cabin in which the Gardner family was murdered by the Indians. On this was erected a shaft fifty-five feet high above the foundation, in alternate blocks of rough and polished Minnesota granite, with a die six by six feet, upon which is placed four bronze tablets with inscriptions. Reinterment was made on the same grounds of the remains of sixteen of the victims, being all that could be found. These were Mrs. Joel Howe and five children, James H. Mattock, wife and five children, Robert Matheison, Isaac H. Harriott, and Bertell E. Snyder. The Gardner and Luce families of six had been buried on a lot closely adjoining and were not disturbed. The inscriptions on the four large bronze tablets are as follows:

The names of victims recorded on the East Tablet number thirty-eight. The name of Willie Thomas, one of those killed at Springfield, seems to have been inadvertently omitted. He, with the two volunteers frozen to death, make up the number to forty-one, which is that given by several writers.

The monument was dedicated and turned over to the State on the 25th of July, 1895, at a public meeting, at which were present all of the commissioners, except John F. Duncombe, absent in Europe; Hon. Charles E. Flandreau, of Minnesota, the Indian Agent who organized the rescue of two of the women captives; Mrs. Irene A. Thomas, a survivor of the Springfield massacre; Chetanmaza, one of the Dakota braves who negotiated Miss Gardner's release; Col. Warren S. Dungan, Lieutenant Governor of the State; Hon. W. S. Its conspicuous place, in a locality thronged with summer visitors from all parts of the world, has made it one of the best known cenotaphs in the West.

ROSTER OF THE SPIRIT LAKE RELIEF EXPEDITION

COMMISSIONED OFFICERS—PROVISIONAL BATTALION

William Williams. Residence Fort Dodge, Webster County, Iowa. Appointed by Governor James W. Grimes in the fall of 1855, as Executive Agent at Fort Dodge, to take such measures as might be deemed necessary to protect settlers from the Indians and to preserve the peace. He already, at that time, bore the title of Major, from service in the Pennsylvania Militia. When trustworthy information came to him of the massacre of settlers at the Dickinson County Lakes, he at once, under authority of his appointment from the Governor, called for volunteers, organized them into three military companies, of which he appointed the officers, and led them on the expedition to rescue the imperiled settlers, and punish the savage marauders. The termination of his authority as Executive Agent, which indeed was, in a sense, extra-legal, does not appear of record, so far as has been ascertained. It would at least cease with the expiration of the term of office of Governor Grimes. Major Williams was born at Huntington, Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, Dec. 6, 1796. He engaged in business pursuits in that state until 1849, when he came to Muscatine, Iowa, where lived his brother, the old pioneer Judge Joseph Williams. He received at this time an appointment as sutler, or post trader, to the garrison about to establish the military post of Fort Dodge, on the upper Des Moines River. On the evacuation of the post, in 1853, he remained there, and purchased the site as government land and laid out the city of Fort Dodge. When it was organized as a city, he was elected its first Mayor. He died at Fort Dodge, Feb. 26, 1874.

George B. Sherman. Residence Fort Dodge. Appointed Commissary of the Expedition. No biographical sketch obtained.

George R. Bissell, M. D. Residence Fort Dodge. Appointed Surgeon of the Expedition. Rendered efficient service in treating the wounded of the Springfield refugees when they were met near Emmetsburg. No biographical sketch obtained.

COMPANY "A"

Charles B. Richards. Residence Fort Dodge. Enrolled March 23, 1857, and chosen as Captain of Company A. Born at Warrensburg, Warren County, New York, Aug. 13, 1833. Educated at the Kinderhook and Glen's Falls Academy and the Polytechnic Institute, Troy, New York. Studied law at Utica, and was admitted to the bar there, after which he came to Iowa, and located at Fort Dodge, in 1855. Held the position of Register of the United States Land Office there from 1861 to 1869. He was one of the founders of the First National Bank of Fort Dodge, and also became a large coal operator. He was subsequently very fortunate in mining operations in the Rocky Mountains and removed to San Diego, Cal. (Charles Aldrich, in Annals of Iowa, Third Series, Vol. III, p. 509.)

Franklin Asa Stratton. Residence Fort Dodge. Chosen First Lieutenant of Company A, March 23, 1857. Born in Massachusetts about 1832 (twenty-nine years old in 1861). Raised a company of cavalry in Fort Dodge and vicinity in August, 1861, for Colonel Josiah Harlan's "Independent Cavalry," to serve in the Army of the Potomac. The policy of accepting independent cavalry commands having been abandoned by the Government, and the regiment being composed largely of volunteers from Pennsylvania, the regiment was given the name of Eleventh Pennsylvania Cavalry, in which Captain Stratton's Company was mustered as Company A, on Oct. 29, 1861. Stratton was thus recognized as ranking Captain, which led to his promotion as Major Sept. 1, 1862, Lieutenant Colonel Oct. 1, 1864, and Colonel of the regiment May 25, 1865. He received a brevet as Brigadier General of Volunteers March 13, 1865, and was mustered out on the 13th of August, 1865. The service of the regiment was principally in the vicinity of Suffolk, Virginia, and in North Carolina, under General John J. Peck, and later in Kautz's Division, Eighteenth and Twenty-fifth Army Corps. Colonel Harlan was succeeded by Colonel Samuel P. Spear, who was soon placed in command of a brigade, and Major Stratton exercised an independent command of a detachment of the regiment from soon after his promotion until the close of his service. He was frequently commended in reports and correspondence of his superiors. Governor Carpenter states that he received a commission in the regular service, after the war, but we do not find the statement confirmed in Heitman's Historical Register. He died July 17, 1879. (Report, Adjutant General of Iowa, 1863; Heitman's Historical Register, U. S. Army; Rebellion Records, Union and Confederate Armies.)

L. K. Wright. Residence Fort Dodge. Appointed Sergeant of Company A, March 23, 1857. No biographical sketch obtained.

Solon Mason. Residence Fort Dodge. Appointed Corporal of Company A, March 23, 1857. No biographical sketch obtained.

George W. Brizee. Residence Fort Dodge. Occupation lawyer. Enrolled as private in Company A, March 23, 1857. No biographical sketch obtained.

William E. Burkholder. Residence Fort Dodge. Enrolled as private in Company A, March 23, 1857. Accompanied the command to Granger's Point, near the Minnesota State line, where he volunteered on April 2, 1857, as one of a detachment under Captain J. C. Johnson, to go to the Dickinson County lakes, to bury the dead. On the march of the detachment to rejoin the main body on the Des Moines River, Burkholder and Captain Johnson, endeavoring to escape the fury of the storm which had overtaken them, wandered away from their comrades and were frozen to death on the 5th or 6th of April, in Palo Alto County, on the west side of the West Fork of the Des Moines River. Their bones were not discovered until 1868, when they were identified by their guns and powder flasks. Mr. Burkholder's remains were interred at Fort Dodge, where the funeral ceremonies were conducted, in part, by Major Williams. The place and date of birth of Mr. Burkholder was not ascertained. He was, at the time of the Expedition, an intimate friend of C. C. Carpenter, afterwards Governor of Iowa, who, in 1864, married Susan Burkholder, his sister. He was nominated by the Republican party for the office of Recorder and Treasurer of Webster County, but his death occurred before election. (Narratives of Carpenter, Maxwell and others, and editorial remarks of Charles Aldrich, in Annals of Iowa, Third Series, Vol. III.)

Cyrus Clay Carpenter. Residence Fort Dodge. Occupation teacher and land surveyor. Met the Relief Expedition in Palo Alto County, near present site of Emmetsburg, on the 26th of March, 1857, and joined it as a private in Company A. Born in Susquehanna County, Pa., Nov. 24, 1829. Attended Academy at Hartford, and engaged in teaching at eighteen, following that vocation and farm work in Pennsylvania and Ohio. Came to Iowa in 1854, and settled in Fort Dodge in June of that year. Found employment as land surveyor, and was upon a trip in that capacity when he met the Relief Expedition. Was elected Representative in Iowa General Assembly in the fall of 1857. Received commission from President Lincoln, as Captain and Commissary of Subsistence, March 24, 1862, and was assigned to duty with General Rosecrans, but transferred, at a later date, to the Left Wing, Sixteenth Army Corps, under General G. M. Dodge. Promoted Lieutenant Colonel Sept. 26, 1864, and became Chief Commissary of the Fifteenth Army Corps, under Major General John A. Logan. Brevetted Colonel of Volunteers July 12, 1865, for efficient and meritorious service. Mustered out July 14, 1865. Register Iowa State Land Office, 1867 to 1871. Elected Governor of Iowa, and inaugurated Jan. 11, 1872. Re-elected for the term 1874-1876. Second Comptroller United States Treasury 1876-1877. State Railroad Commissioner March to August, 1876. Member of Congress two terms 1879-1883. Representative Iowa General Assembly 1884. Died on his farm near Fort Dodge May 29, 1898. (Gue's History of Iowa, Vol. IV; Heitman's Historical Register U. S. Was recently from Princeton, Ill., but no other biographical data obtained. (Narratives of Maxwell and Laughlin, Annals of Iowa, Third Series, Vol. III.)

———— Chatterton. Residence probably Fort Dodge. Enrolled as private in Company A, March 23, 1857. No biographical sketch obtained. Mr. McBane was a Scotchman, a man of means, who had become the owner of several tracts of land throughout that region, and was afterwards President of the Merchants' National Bank of Fort Dodge. Mr. Parmenter was one of the party who visited the Okoboji Lakes on the 16th and 17th of March, and discovered the dead bodies and other evidences of a massacre. They reached Fort Dodge with the news on March 21st and immediately enrolled with the Relief Expedition. Parmenter was born in Vermont in 1827, soon afterwards became a resident of Erie County, New York, and removed to Jasper County, Iowa, in 1855. Volunteered at Granger's Point, April 2nd, as one of burial detachment to go to the Lakes. Remained at the Gardner cabin with six others until April 6th, thus escaping the worst of the blizzard. This party retraced their steps by way of Granger's Point, where a team and wagon had been left for them; took on, at the Irish Colony, the women, children and wounded men of the Springfield refugees, and Henry Carse, disabled with frozen feet; crossed Cylinder Creek channel by improvising a raft, and drawing it back and forth with ropes, and finally reached Fort Dodge about April 15th, nearly famished from their supply of food being exhausted throughout the entire return trip. Mr. Smith was born in Wyoming County, New York, in 1829. He came to Webster County, Iowa, in 1856. Thatcher and Burtch stopped at Shippey's with the exhausted oxen. Luce, Ryan and Clark kept on their journey and met their fate at the hands of the Indians. Burtch remained at Fort Dodge until May, 1857, then returned to Hampton, but removed to Cedar Falls in the fall of that year. Removed to Des Moines in the fall of 1861, and enlisted there in Company C, Twenty-second Iowa Infantry. Mustered out July 25, 1865, since which time has made his home at Indianola, Iowa. Remained there at Gardner's cabin during the blizzard of April 4th to 6th, and thus escaped the worst of its fury. Born at Williamstown, Vt., Dec. 19, 1824, educated at Aurora (N. Y.) Had made previous visits to the Lakes as a trapper, and undertook to guide the portion of the detachment who started on their return, April 4th. Volunteered at Granger's Point April 2nd, as one of burial detachment to go to the Lakes. Remained in Gardner's cabin, with six others, until April 6th, and then returned by way of Granger's Point. (See R. A. Smith, Company A.) Mr. Thatcher was born in Howard County, Ind., about 1832. He was married at LaMotte, Jackson County, Iowa, in January, 1855, to Elizabeth, daughter of James Wetherspoon and Adeline (Hodges) Blake, who were also natives of Howard County, Ind., and had removed to Jackson County, Iowa, in 1854. Thatcher and his wife removed to Hampton, Franklin County, Iowa, during the spring after their marriage, and, in the fall of 1856, in company with Joel Howe and Alvin Noble (son-in-law of Howe), and their families, all former neighbors in Indiana, again removed to the Dickinson County Lakes. A few weeks before the massacre, Mr. Thatcher and Harvey Luce went to Waterloo for supplies. On their return, Thatcher and Asa Burtch were left at Shippey's with their exhausted cattle, and thus escaped the attack of the Indians, in which Mrs. Thatcher was taken captive and their little child murdered. Thatcher returned to Hampton, and afterwards removed to Vandalia, Jasper County, from which place he enlisted, July 25, 1862, in Company C, Twenty-second Iowa Infantry; was wounded slightly in the hand May 22, 1863, at Vicksburg. Discharged for disability June 23, 1864, at Baton Rouge, La. He married again, and removed to Galena, Kan., in the eighties; married a third wife, in 1907, and soon after removed to New Mexico, where he is living in 1910. Efforts to learn his postoffice address there have not been successful. (Mrs. Sarah J. (Blake) Rhea, Maquoketa, Iowa, sister of Mrs. Elizabeth Thatcher, Spirit Lake victim.)

(See R. A. Smith, Company A.) Wilson had visited at Gardner's cabin during the winter, and thus became acquainted with the family. Immediately after the return of the Expedition to Fort Dodge, he and Eliza Gardner, who was one of the rescued Springfield refugees, were married, and took up their residence in Hampton, Franklin County, Iowa, where they were found by Abbie Gardner, after her return to civilization. He enlisted at Janesville, Iowa, August 15, 1862, in Company B, Thirty-eighth Iowa Infantry, and was discharged for disability at New Madrid, Mo., May 4, 1863. He was born in Indiana, and was forty-seven years old at the time of enlistment. He died at Mason City, Iowa, date not ascertained, but it was prior to the publication of Abbie Gardner Sharp's book, in 1885. (R. A. Smith's History of Dickinson County, Iowa, and his letter, December, 1909; Abbie Gardner Sharp's History of the Spirit Lake Massacre.)

COMPANY "C"

John C. Johnson. Residence Hamilton County, Iowa, near Webster City. Enrolled at Webster City, March 23, 1857, and chosen Captain of Company C. Volunteered at Granger's Point, April 2d, as one of burial detachment of twenty-three to go to the Lakes. Captain Richards, being unable to get his horse over the river, gave up command of the detachment, which then devolved on Captain Johnson. On the morning of April 4th, Johnson, with fifteen others of the detachment, resolved to return in a straight southeasterly direction towards the Irish Colony, on the Des Moines. In the afternoon of that day, the blizzard came on, during which Johnson, Burkholder, Murray, Addington and Smith detached themselves from the main party, to make a detour around a marsh, spent the night within sight of their comrades, but, in the morning, took a southeast direction, while the larger party kept due east. Johnson and Burkholder took off their wet boots in the night, which were so frozen that they could not be pulled on in the morning. Their three companions moved on, while the young men were cutting up blankets to cover their feet, and this separation was for the last time on earth. Johnson and Burkholder proceeded on a course parallel with the Des Moines River, probably traveled all that day and the greater part of the next night. Their bones were found eleven years afterwards, on an open prairie in Palo Alto County. They were given a funeral at Fort Dodge, conducted, in part, by Major Williams; those of Captain Johnson were taken in charge by Angus McBane, who sent them to Pennsylvania, to his mother, for burial at the old home. John C. Johnson was born in Westmoreland County, Pa., southeast of and near the city of Pittsburgh, which county was also the birthplace of Major Williams. The date of his birth has not been ascertained, but he is spoken of as a young man and unmarried. He removed first to Illinois, and subsequently to Hamilton County, Iowa, near Webster City, where he had not lived long enough to form many acquaintances, but where his gentlemanly manners and generous, frank disposition won such esteem and confidence that he was unanimously elected by his comrades as Captain of the Company. "He was a man of fine physique, was deliberate, quiet almost to reticence, with a handsome face and manly eye." (Carpenter.) (Gleaned from the printed addresses and papers collected by Charles Aldrich, before cited.)

John N. Maxwell. Residence Webster City, Iowa. Enrolled March 23, 1857, and chosen First Lieutenant of Company C. On March 31st was one of ten scouts, or advance guard, which first met the Springfield refugees. Volunteered at Grangers's Point April 2d, as one of the burial detachment to go to the Lakes. During the terrible night of April 4th, spent on the open prairie on their return, his endurance and watchful care doubtless saved his entire party from freezing to death. Lieutenant Maxwell was born near Paris, Ill., April 20, 1835. He removed to Iowa in 1854, settling, three years later, on his farm a few miles southeast of Webster City, where he still resides (in 1910). He enlisted August 11, 1862, in Company A, Thirty-second Iowa Infantry, and served the full term of three years, attaining the rank of First Sergeant of the Company.

Frank R. Mason. Residence Webster City, Iowa. Enrolled March 23, 1857, and was chosen Second Lieutenant of Company C. Was one of the ten scouts, or advance guards, who, on March 31st, met the Springfield refugees. Captain Johnson and Lieutenant Maxwell, having gone with the burial detachment, he took command of Company C, on the homeward trip, and has told a graphic story of its perils in his paper prepared for the "Tablet Day" exercises. Lieutenant Mason was born in Cammington, Hampshire County, Mass., March 27, 1836. He removed to Webster City (then Newcastle), Iowa, in November, 1855.

Harrison Hoover. (Called also Harris and Harry.) Residence Webster City, Iowa. Enrolled March 23, 1857, and appointed Sergeant of Company C. During the terrible night of April 4th he, with a companion, crossed Cylinder Creek, by proceeding up stream about a mile, where a passable bridge of snow drifts was made use of, and they assisted Captains Richards and Duncombe the next day in efforts to help the main body.

He wrote the first account of the Expedition, it being published in the Hamilton Freeman (Charles Aldrich's paper), Aug. 20, 1857. Mr. Hoover was a Pennsylvanian by birth, and returned to his native state in later years, being a resident of Pittsburg in 1887, at the time of the "Tablet Day" exercises. He served four years in the army during the Civil War, but the regiment has not been ascertained. No biographical data obtained.

A. Newton Hathaway. Residence Webster City, Iowa. Enrolled March 23, 1857, and was appointed Corporal of Company C. Was one of the ten scouts, or advance guard, who met the Springfield refugees on March 31st. He became delirious from the suffering of the night of April 4th and the succeeding cold days, and had to be left with Mr. Collins, on the East Fork of the Des Moines, in Humboldt County, for several days to recuperate. Mr. Hathaway was born in Windsor, Mass., in 1834. He removed to Webster City in 1855 or 1856. He visited his native state in the winter of 1860-61 and, while there, enlisted in Company I, Fifteenth Massachusetts Infantry, to serve for three years. He was in many severe battles in the Army of the Potomac, and gave his life for his country,—being killed at the battle of Gettysburg.

Thomas Anderson. Residence Hamilton County, Iowa. Enrolled at Webster City, March 23, 1857, as private in Company C. No biographical sketch obtained.

William L. Church. Residence Springfield, Jackson County, Minn. Had visited Webster City for supplies, and, reaching McKnight's Point, Humboldt County, on his return, had heard of the presence of hostile Indians at the Lakes, and at his home, and of a Relief Expedition being formed. He awaited there the arrival of the Expedition and, on March 27, 1857, enrolled himself as private in Company C. On March 31st, he was placed in charge of an advance guard of ten men, which met a party, at first supposed to be Indians, but which proved to be refugees from Springfield, among whom were the wife and two small children of Mr. Church. He accompanied the fugitives on their journey towards civilization, spent the days of the blizzard at the Irish Colony, and arrived in due time at Webster City, where he afterwards made his home. William L. Church was born in Ohio, in 1827. He enlisted in an Ohio regiment, in the Mexican War, and, among other service, took part in an attack upon one of the fortifications at Churubusco. He removed to Webster County, Iowa, in 1855, but, the following year, settled at Springfield, Minn. After the Indian raid he returned to the vicinity of Webster City. In the spring of 1858, he joined a company organized for the defense of the northwestern frontier, under Captain H. B. Martin, of Webster City, and was elected its First Lieutenant. The company was discharged in the spring of 1859. Aug. 1, 1861, he enlisted in Company F, Second Iowa Cavalry, and was commissioned First Lieutenant of the company Sept. 9, 1861. He resigned Nov. 23, 1861. In 1887 he removed to Port Angeles, Washington, where he died several years ago. (Charles Aldrich, Annals of Iowa, Third Series, Vol. III, p. 546; Col. G. W. Said to have been a young boy. No biographical sketch obtained.

John Erie. Residence in Hamilton County, Iowa. Enrolled at Webster City March 23, 1857, as private in Company C. No biographical sketch obtained.

Emery W. Gates. Residence in Hamilton County, Iowa. Enrolled in Webster City March 23, 1857, as private in Company C. Acted as Cook for the detachment. The story was told of him that he could throw a griddle cake out of a hole in the roof of the cabin, run out and catch it the other side up on the griddle. He gave out on the return trip and, with Corporal Hathaway, was left at Collins, in Humboldt County, to recuperate. No biographical sketch obtained.

John Gates. Residence in Hamilton County, Iowa. Enrolled at Webster City March 23, 1857, as private in Company C. Mentioned by Frank R. Mason as a "tower of strength and manliness," who came to the aid to Hathaway when delirious and refusing to move. No biographical sketch obtained.

He enlisted Aug. 9, 1861, from Kossuth County, as First Corporal in Company F, Second Iowa Cavalry, and served until Jan. 27, 1862. At the time of the Tablet Day celebration he was temporarily residing in Colorado, and had acquired a handsome fortune. He had filled the offices of treasurer and sheriff of Hamilton County, Iowa. He died suddenly, in Fremont township, two miles from Webster City, May 12, 1888. (Charles Aldrich, Annals of Iowa, Third Series, Vol. III, p. 537.)

A. K. Tullis. Residence in Hamilton County, Iowa. Enrolled at Webster City March 23, 1857, as private in Company C. No biographical sketch obtained.

Sergeant Hoover, in his list, published Aug. 20, 1857, four months after the event, includes, as members of Company C, the uninjured men of the Springfield refugees, John Bradshaw and Morris Markham. They are not thus recognized, however, on the roster inscribed on the Spirit Lake Monument.

The roster, printed on p. 71, of Vol. II, Annals of Iowa, Third Series, contains, as a member of Company C, the name of a man afterwards conspicuous in Iowa military and official life, but the name does not appear on the monument, nor on Hoover's list, and R. A. Smith assures the writer that he was not a member of the Expedition.

CAPTAIN H. B. MARTIN'S COMPANY FOR THE DEFENSE OF THE NORTHWESTERN FRONTIER

The terrible events of March, 1857, naturally created feelings of great apprehension among the settlers who gathered around the vicinity of the Dickinson County Lakes during the ensuing summer. Some of the earliest comers laid out a town on the present site of the city of Spirit Lake, and, among the first buildings erected, was one they called the "Fort," and it became, for the two years during which it stood, one of the landmarks of the locality. It was a log building, about twenty-four by thirty feet, built before any sawed lumber could be procured, having a "shake" roof and puncheon floor and doors. Around the outside of the building, at a distance of from six to ten feet, a stockade was erected formed of logs ten feet long and eight inches in diameter set on end in a trench from two and a half to three feet deep.³⁸

Numerous alarms as to danger from hostile Indians came to the little bands of settlers at various times in the fall of 1857, and, later in the winter, a party near Peterson, in Clay County, had a brush with a small band of Indians, in which one or two were slightly wounded. Jareb Palmer, of Spirit Lake, who will be remembered as one of the defenders of Springfield, in March, and who was then mail-carrier to Sioux City, was one of the party. R. A. Smith, in the History of Dickinson County, says:

"This affair created considerable alarm, and it was decided to apply to the State for protection. A meeting was called at the 'old fort' to consider the situation, and a committee appointed to draw up a petition and present the matter to the State authorities. The legislature was in session. A statement of the affair and a petition to the legislature, asking immediate assistance, was drawn up. Mr. Jareb Palmer was selected to take the petition to Des Moines and lay it before the authorities.

"C. C. Carpenter represented the district. He took hold of the matter in earnest, and, in the shortest time possible, a bill was passed providing for the raising of a company of volunteers for the defense of the northwestern frontier. The company was raised principally in Hamilton and Webster Counties, though not entirely. Upon arriving at the Lakes the Captain was authorized to enlist ten additional men from the settlers here. The names of these additional enlistments were as follows: A. Kingman, J. Palmer, E. Palmer, W. Donnelson, J. D. Hawkins, George W. Rogers, Charles Clark, William Carsley, William Allen, and one other, whose name is unknown. It was organized by the election of Henry B. Martin, of Webster City, Captain; William L. Church, of Homer, First Lieutenant; and a Mr. Jewett, of Border Plains, Second Lieutenant. It was the wife of Lieutenant Church who acted so heroic a part in the defense of the cabin of Mr. Thomas, at Springfield, against the attack of the Indians the spring before.

"This company arrived upon the frontier about the last of February or first of March, and was divided into three squads; Captain Martin, with the main squad, making his headquarters at the old fort at Spirit Lake; Lieutenant Church, with one squad, at Peterson, and Lieutenant Jewett, with the remaining one, at Emmett. This force was kept on duty until about the first of July, when they were ordered off but not disbanded. In the fall of 1858, upon the earnest representations of a large majority of the inhabitants, they were again ordered into service and kept on duty along the frontier until the following spring, when they were discharged. This was the last of any military operations until the breaking out of the war, in 1861."

This company was regularly authorized by law, and that law required the Captain to file with the Governor a roster, and to report every two months. It was hoped, therefore, that the roster might be found in the official files at Des Moines, and be given a place in this volume. Thorough search has been made by Record Clerk Thomas L. Stephens, not only among the files in the Adjutant General's office, but also among the Executive documents in the Hall of Archives, and neither its existence, nor that of any reports, has been disclosed; hence an interesting item in Iowa's early military history must be relegated to oblivion, and the recognition due to a body of brave and patriotic citizens must be withheld, except so far as R. A. Smith has preserved their names for us.

Since the above was in type, Mr. Cassius C. Stiles, Superintendent of the Department of Public Archives, has furnished the Adjutant General's Department with important documents, viz.: two original pay rolls of Captain H. B. Martin's Company for the defense of the Northwestern frontier, designated on the rolls as the "Iowa Frontier Guard." These papers came to the Archives Department with other documents turned over by the State Auditor's Office, but which had not been classified at the time search was made for rosters, reports, etc., as before stated. These rolls, while not giving all the information desired, are greatly appreciated, as furnishing an authentic roster of a company whose names Mr. Reid so unavailingly sought to obtain. The list, which is taken from the first bi-monthly pay roll (verified by signatures), dated Jan. 23, 1859, signed by Henry B. Martin, Captain, and certified to by Charles B. Richards, Commissary General, follows:

RESCUE COMPANIES OFFERED

As the news of the dire events in Dickinson County spread through the State, attempts were made at several places to organize military companies to go at once and lend aid towards punishing the recreant Indians and rescuing the captives. No records of these inchoate organizations have been preserved so far as known to the writer, but tradition supplies us with a few details of one that had a short existence at LaMotte, in the northern part of Jackson County. That was the former home of Elizabeth Blake, who there married J. Milton Thatcher, and she was one of those who endured the horrible fate of captivity among the inhuman savages. Her uncle, John Hodges, a farmer living near the little village of LaMotte, called for volunteers of mounted men as soon as the dread facts became known, and about twenty enrolled their names and met several times for drill before it was learned that the Governor had no power to raise and equip a military force. Hodges was duly recognized as Captain of the little company, and Brooks Weatherby, who had seen service in the Regular Army, conducted the drills. Weatherby rejoined the Regulars during the Civil War, and since, and is said to have been in the First Infantry only a few years ago. David Rhea, a native of Tennessee, who had recently married a sister of Mrs. Thatcher, bought a young black horse to use on the Expedition. He became a member of Company I, Twenty-fourth Iowa Infantry, in the Civil War, and still lives in Jackson County. Most of our knowledge of the company comes from him. Martin V. Smith, of Bellevue, afterwards a soldier in the Fifth Iowa Infantry, is another living witness, who confirms the story we are telling. Among the names given as having enrolled in this little band of volunteers, are: Henry and Frank Nobles, Alex and Henry McDole, Brad Canfield, and George Bird of LaMotte; George and William Foster and Pat Nestor of Zwingle; William Cheeney and "Manny" Kimball of Perry Township, and William H. Smith (afterwards in the Fifth Iowa Infantry) of Bellevue. Joseph B. Dorr, afterwards Quartermaster of the Twelfth Iowa Infantry, and Colonel of the Eighth Cavalry, who was the editor of the Dubuque Herald, but owned a farm near LaMotte, gave much encouragement and advice in the raising of the little company.

[In explanation of the spelling of proper names—used in the Historical Sketches of "Iowa in the Mexican War" and "The Spirit Lake Massacre"—which, in some instances, differs from published works on these subjects, would state that we have followed the copy, as furnished by Mr. Reid, in almost every instance.]
